Children: ‘the greatest blessing’

VATICAN CITY (CNS) — Children are never a “mistake” and no sacrifice is too great for an adult to make so that children can feel their worth, Pope Francis said.

During his weekly general audience in St. Peter’s Square April 8, the pope continued his series of talks about the family, dedicating a second catechesis to children.

He described the great suffering and difficulties many children around the world experience as “a Passion.”

Children are the greatest blessing God has bestowed upon men and women, he said. Yet, many children are “rejected, abandoned, robbed of their childhood and of their future,” the pope noted, adding that it is “shameful” when people say it is “a mistake” to bring a child into the world.

“Please, let’s not unload our faults on children,” he said. “Children are never ‘a mistake’... The hunger, poverty, fragility and ignorance of some children “are not mistakes” but “only reasons for us to love them even more, with more generosity,” he said.

Pope Francis wondered aloud about the value of international declarations of human and children’s rights if children are then punished for the mistakes of adults.

Bishop’s Fund meets 2014-15 goal

Bishop Terry R. LaValley has announced April 14 that contributions from nearly 10,000 donors to the 2014-2015 Bishop’s Fund Appeal have pushed the total cash received and pledges promised beyond the $1,275,000 goal.

At this time, 96.80% of the goal has actually been received with $67,495.60 in pledges yet to be fulfilled.

“Our donors understand the far reaching impact of the annual Bishop’s Fund Appeal and respond so charitably,” the bishop said.

FINDING A SAFE HOME IN CHRIST

It's always a pleasure to be able to announce that once again, the annual Bishop's Fund Appeal has met its goal, at least in cash and pledges. (Nobody in the Bishop's Fund office will relax until all those generous pledges have been fulfilled.)

The Bishop's Fund is more important than ever as we work to meet the diocesan priorities and goals that have been established for our church in the North Country.

All of our efforts to create a culture of vocations, strengthen faith formation in families and build parishes with living stones require dollars to match the faith and hard work of our people.

Each diocesan department – Family Life, Evangelization, Vocations, Education and the rest – has a role to play in realizing the diocesan vision that we've heard so much about: “Find your Home in Christ, Renew Faith, Nurture Hope, Discover Christ.”

Donors to the Bishop's Fund insure that all those responsibilities can be met.

And speaking of “finding your home,” this week's NCC also offers three pages of information about the Find Your Home in Christ diocesan census initiative that's happening in each of our parishes over the next few months.

We can all pray that the enormous amount of work involved in this door-to-door operation will yield enormous rewards.

The diocesan and parish leaders whose comments appear in this week's paper certainly believe that it will.

Yet all the important accomplishments of the diocese, supported by the Bishop's Fund and the work of pastors and parishioners, will mean nothing if the most vulnerable among us aren't protected.

In the centerfold of this week's paper, we welcome the annual report from the Safe Environment Office highlighting the efforts made by the diocese to create a climate of safety for the children entrusted to our pastoral care.

A PASTOR'S PERSPECTIVE

Easter season - it's all about happiness

All Christians find the source of their happiness as a Christian in the resurrection of Jesus. This resurrection of Our Savior brings a new strength to our faith as a follower of Jesus, the rock on which our faith is based.

We celebrate liturgically the resurrection of Jesus for several weeks after Easter; this is the Easter Season. Actually, the Church considers every Sunday as a feast day in celebration of the resurrection of Jesus.

This is the happiness of being a Christian – our faith in the resurrection of Jesus. To understand the feeling the resurrection generate each of us should call to mind the happiest day of your life.

I hope you can remember that happiest day of your life. Remember the joy of that day. And realize that the resurrection of Jesus is so central for each of us, Christians – this the joy of following Jesus.

Understanding the resurrection of Jesus gives new strength and meaning to all that we believe as Catholics and Christians.

The resurrection of Jesus changed everything for those original apostles and for all of Jesus' apostles through the centuries. We believe and we accept all the responsibilities of the Christian life because we believe in the resurrection of Jesus.

And we live that Christian life with joy and happiness. We can get an idea of the happiness of the apostles on that first Easter when we consider the happiest day of our own life during the years.

I remember the happiest day of my life. It has now been 18 years ago. I suspect I have told you the story before but I will never forget that day.

Susan and Paul, my niece and nephew, invited me to join them at the birth of their second child – William. For me – it was a spectacular time for me. I didn’t know what to expect that evening however, I have not forgotten even the smallest of details. I was indeed fortunate and found real joy and happiness that day.

I am certain that there was so much love and joy in that room that night among all there – family, doctor, nurses. I truly remember my joy being there as a new life joined my world. I was allowed to hold the child and to offer a prayer and blessing. Such a moment. This was happiness with my family and I am certain it was the happiness that I should have because Jesus rose from the dead.

The happiness of the resurrection of Jesus should flood our churches at Easter. These days Easter should be a day of joy and happiness in each and every Church.

I hope each of you experienced that happiness that Jesus gave to his apostles or at the Easter Vigil. I joined in that happiness when as a pastor there was a Baptism of a catechumen at the Easter Vigil. It is a moment of happiness for that individual and his or her family but also for the pastoral as a priest to see your parish grow.

As a church, this is another source of happiness as we join together celebrating the resurrection of Jesus.

Despite the controversies and concerns that are a part of the Church's history, our Catholic Church is a church of joy and happiness. Jesus conquered death and then rose to new life after such a horrible crucifixion.

The joy of the resurrection of Jesus changed everything and changed how each of us, followers of Jesus recognize how valuable each life is. Jesus taught often that every life is so very special and has an eternal value.

His resurrection verified how special life is. He made it very clear by his life, death, and resurrection that in faith Jesus emphasized the importance and value of each life is.

Everyone matter – everyone can and must do what they can to make the world a better place.

So, Easter is all about happiness. Our happiness should be very evident in the way we live our lives, the way we accept the responsibility of being true followers of Jesus.

May we have the spirit and joy that makes us a force for good each, and every one of us.
With cash and pledges from nearly 10,000 donors

Bishop’s Fund reaches $1.75 million goal

Bishop Terry R. LaValley has announced April 14 that contributions from nearly 10,000 donors to the 2014-2015 Bishop’s Fund Appeal have pushed the total cash received and pledges promised beyond the $1,275,000 goal.

At this time, 96.80% of the goal has actually been received with $67,495.60 in pledges yet to be fulfilled.

“My prayers of gratitude are joined with the hundreds of individuals and families of our North Country who have benefited from such generous giving,” Bishop LaValley said. “Our donors understand the far reaching impact of the annual Bishop’s Fund Appeal and respond so charitably.

“I am particularly grateful to our pastors for their own personal sacrifice and strong leadership in promoting this annual appeal,” the bishop said.

As Bishop LaValley proclaimed at the Chrism Mass on April 9, 2014 the priorities for the Diocese of Ogdensburg are: Creating a Culture of Vocations, Strengthening Faith Formation in Family Life and Building Parishes with Living Stones.

Support of the Bishop’s Fund Appeal is essential in meeting these priorities through the following ministries and programs: Education of Seminarians; Family Life; Natural Family Planning; Respect Life Ministry; Formation for Ministry Program; Office of Evangelization; Continuing Education and Formation of Priests; Priest’s Graduate Studies; Vocations; Permanent Deacons; Deacon Formation; Tuition Assistance Program; Campus Ministry Program; Matching Gifts to Catholic Schools; Christian Formation; Youth Ministry; Young Adult Ministry; Guggenheim Center; Department of Worship and the Bishop’s Good Samaritan Fund.

“Please continue to pray for the success of this year’s appeal, remembering that any funds raised over our goal will be used to further supplement the Bishop’s Good Samaritan Fund,” said Valerie Mathews, diocesan director of the Bishop’s Fund. The Bishop’s Good Samaritan Fund provides emergency assistance to families and individuals across the diocese.

“If you have made a pledge to this year’s Appeal, we encourage you to complete your pledge before June 15, 2015,” Mrs. Mathews said.

“If you have not made a gift or wish to make an additional gift, donations can be mailed to: Bishop’s Fund Appeal, PO Box 150, Ogdensburg, NY 13669 or made at www.rcdony.org/development.”

Speaker to address ‘Faith Communities and Climate’

WATERTOWN - Dr. Gerry Gacioch, the New York State ambassador for the Catholic Coalition on Climate Change, will lead a presentation on “Faith Communities and Climate” April 19 from 1:30 p.m. to 3:30 in the Hearthside Hospitality Center at the Sisters of St. Joseph Motherhouse.

The event is sponsored by the diocesan Council of Consecrated Religious and the Watertown Faith and Ecology Group.

Dr. Gacioch, is chief of cardiology at the Rochester Heart Institute at Rochester General Hospital. He helped found the Care of God’s Creation Ministry at Church of the Transfiguration in Pittsford, N.Y., and hopes to help Catholics learn about Catholic Social Teaching with its particular commitments to care for God’s Creation and exercise an option for the poor.

He belongs to Doctors Without Borders and has volunteered in several developing countries.

Dr. Gacioch is one of 19 ambassadors available to offer presentations on the moral implications of climate change consistent with Catholic teaching. Pope Benedict XVI discussed the teaching in his World Day of Peace Message of 2010, If You Want to Cultivate Peace, Protect Creation. The U.S. Catholic bishops also reflected on the subject in their statement, Global Climate Change: A Plea for Dialogue, Prudence and the Common Good.

The Catholic Climate Covenant, the organization responsible for the ambassador program, plays a pivotal role in the U.S. Catholic response to the enormous challenge of climate change.

The Catholic Climate Covenant and its many partners, including the US Conference of Catholic Bishops (USCCB), has developed strategies to foster the spiritual formation and education of Catholics, to create resources, programs and projects that engage youth, families and parishioners, and to spur action that leads to public policy change at local, national and international levels.

The Catholic Climate Ambassador program is intended to accelerate these efforts by raising the awareness of Catholics around the U.S. who worship in our parishes, learn in our schools and lead our many ministries.

The ambassadors are charged with promoting the Catholic Climate Covenant: The St. Francis Pledge to Care for Creation and the Poor.

The April 19 event is free, and open to the public. To reserve a place, please call 315-782-3460 or email sbethssj@gmail.com.

Census prep underway in Jefferson Deanery

By Deacon Kevin Mastellon
Staff writer

WATERTOWN - The buzz when priests, deacons and lay parish leaders gathered in the summer and fall of 2014 was the Find Your Home in Christ door-to-door census set as a goal of the Pastoral Vision promulgated in the spring of 2014.

The buzz was accompanied by a reasonable amount of hand-wringing as pastors worried about implementing the mandate.

St. Joseph Sister Shirley Anne Brown, was invited by Bishop Terry R LaValley to lead a committee of individuals from across the diocese in creating a template for parishes to use in their census. That work was completed late last summer.

Over this past fall and winter pastors and other parish leadership attended workshops conducted by Sister Shirley Anne and members of the team to hear how the committee envisioned the census would be conducted by individual parishes.

The planning done and a completion target of August 2015 looming, parishes are now gearing-up to do the work.

Jefferson Deanery parishes are, for the most part, planning to knock on doors from May 4 to May 17. Some parishes have opted to split the effort to accommodate the fluctuation in parish activity that summer cottage and camps bring.

Missionary of the Sacred Heart Father Pierre Aubin, pastor of The Roman Catholic Community of Cape Vincent, Rosiere and Chaumont, told the North Country Catholic, "our census visits will take place from April 19 to May 3, and from July 19 to August 2 so we can take care of the year round and the summer people."

St. Cecilia’s in Adams and Queen of Heaven in Henderson will run their campaigns after Memorial Day and conduct a second round, if needed, later in the summer.

All four City of Watertown parishes, Carthage, Copenhagen, Clayton, Alexandria Bay, Evans Mills and all the parishes associated with them will use the May 4 to 17 window.

Each parish is tailoring the scheme created by the diocesan committee to their particular circumstances. Some will create leave-behind packets of material while other parishes have created their own contact sheets for distribution.

Some parishes will conduct pre-census opportunities for parishioners to meet volunteers face-to-face in advance of the door-to-door effort. These are primarily individuals already registered and active in the parish who need to update their census information.

Jefferson Deanery is sponsoring a two-day training session in June for all parishes in the diocese interested in updating their understanding of Parish Data System and the opportunities for pastoral information available through the census section of the widely-used data base.

Contact St. Patrick’s, Watertown for more information about that.

Every parish has or will shortly conduct training sessions for the volunteers who will visit door-to-door in the parish. Confidentiality is being stressed in those training sessions and volunteers are being prepared for the variety of greetings they may encounter as they move two-by-two through their parish.

The goal of a Diocesan-wide census is to identify the Living Stones of our parishes and, as Bishop LaValley said in his Pastoral Letter Find Your Home in Christ, let "every person in the entire North Country know that there is a faithful Roman Catholic living nearby who joyfully invites them to become a vibrant member of the Body of Christ we know as the Church."
I participated in parish census almost 25 years ago and I had all these objections plus the additional excuse that I am a massive introvert. Surely there must be extroverts who like going out and meeting lots of people. You know what? When we went door-to-door, some people didn’t want to be bothered and they didn’t answer the door. Some came to the door and weren’t interested and said no-thank you, I’m not interested. Some people did have questions that I couldn’t answer, but they were happy to be told that there was someone at the parish who could. Some were grateful for contact information or being able to request that someone at the parish give them a call. Some wanted to meet with the pastor or DRE.

But of all the people we met, the ones I remember most are the people who were overjoyed that we came to them. There was the homebound woman who didn’t know that there were Extraordinary Ministers of the Eucharist who could bring her Communion or simply visit and pray with her.

You and your parish will be transformed and strengthened in faith, simple by going out, by sharing the good news.

There was the man who had been away from Church and had wanted to return to the faith, but was worried that he would not be welcome. There was the young mother with the newborn baby who needed information about how to contact have the baby baptized. Even if we just meet one such person, it will mean the whole world to them.

The census will change your parish even if no one returns. The census is a parish-wide communal effort that even if you are not going door-to-door, you should be involved in. Just the fact that the entire parish (actually the entire diocese) is working together on this project, will affect our parish culture!
Rev. James Igo,
The Church is alive

Father Joseph A. Morgan, rector of St. Mary’s Cathedral in Ogdensburg, also has high expectations for the census. “I think this is a great way for all people - not just Catholics - to know that the Church is here and we’re praying for everybody,” he said. “The church is alive and we’re concerned about our own people and everyone else in the community.

“The census project will also give us a chance to invite those who have been alienated from the faith or who just don’t go to church any more to rediscover their faith and come back,” he said.

In Ogdensburg, parishioners of St. Mary’s Cathedral and Notre Dame Church, will be working together on the census, beginning this week. “We’ve set up a team from both parishes in Ogdensburg and have held several meetings,” Father Morgan said. “We got the maps of residences in the city and divided our volunteers into teams. The meeting to train the volunteers was held last Thursday and the census will be conducted from April 13 through the week of May 4. To let everyone in the community know what was going to happen we placed an ad in the Advance and blurbs on the radio.”

Challenging process

The three parishes in Plattsburgh are also working together on the census and most of the parishes in the Clinton Deanery have adopted the same table, from April 26 to May 23.

Msgr. Dennis J. Duprey, pastor of St. Peter’s and dean of Clinton Deanery, acknowledges that the process will be challenging.

“It’s going to be a lot of work,” he said. “In Plattsburgh alone there are 7000 residences and it will be tough to get volunteers who have to knock on thousands of doors and find people at home.

“People don’t visit their neighbors like they did in times past so we have to assure our volunteers that they are not Jehovah’s Witnesses or politicians; they are just going to say hello as friendly faces of faith,” Msgr. Duprey said.

“Just the act of doing that is ‘reaching out’ and the church has to go out and be missionary,” the pastor said. “That’s what we hear from our bishop and our pope and from Jesus. This process will be a good beginning.

The census will also give pastors a better idea about who belongs in their parish, Msgr. Duprey said. “Every time I make a hospital visit, there are always two or three people who call themselves parishioners of St. Peter’s who aren’t on our list.”

As part of the preparation in Clinton deanery, a letter was sent to all the churches, synagogues and mosques in the region to let religious leaders know what was happening.

“We assured them that we will not be proselytizing,” Msgr. Duprey said. “Our people will be just friendly faces of faith.

In Potsdam/Colton

The parishioners of Potsdam and Colton, where Msgr. Robert H. Aucoin is pastor, are also working together.

“We have a committee that’s met several times, in preparation for the May 31 to June 14 undertaking,” Msgr. Aucoin said. “Right now, we’re working on routes and we’ll send a postcard to every resident in the area to let them know what’s happening. We’ll follow this up with a letter just to register parishioners with a message from the bishop on one side and one from me on the other.

“We’re also preparing door bags that we’ll leave at the homes which will include Paulist Press pamphlet offering reasons to consider the Catholic Church and other material,” he said. “We’re also adapting the “Find your home in Christ” census card with an additional phrase “Find Christ in your home.”

Msgr. Aucoin agrees with Bishop LaValley’s view that the census will remind people in the community “that the local Church is vibrant, that we seek to address their concerns.”

He also believes the census will be of great value to the parish as “we find out who people are and how to reach them,” he said.

Resort areas

Father John R. Yonkovig, pastor of St. Agnes in Lake Placid and St. Brendan’s in Keene, described some of the unique challenges in his resort community.

“We have a big summer crowd here,” Father Yonkovig said, “so we’re planning to conduct the census in the spring and make another sweep in the summer. We have people who are rarely in their homes and some whose home in Lake Placid is a second home and they are occasionally here for Sundays so they are hard to track down.

“Sister Shirley Anne Brown (the person who acts as the doctrinal census) is leading a training session for the deanery April 19 but we’ve made a preliminary start,” he said. “Already, we’ve seen an update of contact information and so many people who thought they were registered but they weren’t and that’s been of great value.

At a new parish

At this stage, in Malone, Father Joseph W. Giroux, said “we’ve gathered most of our materials, but we’re still recruiting volunteers and looking at maps and lists.

“We plan to be training folks at the end of April, and start sending out home visitors on May 9,” he said.

“This will be the first year of our newly united parish here in Malone, doing the census should be a great blessing for St. André’s - and not just for all the data it will provide,” Father Giroux said. “I’m hoping it will be a way for us to get to know our parishioners better, while also helping our parishioners to get to know the new parish,” he said.

Catholic social teaching: the death penalty

This is the second in a series of articles on issues of Catholic social teaching as explained by the Rev. Terry R. LaValley, executive director of the Diocese of Albany’s Catholic Social Teaching Office.

In the Words of the bishop

On capital punishment

Catholic teaching makes a distinction between society’s right to inflict the death penalty and the need to do so. As the Catechism of the Catholic Church states: “…the traditional teaching of the Church does not exclude recourse to the death penalty, if this is the only possible way of effectively defending human lives against the unjust aggressor.” This need is, however, practically non-existent today because of the possibilities which the state has for effectively rendering the criminal incapable of doing further harm. (CCC 2266) The death penalty deceives us into thinking that we can defend life by taking life. Retribution, “just” punishment, and revenge are not found among the list of Christian virtues. Ultimately, God alone punishes evildoers.

Bishop Terry R. LaValley

Over the past ten years, many new developments have emerged highlighting the injustice of the death penalty.

Recent cases of wrongful death penalty application, in which new DNA evidence was used to overturn murder convictions and free innocent prisoners, are gruesome reminders that our criminal justice system is not foolproof.

In early 2000, so many wrongful convictions came to light in the state of Illinois that Governor George Ryan was persuaded to impose a moratorium on executions in that state. The Governor of Maryland became the second governor to impose a moratorium on capital punishment, and more than 3,400 cities, towns, local governments and organizations across the country have called for a moratorium on executions.

While nearly all European and North, Central and South American countries have abolished capital punishment, the United States has not.

Over the course of the last 20 years, 530 human beings have been executed at the hands of state governments in America. The barbaric methods used include lethal injection, electrocution, gas chamber, hanging and firing squad. Capital punishment is irrevocable; once society kills unjustly, there is no way to remedy that wrong-doing.

Based as it is on respect for the human person, the Church’s opposition to the death penalty also includes profound respect for the victims of crime, their family and friends.

Respect for the inherent humanity of a person who has committed evil acts should in no way be interpreted as a defense of his or her crimes.

According to Gallup’s 2011 public opinion poll, support for the death penalty has dropped to its lowest level in 39 years.

Dear Friends in Christ:

The Diocese of Ogdensburg continues in our efforts to create a climate of safety for all the youth entrusted to our pastoral care. We remain committed to fulfilling our pledge: to promote healing and reconciliation with victims/survivors of sexual abuse; to guarantee an effective response to allegations of sexual abuse; to implement procedures that protect the faithful in the future; and to hold accountable those who have harmed our children.

The Church offers immediate and ongoing pastoral care to those who have suffered such abuse. I encourage these individuals to contact our Victims’ Assistance Coordinator, Ms. Terrianne Yanulavich, at 518-483-3261 to report such abuse and for assistance with the healing process. We are deeply sorry for any past failures in addressing properly the sinful acts by Church leaders that have been perpetrated against our youth.

Because We Care deeply for the vulnerable among us, the Church of Ogdensburg continues to review our policies and explore ways to ensure that our children are protected from all who would harm them. Under the direction and fine guidance of Sister Ellen Donahue, SA, Diocesan Safe Environment Coordinator, we are diligently working to ensure that the national and diocesan policies established to provide safe environments for our children are implemented fully here in the North Country. With the strong support and cooperation of our pastors and pastoral staff, we have taken seriously this responsibility. For the last thirteen years, independent audits have been conducted here to determine compliance with these policies. Every year, the Diocese of Ogdensburg has been found to be compliant.

I am grateful to all those individuals who assist with the implementation of our safe environment programs in our Diocese. Many individuals spend countless hours in our parishes and schools to train adults in providing safe environments for our children and youth. Their continuing cooperation and prayers help us all keep the promise to protect and the pledge to heal. As Jesus, the Good Shepherd, showed constant care for the vulnerable, your local Church, working with our parents, is seeking to do likewise.

With a Shepherd’s care and concern,

Most Reverend Terry R. LaValley
Bishop of Ogdensburg

Pope’s Easter message
Humility is key to understanding Easter, sharing its joy

By Cindy Wooden
Catholic News Service

VATICAN CITY (CNS) — To enter Christ’s empty tomb like the disciples and see that he has risen, Christians today also must “bend down,” Pope Francis said in his Easter message.

“Love has triumphed over hatred. Life has conquered death. Light has dispelled the darkness,” he told tens of thousands of rain-drenched pilgrims in St. Peter’s Square April 5.

Rain fell and fell hard throughout most of the outdoor Mass. While most people had umbrellas, their flimsy plastic ponchos were no match for the wind and downpour. The ciboria used to distribute Communion to the crowd were covered with plastic wrap, only partially pulled back when the faithful approached.

Still, they stayed for the Mass and for the pope’s solemn Easter blessing “urbi et orbi” (to the city and the world).

Pope Francis did not give a homily during the morning Mass, but his Easter message before the blessing picked up a theme he had begun at the Easter vigil the night before: The mystery of Easter cannot be understood — and the Christian faith cannot be lived fully — without humility.

“By his death and resurrection, Jesus shows everyone the way to life and happiness: this way is humility, which involves humiliation,” Pope Francis said. “This is the path which leads to glory. Only those who humble themselves can go toward the ‘things that are above,’ toward God.”

To enter into the mystery of God’s love, he said, “we need to ‘bend down,’ to abase ourselves. Only those who abase themselves understand the glorification of Jesus and are able to follow him on his way.”

Obviously, he said, that often involves being counter-cultural. Instead of putting ourselves first, he said, “Christians, by the grace of Christ, dead and risen, are the seeds of another humanity, in which we seek to live in service to one another, not to be arrogant, but rather respectful and ready to help.”

“This is not weakness, but true strength!” the pope said. “Those who bear within them God’s power, his love and his justice, do not need to employ violence; they speak and act with the power of truth, beauty and love.”

As is traditional for the “urbi et orbi” message, Pope Francis offered prayers for an end to war and violence in specific countries, mentioning by name Syria, Iraq, the Holy Land, Libya, Nigeria, South Sudan, Congo, Yemen and Ukraine.

In better news, the pope said, “in hope, we entrust to the merciful Lord the framework recently agreed to in order to prevent Iran from developing a nuclear weapon.”

The pope prayed that it would be “a definitive step toward a more secure and fraternal world.”

As he had at every Holy Week and Easter service, Pope Francis offered special prayers for persecuted Christians, asking that “Jesus, the victor over death,” would ease their suffering.

Pope Francis’ Easter celebrations began in the dark of a rainy night April 4 in the atrium of St. Peter’s Basilica. Hot embers glowed until the Easter fire was lit and with it the paschal candle. As a deacon carried the candle into the church, Pope Francis followed with a large taper.

Although only the pope and the deacon had candles, the basilica was aglow with smartphone and tablet displays as people tried to get photos. However, as the pope neared the front of the basilica, the congregation — mostly nuns, priests, bishops, cardinals and ambassadors close to the altar — was more disciplined and the impact of scattered lit candles grew.

While the pope was busy with the Easter liturgies, he sent Archbishop Konrad Krajewski, the papal almoner, out to the city’s train stations, shelters and streets with Easter cards for the homeless. He handed out about 300 envelopes, each of which included an undisclosed amount of money.

During the Easter vigil Mass, Pope Francis baptized, confirmed and gave first Communion to 10 people, who ranged in age from 13 to 66. Four were Italian, three were Albanian and one each came from Cambodia, Kenya and Portugal.

Pope Francis rubbed the chrism oil all over their foreheads and, during the confirmation rite, tenderly gave each one a kiss on the right cheek.

As with his “urbi et orbi” message, Pope Francis’ homily during the Easter vigil, which lasted just over two and a half hours, focused on the humility required of Christians.

The only way to enter into the Easter mystery, he said, is with humility, “to come down from the pedestal of our ‘I’ which is so proud, of our presumption; the humility not to take ourselves so seriously, recognizing who we really are: creatures with strengths and weaknesses, sinners in need of forgiveness.”

“It is good for us, on this vigil night, to reflect on the experience of the women” who went to Jesus’ tomb Easter morning to anoint his body, he said. Entering the tomb is to enter “into the mystery which God has accomplished with his vigil of love.”

“We cannot live Easter without entering into the mystery. It is not something intellectual, something we only know or read about,” he said. “It is more, much more!”

Entering the mystery means being able “to wonder, to contemplate; the ability to listen to the silence and to hear the tiny whisper amid great silence by which God speaks to us.”

To enter the tomb and enter the mystery takes courage, the pope said. It “demands that we not be afraid of reality, that we not be locked into ourselves, that we not flee from what we fail to understand, that we not close our eyes to problems or deny them, that we not dismiss our questions.”

Sharing best practices, new classroom tools

By Tom Tracy
Catholic News Service

ORLANDO, Fla. (CNS) - Sharing success stories and honoring exemplary Catholic educators nationwide is the engine that drives the annual convention of the National Catholic Educational Association.

"One of the things we do here is highlight best practices always with the understanding that people have to adapt and make this their own," Christian Brother Robert Bimonte, NCEA's president, told Catholic News Service a day before the official start of the NCEA 2015 Convention & Expo, set for April 7-9 in Orlando at the Orange County Convention Center.

An extensive awards program and a series of some 342 workshops and professional development sessions were on tap for the NCEA event, with a fair amount of the conversation dedicated to topics such as Catholic school financial support; technology use; Catholic identity in schools; social media; bullying; legal issues; and the growing importance of the Latino population in the U.S.

"What works in Philadelphia doesn't necessarily work in Omaha and what works in Omaha doesn't necessarily work in Orlando or Los Angeles -- which is not to say anything is better or worse (than another thing), but there are 175 dioceses in the country, and, as one wise bishop I used to work for used to say, 'If you have seen one diocese, you have seen one diocese,'" Brother Bimonte said.

At National Catholic Educational Association convention

"There are 175 variations on a theme and no two are exactly alike and everybody has their own history, their own culture and their own tradition," he said.

Brother Bimonte said the NCEA staff worked with the organization's executive committees to identify and highlight priority areas of concern for guest speakers to address as part of the convention's religious and professional development objectives.

Some 6,000 attendees were expected, exceeding earlier expectations by 1,000 attendees.

Brother Bimonte said that concerns over how best to continue funding Catholic schools is an ongoing challenge nationwide and is perhaps the single biggest concern facing Catholic educators: He estimated that at Catholic schools, students' tuition only covers half of real per-pupil costs. So there is increasing pressure to find new ways to make up the shortfall.

Traditionally, tuition, parish/diocesan subsidies and fundraising efforts have been the "three pillars of Catholic school funding," he added.

"Compounding that is the increasing need for financial aid so that you have (students) who cannot afford tuition," said Brother Bimonte.

"You have parishes and dioceses stretched and the pastor today is faced with many needs other than the cost of the Catholic school," he told CNS. "Bills need to be paid and teachers need to receive a decent salary so we are trying to help look outside the traditional sources of funding, so that leads to development and institutional development."

According to its website, NCEA was founded in 1904 as a professional education organization providing leadership, direction, and service to fulfill the evangelizing, catechizing and teaching mission of the church.

Keynote speakers at this year's convention included Carolyn Woo, president and CEO of the Baltimore-based Catholic Relief Services; and Sister Helen Prejean, a Sister of St. Joseph and the author of "Dead Man Walking," who was to lead a Priest Day reflection following the convention.

There is always a strong turnout of clergy and religious and bishops at the event as well, organizers said.

Understanding the power of suffering

As Pope Francis told us at the Easter Vigil Mass in Rome, these weeks following the Feast invite us to "enter the mystery" of the empty tomb.

Remember, the body that was placed there was a battered, bloody victim of torture. The burial clothes still attest to that. It was a transformed, glorified Christ that appeared over and over again to many people.

Nevertheless, Jesus proudly displays his wounds to the apostles in today's Gospel.

Make no mistake - his suffering and wounds are the source of power that will transform us - and the world.

In scene in the first reading takes place some years later. It's Solomon's Portico in the Temple just after Peter has cured the lame man.

As the man leaps for joy, a very large crowd gathers (later reports put the number at three thousand).

Peter, filled with the Holy Spirit, declares that it is God who has worked this miracle, and that what they have seen is another proof that the man, Jesus, whom they crucified, was truly God's Son.

We can imagine how those words must have pierced many hearts with terrifying guilt. They were the ones who had cried "Crucify Him!" just a short time ago. Memories of God's terrible punishments in years past must have crowded their minds.

What were they to do? Peter's words reassure them. Since they acted out of ignorance, God offers them salvation if they repent and believe. They must be baptized in His Name, and in the Father and the Holy Spirit.

And they must spread the Word. This is the mission of every follower of Jesus!

The Gospel for this Sunday is even more exciting. This is Luke's account of the commissioning of the apostles. Scene one takes place in the upper room, where the two disciples to whom Jesus appeared on their way to Emmaus, have just returned, breathless and bursting with the news that Jesus is alive.

Even as they speak, Jesus suddenly appears to the whole assembly, throwing them into consternation and fear. With powerful persuasion, Jesus convinces them that he is not a spirit, but a human person, very alive.

He proudly shows them the wounds in His hands and feet. He asks them for something to eat. They give Him a piece of baked fish which He eats in their presence!

Part of the mystery is the power of suffering. How many martyrs through the decades have, by their suffering, moved many to embrace the truth of Jesus Christ? May my suffering endured for Jesus' sake, help others to accept His mercy and His love.

Assisted suicide is still suicide

Suicide is the 10th leading cause of death for all Americans. It does not discriminate: it takes life without regard to age, income, ability, race, or gender. In the U.S., someone attempts suicide every 32 seconds, and someone completes a suicide every 14 minutes.

Thankfully, the New York State Office of Mental Health recognizes suicide as a serious public health concern and has established suicide prevention as a top priority. Our state spends literally millions of dollars on efforts to prevent suicide.

There are in-depth suicide prevention education and training programs, crisis hotline numbers to call, coalitions and resources in every corner of the state.

The bottom line of all such efforts is to prevent death, to create supportive environments and instill hope in people who are drowning in a sea of hopelessness.

Paradoxically, groups that favor the legalization of physician-assisted suicide say New York is a state where there is "strong interest among lawmakers" and "tremendous public enthusiasm" to make suicide a legal option for the terminally ill.

To accomplish this goal, three dangerous pieces of legislation have been introduced so far this year that would allow a doctor to give a lethal prescription to a terminally ill patient who wishes to commit suicide. A lawsuit has also been filed to throw out New York's current ban on assisted suicide.

Do they not see the contradiction?

Let's review:

- We know that being bullied is a factor that can lead to suicide among teenagers, so we roll out anti-bullying campaigns in schools and tell the teens, "You are valuable, you are special, you are loved."

- We know that people who are incarcerated often feel isolated and hopeless, so we train the prison employees to recognize the risk factors, make interventions and referrals, and support inmates with suicidal thoughts.

- We know that bridges are often a place where depressed people go, so we build in extra safety precautions to prevent death, like netting and cameras, telephones and signs that read "Life is Worth Living."

- We know that people facing terminal illness may feel burdensome, and an overwhelming loss of autonomy, so we give them some pills and say, "Go ahead, kill yourself."

Huh? The message that assisted suicide sends to people who are terminally sick is that some lives - their lives - are not worth living. They are officially burdens on society and so they are unworthy of the protection of the law. They are dispensable.

People living with disabilities take particular exception to this line of thinking. They know that patients in the final stages of a terminal illness often become unable to do things for themselves, like dressing, eating and bathing. They are therefore "dis-abled."

The legalization of physician-assisted suicide would offer this particular population suicide assistance, while the rest of the population is provided with suicide prevention. And that amounts to discrimination against people with disabilities.

Just like any other person feeling hopeless, depressed and suicidal, a person with terminal illness needs a supportive environment and hope for the future.

We need to envelop these people with good medical care offering pain relief and symptom management; with time and attention to their physical, emotional and spiritual needs; and most of all, with comfort, love and compassion.

We need to respect their lives to the very end. We need to refuse to legitimize suicide. Because no human life is expendable.

The Longest Ride

By John Mulderig
Catholic News Service

Though it’s likely to prove a crowd pleaser, the romantic drama “The Longest Ride” (Fox) amounts to little more than a sentimental soap opera.

Reliant on contrived methods of dramatization, director George Tillman Jr.’s adaptation of Catholic author Nicholas Sparks’ novel also includes late plot developments that send an ambiguous signal about marital fidelity.

Amid lush rural scenery and a glorification of contemporary cowboy culture such as might be featured in a pickup truck commercial, Wake Forest University senior Sophia (Britt Robertson) falls for professional bull rider Luke (Scott Eastwood). Shy Sophia has only to witness Luke’s cattle-subduing stamina during what is literally her first time at the rodeo for love to start bucking her world.

The ride home from Sophia and Luke’s initial get-together takes an unusual turn when they stop to rescue 90-year-old Ira (Alan Alda) from the roadside wreckage of his car, thereby saving his life. At Ira’s feebly voiced behest, Sophia also retrieves a wicker box that turns out to contain a series of letters young Ira (Jack Huston) wrote to the girl of his dreams, Ruth (Oona Chaplin).

What better way to pass Ira’s stint in the hospital than for Sophia to read these epistles aloud to him? Screenwriter Craig Bolotin can certainly think of none, so we get Ira’s back story.

Ruth was a vibrant Jewish refugee from Nazi-occupied Vienna whose exile in Greensboro, North Carolina, was softened by her budding relationship with Ira. But Ira’s battlefield heroism during World War II shortly after the two became engaged led to a problem that threatened their impending marriage.

When she’s not providing Ira with the opportunity to narrate his saga, Sophia agonizes over the barriers that seem to obstruct her own path to happiness. These include the fact that she’s soon to depart the Tar Heel State for far-off New York City where she’s landed a prestigious internship at an art gallery -- but whither her beau, alas, will not be following.

Worse yet, homespun Luke, it seems, don’t cotton to Kandinsky and such.

The device of using Ira’s letters to Ruth to tell their story has a fatal flaw: Unlike the audience, after all, Ruth would presumably not have needed Ira’s elaborate explanations to understand events she herself had just experienced. On the other hand, touches of humor do keep things moving along.

Circumstances between Ira and Ruth take a turn that can be read either as under-cutting or supporting nuptial faithfulness. Though the outcome is a morally positive one, steps along the way to it suggest that wedding vows can legitimately be set aside if they seriously impede a spouse’s self-fulfillment.

The film contains brief gore, a few scenes of semi-graphic premarital sexual activity, partial nudity, a couple of instances of profanity The Catholic News Service classification is A-II -- adults. The Motion Picture Association of America rating is PG-13 -- parents strongly cautioned. Some material may be inappropriate for children under 13.

The movie “Do You Believe.” Storytelling takes a back seat to sermonizing in this competent ensemble drama that turns on a Chicago pastor’s (Ted McGinley) preaching about the centrality of the Cross in the lives of Christians and the need to put faith into practice. He and his wife (Tracy Melchior) do so by taking in a pregnant teen (Madison Pettis) who has been living on the streets. The movie features some action violence and mature references, including to abortion. The Catholic News Service classification is A-II -- adults and adolescents. Soap

From the Director’s Desk
Sister Mary Ellen Brett, SSJ,
Diocesan Mission Director

(Adapted with permission from the Missionary Childhood Association in Argentina)

A missionary was walking down the street and met up with the owner of a soap factory. While they were talking, the owner of the soap factory said, “The Gospel that you preach can’t be very good because there are still many bad people in this world.”

The missionary noticed a child nearby who was playing in the dirt. The child was covered from head to toe in mud. The missionary responded to his friend, “Your soap must not be very good because there is still a lot of dirt in the world.”

The man responded, “Well, it can only do its job of cleaning if and when the person uses it.”

“Exactly!” replied the missionary.……

Making the world a better place for everyone is our duty. The Holy Father is particularly concerned with our commitment to children in the Mission Lands. It is our calling through baptism. Pope Francis requests of us all, “… Poverty calls us to sowe hope… Poverty is the flesh of the poor Jesus, in that child who is hungry, in the one who is sick, in those unjust social structures.”

Be assured of the gratitude that our missionaries around have for the Diocese. They are doing the work of the Lord, protecting God’s Children. I am so grateful for their efforts and deeds. I am also grateful to the people of the Diocese for the generous support.
