True faith in Christ...

Leads to work for justice, equality, pope says

VATICAN CITY (CNS) -- True faith and friendship with Christ leads people to see the equality of all men and women and to work for justice and the common good, Pope Benedict XVI said.

At the end of his weekly general audience Oct. 20, Pope Benedict announced the names of the new cardinals he will create in November, but first he gave a talk about St. Elizabeth of Hungary.

Talking about St. Elizabeth - a princess who lived in the early part of the 13th century and frequently scandalized her family and the royal court by personally caring for the poor and sick and by prostrating herself in prayer - the pope was continuing a series of audience talks about important female saints of the Middle Ages.

"we see how faith and friendship with Christ create a sense of justice, of the equality of everyone, of the rights of others and creates the love and charity from which is born the hope and the certainty that we are loved by Christ," Pope Benedict said.

Support for Catholic education

In his homily at the annual Superintendent’s Day, held Oct. 1 in Lake Placid, Bishop Terry R. LaValley told teachers from Catholic schools across the diocese about the importance of Catholic schools.

"If there ever was a time when we need our Catholic schools, it is today," the bishop said.

The program continued after the liturgy with a keynote address on legal issues facing schools, delivered by Dr. Sarah Wannemuehler of North Carolina.

LETTER FROM THE EDITOR

Figuring it out!

In the “Tale of Two Offices” for the staff of the North Country Catholic, it has definitely been the best of times and the worst of times over the past couple of weeks.

The good news:
• Mary Lou and Christine are comfortably settled in two spacious offices on the second floor of the Chancery, between our friends in the Mission Office and in the coffee break room!
• Our colleagues’ efforts to make us feel at home have been more than successful.
• Working in close proximity to people who make so much of the Catholic news in the North Country has had a very positive effect on our work.

The not-so-good news:
• The transition in the way we actually produce the pages of the NCC has not proceeded as smoothly as we had hoped. The technical glitches - while certainly expected - have created a high level of frustration/anxiety in the non-technical brain of the editor.
• Oh, to be 20 again in times like this.... But, bit by bit, we're figuring it out, with patient support from co-workers who really do have 20-year old brains.

And... since you're reading this, we were actually successful in “paginating” this paper from my personal computer in the middle of a very messy office.

We hope for a bit of patience from all of you since my trial and error system could certainly have resulted in more than one error!

But, as my computer-savvy sidekick, Christine keeps telling me: “we'll figure it out.”

Yes, we'll definitely figure it out in time to salute our priests - just a couple weeks after Priesthood Sunday - in our Nov. 10 issue of the paper.

(Take this opportunity to thank your favorite father by filling out the coupon on this page and sending it back to us.)

And, we'll figure it out in time to begin a prayerful observance of all the important days creeping up on us - Thanksgiving, Advent and Christmas.

I don’t know about you but I'm really looking forward to sharing these seasons with our brand new bishop. Readers of the North Country Catholic have the “best seats in the house” to hear the words of wisdom from our beloved Bishop LaValley.

And we promise to keep on “figuring it out” so those words arrive in your mailbox without ever missing a syllable!
Our Catholic Schools

By Bishop Terry R. LaValley
Homily at Catholic School Superintendent’s Day

From the beginning, Jake was saving big bucks - were that he fed to Homer, his mule. So, he began gradually to feed Homer sawdust for his diet.

If there was ever a time in our society when we need our Catholic schools it is today!

Day by day, Homer was fed less oats and more and more sawdust until, finally, it was all sawdust. Everything went fine - for a while. Jake was saving big bucks but by the time the mule became satisfied with sawdust, he died of malnutrition.

Our constant temptation is to change our spiritual diet from the ways of God to the ways of society. Often, the changeover is a slow process. And, if we're not careful, we may get to the point where we don't recognize the difference. We become satisfied and comfortable with what society feeds us. When this happens, we become spiritually starved, malnourished, and are in real danger of becoming spiritually dead.

I mention this story this morning at this Superintendent’s Day event, to point out that our Catholic schools provide a healthy diet of the ways of God in the lives of our young people. You are very much aware that our Catholic schools are places where the sacred is integrated with the secular and neither is denigrated in the process. As Catholic school educators, you serve a healthy diet to our children, a diet that produces well-rounded young girls and boys. The special character of the Catholic school and its underlying reason for existence, the reason why parents should prefer it, is precisely the quality of the religious instruction and formation that is integrated into the overall education of the students.

This integration is crucial. A Catholic school does not insulate or isolate religion and faith from the real world, so that the only time we consider the God question is, perhaps, an hour on Sunday.

This integration and formation enables Catholic Schools to build one nation under God, as today’s theme indicates. You model and teach our youngsters how to be good citizens.

You instruct our students about what it means to be persons of integrity and faith. Values, morals, conscience, right and wrong, God, respect for life, forgiveness, mercy, Jesus Christ - these are not forbidden words or foreign concepts in our Catholic school vocabulary. Within a Christ-centered environment and in partnership with families, the local parish and the community, our schools prepare young women and men to responsibly take their place in the public square, giving flesh to the faith they profess and to the lessons they learn. The Catholic school environment nurtures those of all faiths to be caring and responsible lifelong learners whose hearts of service have a global perspective.

Our Catholic schools exist as a profound and effective arm of the pastoral mission of the Church - bringing God to all people and all people, especially the young, to God.

The school is and must always be a family, a partnership that respects the parent’s crucial role in the education of their children. They cannot leave their children’s minds to the teachers for a few hours a day the way they might leave their carburator off to a mechanic.

In their document, Declaration on Catholic Education, the Vatican Council Fathers explained the aims of Catholic education: That as the baptized person is gradually introduced into the knowledge of the mystery of salvation, he or she may daily grow more conscious of the gift of faith they have received; that they may learn to adore God the Father in spirit and truth and grow accustomed to giving witness to the hope that is in them, and to promote the Christian transformation of the world.

In the setting of the Catholic school there is a gradual personal formation and integration that unites each person more closely with God, which in turn affects not only personal behavior but flows into a credible witness to the grace of God within, which witness will touch people and change them and eventually result in the transformation of our society and our world.

Yes, Catholic schools can build one nation after another, under God.

It is the integration of faith into the whole learning process that is the key contribution of the Catholic school, a contribution that neither public nor charter schools can offer.

As he was reflecting on the current state of our Catholic schools, one bishop observed, “Make no mistake about it, there has definitely been a dying connected with our Catholic schools over the past thirty years, a dying that has taken its toll on pastors and principals but especially on teachers.” But, can not this dying lead to a resurrection? I am convinced that this is the case.

I ask you who are Catholic teachers, principals, parents to look into your hearts to find the hope that is still within, to find there the conviction that the resurrection will come.

Recently in a pastoral letter, Archbishop Dolan of New York spoke of the mentality of some that considered our Catholic schools as being on hospice care. “Many think that the good old days of Catholic schools are over. They have served us well, but, sadly, their day is over, and twilight is here. So, the best we can do is make their passing comfortable, and hold their hand while they slowly pass into grateful memory.”

Archbishop Dolan’s response to that sentiment is the same as mine:

MALARKY!

If there was ever a time in our society when we need our Catholic schools it is today! We need well-educated faith-filled Catholics who are unafraid to give witness to our faith in the marketplace. Faith without its application in daily living is dead faith—faith masquerading, a fraud.

We need leaders, laity and youth with nerve, the same nerve that motivated the construction of Catholic schools over a hundred years ago, nerve—the virtue of courage. Sometimes I think we must stop with the attitude of throwing in the towel, but instead throw down the gauntlet.

Annual Harvest Mass to be held in Peru

By Msgr. John R. Murphy
Moderator of the Curia

PERU - Bishop Terry R. LaValley will celebrate the annual Diocesan Harvest Mass of Thanksgiving Nov. 7 at 1 p.m.

This will mark the first time Bishop LaValley has offered this Mass as Bishop of Ogdensburg. Farmers and all who do related work are invited and strongly encouraged to take part.

Farming in the North Country is quite diverse and includes people who have dairy herds, those who raise beef cattle, those who raise other animals such as sheep and goats, vegetable farmers, fruit growers, and maple sugar producers among others. The Harvest Mass of Thanksgiving has been held each fall in the Diocese of Ogdensburg since November 2001.

In November 2009, the Mass was offered at St. Cecilia’s Church in Adams and the previous year at Notre Dame Church in Malone.

The location varies year to year so that over the course of time, the Mass can be offered in many different parts of the North Country.

Father Alan Sh Nob, the pastor of St. Augustine’s Church in Peru, will be extending a written invitation to farmers and all who work in related fields to participate in the upcoming Mass.

Bishop LaValley is particularly enthusiastic about the upcoming event. He played an active part in developing plans for the first Harvest Mass which was offered at Notre Dame Parish in Malone on Nov. 4, 2001.

The celebration of the annual Harvest Mass of Thanksgiving was a pastoral priority of Bishop Gerald M. Barbarito. It carried forward a renewed interest in the lives and needs of farmers developed within the Church in the North Country when Bishop Paul S. Loverde led the Diocesan Pastoral Council in a study of agriculture in the North Country in the late 1990s.

It is anticipated that local and area farmers will take liturgical roles in the upcoming liturgy at Peru.

Farmers from throughout the diocese are encouraged to take part.

A reception will follow at the parish.

Parish plans Family Forum

CARTHAGE - Parishioners of St. James, St. Mary’s in Copenhagen and families associated with Carthage Augustinian Academy are taking part in a Spiritual Retreat/Mission Experience this week under the direction of Franciscan Father Francis Pompei of Buffalo.

In addition, the faithful and their guests have been invited to a Family Forum to be held Saturday beginning at 9:30 a.m. at Augustinian Academy Gymnasium.

Bishop Terry LaValley will present the keynote address at the forum. Other presentations will be delivered by Father Pompei and Deacon Gary and Gayle Frank, directors of the diocesan Family Life Office.

Father George Maroun, pastor in Carthage and Copenhagen, explained the purpose of the Forum:

“As your pastor, I see so many families who are hurting because of the stress, worry, fear, and unhappiness associated with strained relationships, separations, divorces, violence, emptiness and loneliness,” he said. “Much of this is the result of the secular culture of death in which we live. It affects each of our families and in turn naturally affects our parish and school families.

“We, as members of God’s family can do something about all of this,” he said. “We need not be victims of such evil. With God’s help and the support of one another, we can transform this evil into something good and provide a culture of life for our children and the next generation of families to come.

“Make God a priority in your family and you will reap a harvest of blessings for yourselves and for our faith communities,” Father Maroun said.

Registration and refreshments will be available at 9 a.m. Admission is free and includes lunch at noon and a spaghetti supper for all participants after the 4 p.m. Mass.

Further information is available from the Rectory Office at 493-3224.

More and more today, we have allowed our faith to gradually be forced to the edges of society, into a corner that doesn’t intrude, bother or impact anyone. Like Jake, because we think it too costly, either financially or personally, to witness our faith, to support our Catholic schools, we are gradually, as a nation, dying from spiritual malnutrition.

We want to be politically correct and, in the process, be so morally wrong!

Not so, I say...not so for this one nation under God!

We must be creative in our proclamation of the faith and of our support of Catholic schools.

We must not become a people who lose hope, a people with no vision. Rather, what do the economists tell us that we need most when things look the bleakest—invest your assets. So, we, too, must invest our time, talent and treasure today into building up a culture of hope for Catholic education in our nation, starting right here in the Diocese of Ogdensburg.

It will mean sacrifice. It will mean creative thinking outside the box, going beyond what worked in yesteryear. But, with the power of prayer and faith-filled determination, we can redouble our efforts to ensure that the fruits of those who have been educated and formed by Catholic schools will continue to bless this nation.

Participating in the Partners in Mission workshops and our attendance at events such as this today, are significant indications that the Church of Ogdensburg will never tire of searching for new ways to support our Catholic schools. Your participation is vital.

I want to express, on behalf of the entire Church of Ogdensburg, my deepest gratitude to all of you who work in our Catholic schools. I am very much aware of your tireless energy, constant commitment and real sacrifice. May God bless you all for your hope-filled ministry of love!

Support for Catholic school parents

The Diocese of Ogdensburg has 13 elementary schools and two Junior/Senior High Schools. They are invaluable instruments for the proclamation of the Gospel and the integration of the Gospel message within the local area. The Tuition Assistance Program is one example of money "returning" to the local area.

This year approximately $59,000 will be available for tuition assistance in the Jefferson Deanery (Augustinian Academy, Carthage: Immaculate Heart Central Elementary and Junior/Senior High Schools, Watertown); approximately $46,000 in the Franklin/Clinton Deanery (Holy Name, AuSable Forks; St. Mary’s Academy, Champlain; Holy Family, Malone; Seton Academy and Seton Catholic Central, Plattsburgh); approximately $51,000 in the Saint Lawrence Deanery (St. Mary’s, Canton; St. James, Gouverneur; Trinity Catholic, Massena and St. Marquerite D’Youville, Ogdensburg); approximately $26,000 in the Adirondack/Essay Deaneers (St. Agnes, Lake Placid; St. Bernard’s, Saranac Lake and St. Mary’s, Ticonderoga).

In Renewing our Commitment to Catholic Elementary & Secondary Schools in the Third Millennium, the United States Bishops state, “Young people are a valued treasure and the future leaders of our Church. It is the responsibility of the entire Catholic community – bishops, priests, deacons, religious, and laity – to continue to strive towards the goal of making our Catholic elementary and secondary schools available, accessible, and affordable to all Catholic parents and their children.”

Contributions to the Bishop’s Fund are one way that the “entire Catholic community” of the Diocese can help to make a Catholic education available and affordable to the parents who have access to a Catholic school for their children.

When you help children to receive a Catholic school education through the Tuition Assistance Program of the Bishop’s Fund you are helping them to receive an education that will address the whole person.

Not only will they have the opportunity to be a part of a school community which will give them the necessary skills for their growth, but they will also be members of a faith community, where the words and deeds of Jesus, Gospel values, and our Catholic heritage are present and active. In collaboration with parents and guardians, our schools “equip our young people with a sound education, rooted in the Gospel message, the Person of Jesus Christ, and rich in the cherished traditions and liturgical practices of our faith” (Renewing our Commitment to Schools). What a wonderful investment in the lives of our children and the future of the Church!

On behalf of the parents and children who receive financial assistance through your generosity, I take this opportunity to express my appreciation for your contribution to this year’s Bishop’s Fund. By sharing your blessings with the Bishop’s Fund appeal you assist parents who choose a Catholic school for their children.

Pope names 24 new cardinals, including two from United States

VATICAN CITY (CNS) -- Pope Benedict XVI named 24 new cardinals, including two from the United States: Archbishop Raymond L. Burke, head of the Vatican's highest tribunal, and Archbishop Donald W. Wuerl of Washington.

The pope announced the names at the end of his weekly general audience Oct. 20 and said he would formally install the cardinals during a special consistory at the Vatican Nov. 20.

"The universality of the church is reflected in the list of new cardinals. In fact, they come from various parts of the world and fulfill different tasks in the service of the Holy See or in direct contact with the people of God as fathers and pastors of particular churches," the pope said.

The new cardinals come from 13 countries on five continents, and their number included 10 Italians. The pope named 10 Roman Curia officials -- a higher number than expected -- along with 10 residential archbishops and four prelates over the age of 80.

One unusual aspect of the pope's list was that two of the residential archbishops were retired. The November ceremony will mark the third time Pope Benedict has created cardinals since his election in April 2005.

After the consistory, he will have appointed about 40 percent of the cardinals currently under the age of 80 and therefore eligible to vote in a conclave to elect a new pope.

The elevation of Cardinals-designate Burke and Wuerl will bring the number of U.S. cardinals to 18. Of that number, 13 are voting-age -- matching a historically high number for the United States.

Cardinal-designate Wuerl, 69, is known nationally for teaching the faith and for his efforts on behalf of Catholic education.

In November 2006, about six months after his installation as archbishop of Washington, he told an audience of 2,000 catechists that teaching and living the faith is a lifetime endeavor.

"There is a longing of the human heart, a yearning for communion with God," he said.

"This truly is an honor for the Archdiocese of Washington, the church in the nation's capital, and for all of the clergy, religious and parishioners of this local church who every day live out their faith in commitment and deep love for Christ," Cardinal-designate Wuerl, who also served as a bishop in Pittsburgh and Seattle, said in a statement released that morning.

"I am humbled by our Holy Father Pope Benedict XVI's trust in me as shepherd of this flock and pledge to him my renewed fidelity, affection and loyalty."

Cardinal-designate Burke, 62, was named in 2008 to head the Vatican's highest tribunal, he came to the post with the reputation of being one of the most outspoken U.S. bishops on moral and political issues.

Some pundits wondered whether the appointment to the Supreme Court of the Apostolic Signature would in effect sideline someone so vocal, but since taking the Vatican post, he has been anything but silent. He has insisted that holy communion be refused to Catholic politicians who actively support legal abortion, said the Democratic Party in the United States "risks transforming itself definitively into a 'party of death,'" and said nothing could justify casting a ballot for a candidate who supports "anti-life" and "anti-family" legislation.

During the 2004 U.S. elections, he was one of the first U.S. bishops to say publicly that he would withhold communion from Catholic politicians with voting records that contradicted church teaching on abortion, euthanasia and other fundamental moral issues.

Afterward he told Catholic News Service he was convinced of the need to raise pro-life issues with voters and to continue to promote "awareness of the moral law."

Unity among Catholics in Holy Land essential, synod members say

VATICAN CITY (CNS) -- Division among the different Catholic churches in Jerusalem is a serious problem that must be overcome if the survival of Christianity there, three church leaders from Jerusalem said. Two bishops and a Jesuit priest, participants in the Synod of Bishops for the Middle East, said they believed that two weeks of talks at the Vatican have helped establish a better spirit of dialogue, which will continue. The special problems facing Catholics in city that is holy for Christians, Jews and Muslims were discussed at a press briefing Oct. 22 by Latin-rite Auxiliary Bishop William H. Shomali of Jerusalem; Auxiliary Bishop Salim Sayegh of Jerusalem, patriarchal vicar for Latin-rite Catholics in Jordan; and Jesuit Father David Neuhaus, vicar for Hebrew- and Russian-speaking Catholics for the Latin Patriarchate of Jerusalem. Father Neuhaus said the divisions were principally among the leaders of the different churches, including the Latin patriarchate and the smaller Eastern Catholic communities: the Melkite, Maronite, Chaldean, Syrian, Armenian and Coptic churches.

"When you look at the bishops, you see the divisions, but the more you get to the grass roots, the more those divisions disappear," he said. "When you walk through the streets of Jerusalem, Bethlehem (West Bank) or Nazareth, and you ask which group they belong to, the answer from Christians is 'I am a Christian,' not 'I am Roman Catholic or Greek Catholic or Maronite.'"
VATICAN CITY (CNS) - Pope Benedict XVI proclaimed six new saints, including an Australian nun and a Canadian brother, calling them “shining examples” of holiness and the power of prayer.

Thousands of pilgrims from Australia applauded and waved their national flags after the pope pronounced the formula of canonization Oct. 17 in St. Peter’s Square for Blessed Mother Mary MacKillop, who educated poor children in the Australian outback in the late 19th century. She became the country’s first saint.

In his homily, Pope Benedict said St. MacKillop, 1842-1909, was a model of “zeal, perseverance and prayer” as she dedicated herself to the education of the poor in the difficult territory of rural Australia, inspiring other women to join her in the country’s first community of religious women.

“She attended to the needs of each young person entrusted to her, without regard for station or wealth, providing both intellectual and spiritual formation,” he said. Her feast day is celebrated Aug. 8.

Canadians cheered the canonization of Blessed Andre Bessette, 1845-1937, a doorman known for his devotional practices and his healing touch. He became known as the “Miracle Man of Montreal.”

The pope said St. Bessette “showed boundless charity and did everything to soothe the despair of those who confided in him.” Although he had little instruction, he “understood what was essential to the faith” and had an intense prayer life, the pope said.

“For him, everything spoke of God and his presence,” the pope said. Thanks to this simplicity, St. Bessette led many people to God, he added.

St. Bessette “lived the beatitude of the pure of heart,” the pope said. "May the example of Brother Andre inspire Canadian Christian life!"

Relics of the six saints were brought to the altar during the two-hour liturgy. Tapestries portraits of the newly canonized hung from the façade of St. Peter’s Basilica behind the papal altar, and many pilgrims carried their own personal pictures of the saints.

The others canonized were:

-- St. Camilla Battista Varano, 1458-1524, the illegitimate daughter of an Italian nobleman, had to overcome her father’s initial objections to enter the convent of the Poor Clares. Known for her mystical experiences during prayer, she died in an outbreak of the plague.

-- St. Stanislaw Soltys, 1433-1489, who devoted his life to caring for the poor in his native Krakow, Poland. Famed as a preacher and confessor, he was known as the “Apostle of the Eucharist” for his taking Communion to the sick and lonely.

-- St. Giulia Salzano, 1846-1929, taught catechism to schoolchildren near Naples, Italy, and later founded the Catechetical Sisters of the Sacred Heart of Jesus to continue her work, which offered religious education to children of all ages, to their mothers and to regular laborers.

-- St. Juana Cipitria Barriola, 1845-1912, was a champion of education for girls and young women in her native Spain. Known in some countries as Mother Candida Maria de Jesus, she founded the Daughters of Jesus with five other young women. She ran a special school on Sundays for girls who were employed as domestics, because Sunday was their only day off.

In his homily, the pope said the new saints exemplified the effectiveness of prayer as an expression of faith.
Revealing the inner thoughts of our Creator

Just a hundred years before Jesus was born, a very wise Jewish writer in Alexandria in Egypt was inspired by God to reveal to the world some of our Creator’s inner thoughts.

Some passages from this “Book of Wisdom” were chosen for today’s first reading. Here we read that God doesn’t “hate” anything that He made. He loves even the “spoil-siers,” the sinners, those who never acknowledge Him.

His love extends even to these! God gently rebukes them, and waits patiently for them to repent. What incredible mercy!

Today’s Gospel from St. Luke narrates an incident in the life of Jesus that shows how our God reached out to save one such unlikely sinner. One day Jesus was passing through Jericho on his way to Jerusalem.

He didn’t really intend to stay long, but something unexpected happened to change His plans.

The very wealthy chief tax collector in town, despised by all pious Jews, was curious about this famous preacher passing through. His desire was very great, but his stature was very short. In order to see over the crowd, he climbed a tree for a good view.

Jesus looked up and saw the little man. He called up, “Zacchaeus, come down quickly. For today I must stay at your house.”

The Gospel tells us that Zacchaeus scrambled down. He stood there among the amazement and disgust of the crowd. Unphased, he re-readmitted his past life and declared his intentions to make retribution for past dishonesty.

Now put yourself in Zacchaeus’ place. Suppose you received a personal invitation from Jesus to stay at your house! You’d be overwhelmed with excitement, and thrilled beyond belief, ready to promise Jesus anything he might ask of you. Your life would never be the same!

You would go anywhere, do anything, and stop doing anything that displeased the Lord. And all because Jesus had signaled you out and invited Himself to stay with you. After all, who can resist the power and mercy of Christ’s love?

This Sunday happens to fall this year on Halloween, the vigil of All Saints’ Day. Perhaps after meditating on this Gospel, we will be more convinced that Jesus is calling us to join them!

Deepest gratitude

From the Director's Desk:
Sister Mary Ellen Brett, SSJ, Diocesan Mission Director

I want to extend my deepest gratitude for World Mission Sunday support.

I take this opportunity to especially thank all of the faithful of the Diocese of Ogdensburg for their spiritual and financial support on World Mission Sunday last week.

This support is a blessing for missions throughout the world that depend on the Society for the Propagation of the Faith for assistance.

We have witnessed natural disasters and the devastation it causes people in developing countries.

Through your generosity many people will know of Christ's love, in Asia, Africa, the Pacific Islands and the remote regions of Latin America.

Our prayer for you from the mission office is that of St. Paul to the Thessalonians, "We give thanks to God always for you, constantly mentioning you in prayer."

This year we celebrate the 188th anniversary of the founding of the Society for the Propagation of the Faith by Pauline Jaricot, a young French lay woman, who responded in an extraordinary way to the call for all of us to be Jesus' witnesses to the ends of the earth.

By virtue of our baptism, we too are called to respond to the call to be missionaries through prayer and sacrifice.

If you have given to the Mission Sunday collection in your parish, I say again, "thank you."

If you have yet to give, I once again ask you to be as generous as you can.

Thank you and please continue to pray for missionaries throughout the world.

We are in their prayers! I am very appreciatively yours in Christ.

A parish of deep faith is celebrated

By Shan Moore

CHAMPLAIN - Father Francis Van Comenhondt was so dynamic a speaker that even Protestants in Champlain were moved to contribute to a Catholic church there.

Had he promised a devoted faith community that would grow throughout the years, he would have hit the mark. Oct. 17, St. Mary’s Parish celebrated 150 years with a Mass and dinner that reunited old friends and new, clergy, nuns and laity.

“It was nice coming back today,” said Sister Theresa Fournier, Daughters of the Charity of the Sacred Heart of Jesus. “It was like coming home.”

Bishop Terry LaValley graced the event, praising the deep faith of the parish that he saw evident in the celebration but also the long-standing St. Mary’s Mission Center that aids the poor and in St. Mary’s Academy, where Sister Theresa served for six years in the 1990s in the first computer lab there and as library assistant.

“What a tremendous gift you have here,” he told the congregation during the Mass. “Your relentless support and sacrifice for the school reaps heavenly rewards.”

The Daughters of the Charity of the Sacred Heart of Jesus took charge of St. Mary’s Academy in 1906 at the request of then pastor Father Francis Xavier Chagnon.

St. Mary’s Parish in Champlain observes 150th anniversary

Today, the school is staffed by the Sisters of St. Joseph and lay teachers.

Father Chagnon also spearheaded the erection of the first monument to explorer Samuel de Champlain in the United States. It was dedicated in 1907 on parish grounds.

The parish itself began as a mission of St. Joseph’s Parish in nearby Coopersville, where Father Van Comenhondt was pastor. He raised the money to buy a former Methodist meeting house in Champlain for $450, oversaw $3,000 in improvements and paid $150 to put a bell in the tower.

That first church building, dedicated in 1860, held 500 communicants. Yet by the 1880s, it was too small for the Catholic population of the village.

The cornerstone for the present church shows the date 1885; the edifice was completed two years later.

“The parish at this time consisted of farmers, boatmen and laborers,” writes Cel­line Racine Paquette, who authored the text in the newly published “St. Mary’s Church: 1860-2010.” A total 344 family belonged to the parish.

These days, said the bishop, “the farmers are fewer but the laborers are many. The landscape has changed somewhat, but the faith remains the same.”

Over the years, the church has seen many changes - with Vatican II, with preservation of the stained-glass windows in a 1975 project, improvements in honor of this year’s celebration that included repair of the church bells with a donation by Knights of Columbus Council 3525.

However, said Chris Trombley, who m-ceed the dinner, “St. Mary’s is not just an address on Church Street. It’s the parish, it’s the Knights of Columbus, the Catholic Daughters, the Mission Center up the road ... It’s in our homes, our memories and our hearts.”

“We don’t know what the future holds for us anymore than our founders did,” writes Father Delbel in his introduction to the history book, “but we do know, as they did, that God will be with us.”

“St. Mary’s Parish,” with photos of the present-day church by Father Delbel, images of parish families and numerous historic pictures, was put together by a committee that included Mrs. Pa­quette, Laura Trahan, Elaine Cloutier, Linda Seymour, Pat LaFontaine and Father Delbel.

Published by Border Press in Rouses Point, it is available for $25 by calling St. Mary’s at (518) 298-8244.

Many parishioners pitched in to make the 150th anniversary memorial, Father Delbel said, from the choir led by Amy Patrie and After Five Brass to the altar servers, cantors, lectors, Eucharistic ministers and committee members too numerous to mention.
