Entering God’s merciful embrace

VATICAN CITY (CNS) — The “narrow gate” to salvation described by Jesus isn’t narrow because God is oppressive, but because pride bloats Christians and prevents them from entering God’s merciful embrace, Pope Francis said.

Christians “must seize the opportunities of salvation” and not waste time on trivial things before the gate is closed, the pope said before reciting the Angelus prayer Aug. 22.

“If God is good and loves us, why does he close the gate at some point?” the pope asked visitors gathered in St. Peter’s Square.

The reason, he said, is because “our life is not a video game or a soap opera; our life is serious and the goal to achieve is important: eternal salvation.”

In the day’s Gospel reading, Jesus calls on his followers to “strive to enter through the narrow gate, for many, I tell you, will attempt to enter but will not be strong enough.”

By using the imagery of the narrow gate, Jesus tells his listeners that the question of how many will be saved is not as important as knowing “which path leads to salvation,” the pope said.

Building Parishes With Living Stones

For the past two years, the Living Stones Planning Committee has been working to develop a plan for our Diocese (“Living Stones Plan”) along with strategies for its implementation, in order to: enhance parish vibrancy, encourage greater participation among the laity in leadership roles; and assess parish demographics in relation to the economic, human and spiritual resources available in each parish and those of neighboring parishes.

Bishop LaValley writes about the completed plan.

First Vows As A Sister Of St. Joseph

Sister Patricia Carmella Urbinelli professed her First Vows at the Sisters of St. Joseph Motherhouse in Watertown Aug. 13. Bishop Terry R. LaValley celebrated the Mass with priests from the diocese, concelebrating. Sister Patricia will serve as the youth director for the parishes in Ogdensburg, Morristown, Hammond and Rossie.

Mercy In God’s Country: NCC series explores diocesan works of mercy...
The challenge to live a vibrant faith

It's a little jarring to read Bishop LaValley's letter about the culmination of the work of the Living Stones Planning committee. (See Follow Me on page 3)

In just four years, we can expect to see the number of resident pastors in our midst to decrease from the current 49 to only 34. In a diocese of such a large geographic expanse as ours, we can only imagine the challenges this will bring.

The key to it all, Bishop LaValley said, is to form vibrant parishes utilizing the gifts of all the baptized.

"Vibrant" is a good word to consider when we look at the various expressions of faith in our north country church. I can't imagine that any gathering will show more vibrancy than what we'll see at INSPIRE Called to Love next month.

Thousands of Catholics from our diocese and neighboring regions have already registered for this major event in the life of the church.

One happy problem that organizers are facing is how to best accommodate the large number of young people who have registered for the Youth Rally.

I think "vibrant" won't begin to describe the level of faith-filled excitement that will fill the Olympic Arena Sept. 25.

And, this vibrancy will continue in the work of our parishioners long after they return from Lake Placid.

Over the next couple of months as we move through this Jubilee Year of Mercy, the North Country Catholic will explore how Catholics in the North Country are living out the call to mercy. In particular, we will share how individuals, organizations and parishioners are embracing the Corporal Works of Mercy, giving food to the hungry and alms to the poor and so on.

In order to offer the fullest story of “God’s Mercy in God’s Country,” we welcome any suggestions from our readers. Please email mkilian@rcdony.org about stories that should be told in the NCC.

After all, the Diocesan newspaper must remain a vibrant part of the diocese too!
Building Parishes with Living Stones

In my pastoral letter, Find Your Home in Christ, promulgated in April of 2014, one of the priorities set forth was to “Build Parishes with Living Stones.” For the past two years, the Living Stones Planning Committee has been working diligently to develop a plan for our Diocese (“Living Stones Plan”) along with strategies for its implementation, in order to:

1) enhance parish vibrancy;
2) encourage greater participation among the laity in leadership roles; and
3) assess parish demographics in relation to the economic, human and spiritual resources available in each parish and those of neighboring parishes.

In the formulation of this Living Stones Plan, the Committee consulted extensively with pastors and parishioners. Every parish pastoral council in the Diocese was asked to conduct a self-evaluation, measure the vibrancy of the parish and suggest possible placement of priests in order to provide the best care of souls and meet the needs of the faithful in the parishes of the area.

The fruit of consultation, deliberation, and prayer, the Living Stones Plan is sent to pastors this week and includes the reconfiguration of many existing parishes into parish groupings and the assignment of 34 available diocesan pastors. Although currently there are 49 resident pastors, the number 34 reflects the current estimate of available pastors in 2020.

The Living Stones Plan is now available on our diocesan website (www.rcdony.org) under “Planning”.

As you know, our Diocese covers an expansive geographical area with a limited number of priests available to minister. One of the major challenges in planning is to ensure that our faith communities have a pastoral presence, assigning our priests where they are most needed.

Although all parish groupings will have a pastor and all parishioners will have access to Sunday Mass, your pastor may not reside in your community and the Mass location and time may not be what you are accustomed to at present.

In situations where a priest is not in residence, it is imperative that someone be available to attend to pastoral needs through ministry that is not reserved solely to priests.

Our pastors will be calling upon our permanent deacons and qualified laity to assume an even greater role in providing pastoral care through various ministries or service as pastoral associates. Also, in some particular situations, the bishop may assign a pastoral life coordinator to assume the administration of a parish. Each parish grouping will be called upon to formulate a detailed plan to address all the pastoral needs in their grouping.

The goal of this Living Stones Plan is to form vibrant parishes utilizing the gifts of all the baptized, both clergy and laity.

The goal of this Living Stones Plan is to form vibrant parishes utilizing the gifts of all the baptized, both clergy and laity. In the coming weeks and months, your pastors will be asked to share with you details of the Living Stones Plan and begin the necessary collaboration with groups in your parish and with your neighboring parishes to formulate the pastoral plan for your parish grouping.

Change is not always easy but it is a requisite for growth. In appreciation of the fine work done by the Living Stones Planning Committee and acknowledging the great faith of the people of our Diocese, I am confident that we will continue to grow and to move forward as we work together to “Build Vibrant Parishes with Living Stones.”
A man of ‘deep and tangible faith’

By Jocelyn Kelly

CHATEAUGAY - Some of my earliest memories take me back to my grandfather’s arms. Sturdy and safe, the sinewy limbs that embraced me belonged to Clarence Furnia, a hardworking man of humble means, quick wit and unforgettable sayings.

Visiting his home in Chateaugay was a joy of my childhood, for what youngster doesn’t delight in the attention of a devoted grandfather?

Though small in stature, of diminutive French Canadian stock, my grandfather stood tall in my mind and even larger in my heart. His strong weathered hands were quick to reach down, lift me up and place me gently upon his lap or to fold around mine as we stroiled down the sidewalk, stopping at the little bridge to throw stones in the creek or at Jake’s Redhots for lunch.

That Grandpa indulged me was apparently no secret. Though one of many grandchildren, being the youngest in the only family that lived close by was seemingly enough to win his favor. I find no other explanation than I was a rather unruful tomboy who loved nothing more than to cover myself in coal dust from the railroad bed across the street or emerge muddy and water-logged from the creek behind his house.

In an attempt to alleviate some of the frustration I caused my parents, Grandpa wisely took me to Alix’s one day and bought me my first pair of rubber boots. I cried when I had to take them off.

Clarence Furnia was born in Churubusco, Dec. 10, 1900. He married Mary Hamess of Bellows Falls, Vt., in 1930. Clarence and Mary lived in Chateaugay and had eight children: Anna Mae, Clarence Jr. (“Sonny”), Bob, Jack (the author’s father), Larry, Helen Marie, Janet and Bill. They owned Jake’s Redhots, a roadside stand on Route 11, known for its “michigans.” Clarence also worked at the Chateaugay Fish Hatchery.

Standing on the seat beside him as we pattered through town, I sensed the importance of this simple gesture. Leaning into his side, my arm draped around his neck, I became familiar with the deliberate movement of Grandpa’s hand from forehead to breast, shoulder to shoulder.

The mystery of this gesture, repeated every time we passed the Church, created in me a sense of awe and curiosity.

Once I learned its meaning I was struck by Grandpa’s reverence which, despite his unassuming nature, he displayed with conviction.

My grandfather, upon waking each morning and before retiring each evening, fell to his knees, his prayers floating through his bedroom door, an example to all in the house. In a steady cadence, he would fill the air with the words of the rosary and his worn prayer book.

In addition to his disciplined prayer life, Grandpa also sought Christ through the Church, occasionally attending a second Mass on Sunday and, during the last decade of his life, becoming a daily communicant.

Taking to heart the Lord’s promise of forgiveness through the sacrament of Confession, Grandpa made his way to St. Patrick’s every Saturday afternoon in preparation for Sunday Mass. After receiving absolution and praying his penance, he would return home, bathe, put on clean clothes and fast until Mass on Sunday.

He was even known on occasion to trudge back to Church for a second confession after succumbing to his playful nature and telling a joke.

In the short time we were together, my grandfather clearly made a deep impression on me. My most vivid memory is of his last visit to our house just weeks before I was to receive my First Holy Communion. As he was getting ready to leave, my mother emerged from my bedroom holding my delicate white dress. I was struck then, and still am, by his beautiful response—tears of joy ran down his creased face.

Grandpa died unexpectedly exactly one week before I received the Eucharist for the first time but I was certain that day, as I approached the altar, that he was watching me.

The last time I saw my grandfather, he lay still in the casket in my grandparents’ familiar living room, his rosary entwined in his strong weathered hands. At seven I understood, with perfect ease and simplicity, the promise of eternal life for God’s holy ones: I had no doubt my grandfather was in heaven.

More than 40 years later, as I recall those tender moments with Grandpa, I am astonished by the goodness of God. In his infinite wisdom and kindness he gave me a childhood gift, an example that helped guide me, decades later, back to the Church.

The faith and prayers of our ancestors are powerful tools in the hands of God. May we pray for them, ask their intercession, and thank them for being conduits of his merciful love.
Deadline for mandatory registration is Sept. 9

Final plans set for INSPIRE

LAKE PLACID – The registration deadline for INSPIRE: Called to Love, set for Sept. 25 at the Olympic Arena Complex, is Sept. 9.

The event, lunch and parking are free of charge but require a reservation through www.inspirecalledtolove.com and or by contacting local parishes.

“World renowned Catholic speakers will be sharing dynamic presentations on the universal call of all Christians,” organizers say. “A band will be energizing the teenagers during their youth rally, and children under 11 will have activities custom-made to inspire and entertain them throughout the day.”

Bishop Robert E. Barron, auxiliary bishop of Los Angeles and creator of the Catholicism mini-series featured on PBS, will serve as keynote speaker for the day.

The keynote presentation and closing Mass will take place in the Herb Brooks arena, site of the 1980 “Miracle on Ice.”

Break-out sessions for adults will be hosted by Bishop Christopher Coyne of Vermont, chairman of the USCCB Communications Committee; Jennifer Fulwiler, a radio-host, wife/mother, and former atheist; and George Weigel, biographer for St. John Paul II.

The Youth Rally is designed for those in grades 6-12 with interactive events and a concert by Full Armor Band.

Child care activities are open to children from age 3 to 11.

The purpose of all presentations/activities is to lead participants to rediscover the call that each Christian was given at his or her baptism: the call to holiness. The day is designed to help participants discover (or rediscover) their vocations as married, single, ordained or religious.

Bishop Terry R. LaValley will preside at the closing Mass, using the chalice of Pope Francis. The chalice was made and provided to INSPIRE by the pope’s friend, Adrián Pallarols, who will be on site for the event.

Bishop Paul-André Durocher, Archbishop of Gatineau, Québec, will preach the homily.

The choir will consist of 300 vocalists from across the North Country. The venue is handicap accessible, but due to long distances between arenas, wheelchairs are encouraged as needed. All three arenas and the adjacent high school will be utilized for the program.

Doors open at 9 a.m. for visiting with various vendors and exhibitors; the prayer and presentations begin at 10:30.
Diocesan development director offers advice:

Make a Will... join
Memorare Legacy Society

By Scott Lalone
Executive Director, Development Office

Did you know without a Will, the state law decides how to distribute what you took a life time to earn? Naming your own executor, avoiding estate taxes, avoiding probate, keeping peace within the family are just a few reasons and benefits of completing a Will. It’s just taking that first step.

With August being National-Make-A-Will Month, what better time than now? Over the years many individuals have made bequests through their Wills or trusts – with the diocese, their parish, Catholic school, Catholic Charities, Missionary Projects of the Diocese of Ogdensburg, the Foundation of the Roman Catholic Diocese of Ogdensburg and other ministries and institutions of the Diocese of Ogdensburg as one of their final beneficiaries. Other donors who have been called home to God in the past several years have used Charitable Gift Annuities, Endowment Gifts as well as their Wills to provide for the future of the Diocese.

In commemoration of their faithfulness and the commitment of those today and tomorrow who will make such gifts, in 2008 the Memorare Legacy Society was established. It is through this society that the Diocese of Ogdensburg will thank donors for their support of the diocese, parish or school, a diocesan program/ministry, the Bishop’s Fund Appeal or to a Missionary Project of the Diocese of Ogdensburg.

The Memorare Legacy Society honors and recognizes the generosity and vision of those who have chosen to leave a legacy to the Diocese of Ogdensburg through estate or deferred gifts.

One qualifies for membership by designating a portion of his or her assets to pass at death to the any of the above mentioned. This may be accomplished with a simple statement that you have remembered the Church in your will or similar document such as a trust, life insurance policy, charitable gift annuity, designation of an IRA or 401(k) or any other more complex transactions.

Members of this society are those who have informed the diocese of a planned gift that, in the future, will benefit the Diocese of Ogdensburg or any of its Parishes or programs.

Environmental Stewardship

What Time is it? (Part 1)

What time is it on planet earth? Members of the world community responded to this question when they met in Paris for COP21 Meeting last November.

In light of the scientific facts concerning climate change and the rising temperature of the oceans, nearly every country in the world, covering 99% of global emissions, sent representatives for the COP21 Meeting. They discussed ways to work together to lower carbon emissions that scientists have determined is the major human activity causing global warming. To learn more: see A Way Forward: Facing Climate Change produced by National Geographic and United Nations on YouTube (8 mins.)

While there is still debate to the causes of global warming, or even more disturbing, little mention of it at all in the issues facing our Nation, Pope Francis has spoken out strongly about this issue.

Supported by more than 90% of scientists world-wide, several former popes, Catholic Bishops and leaders of major religions around the world, Pope Francis states: “The climate is a common good, belonging to all and meant for all...”

A very solid scientific consensus indicates that we are presently witnessing a disturbing warming of the climatic system. In recent decades this warming has been accompanied by a constant rise in the sea level, and a rise in the sea level... can create extreme situations, if we consider that a quarter of the world’s population lives on the coast or nearby, and that the majority of our megacities are situated in coastal areas.” Humanity is called to recognize the need for changes in lifestyle, production and consumption.” Laudeato Si (23 & 24)

What time is it for us? A time for prayer on Sept. 1 World Day of Prayer for Care for our Common Home.

A time to look for signs of change from fossil fuels to renewable energy sources in our local area.
Mary Sue Arnold has offered music ministry in Essex County since the early 1970’s

Organist honored after decades of service

By Tina Bigelow
Contributing writer

WILLSBORO - Mary Sue LaVallee Arnold, organist for several local churches in Essex County for 43 years, has retired with a celebration hosted by The Catholic Community of Westport, Elizabethtown, Willsboro and Essex.

Mary Sue moved to Willsboro with her family in the summer of 1966. At that time, Father Frank McMahon was the pastor and Betty McGee was the very talented longtime organist at St. Philip of Jesus Catholic Church. Betty retired in 1972 and moved to Texas leaving St. Philip of Jesus with no music for the Mass.

Father Leo Wiley was assigned to take over as pastor with Father McMahon assisting and partially retired. Father Wiley asked Mary Sue if she would attempt playing the organ for the choir, but because she had not played the piano for 20 years, and had never learned to play the organ, she declined the offer.

Very shortly after, Father Wiley was assigned to another parish and Father Paul Whitmore took his place. He had extensive background and talent in music, organ and voice. When he offered to give Mary Sue organ lessons, she graciously accepted.

It was at this time that guitars were being introduced into the Catholic churches, so Father Whitmore recruited Sue Bruno, Robin Blanchard and Lori Anderson to instruct and encourage this newly formed choir with the organ and guitar accompaniment.

Two years later, he was assigned to a new parish, but before he left he introduced Mary Sue to Jim Conley who was organist for the St. Patrick’s Catholic Church in Port Henry and a music teacher at Moriah Central School.

After taking six lessons from him, she was on her own and practicing every day.

By 1978, Mary Sue’s confidence and ability had improved, and she was asked to be the organist and choir director for the United Congregational Church in Willsboro.

Serving in that capacity for 18 years, she provided her music ministry on Sunday mornings for the United Congregational Church at 9:15 a.m. and then traveled over to St. Philip of Jesus just in time to play for their 11 a.m. service.

When St. Philip of Jesus moved their services to an earlier time, she decided to retire from the United Congregational Church.

As she continued to play for the Masses at St. Philip of Jesus, she also accepted many offers to play for weddings, funerals and special occasions for all the churches in Essex, Westport, Elizabethtown and Lewis.

In the early 90’s, Betty Jean Wimett joined with her voice and guitar, setting the St. Philip of Jesus choir up with an organist and a guitar quartet accompaniment.

In 2006, when Father Scott Seymour took his assignment at St. Philip of Jesus, he recruited pianist Christina Romero, choir director Penny Martin, and many new singers to prepare for St. Philip’s 100th Anniversary Celebration.

This gave Mary Sue a rest from accompaniment and an opportunity to sing in the choir. However, two years later, she was back as the organist and the director of the choir when Christina and Penny were no longer available.

Due to vision and hearing impairments, she had to make the sad decision to retire completely.

She closes this chapter of her life with words of sadness and appreciation by saying that although she will sing with the choir as long as she is able, her music ministry as an organist has been a real blessing to her and that she will greatly miss the opportunity to play for the choir, priests, and church events.

What is mercy?

By Andrew Lauria
Staff writer

Recently I had the pleasure of speaking on a small panel with a group of young middle school students about mercy. They had just finished reading a book that was a compilation of various stories that illustrated the mercy of God acting in powerful and personal ways.

So as to prepare for this panel I began to think deeply about the essence and nature of mercy as informed by my own personal experience as a human person that is loved in an immense way by his Creator.

While a lot of attention has been given to the subject in this Year of Mercy, it wasn't until now that I really prayed and spent time reflecting on my own experience of mercy.

And this is what I have discovered:

Mercy is a very difficult thing to try to explain in specific words but it seems that people have a very real sense of what it is. Some are more inclined to the presence of mercy, maybe those who are more observant or sensitive but everyone, even a hard-headed, stubborn, miserable person knows mercy when they encounter it.

So, we can begin by saying that mercy is something that is universally recognized but can be difficult to fully explain in an effort to understand it.

Mercy seems to be something that we encounter: it is outside of ourselves, somehow existing in a space that rests between our emotions and reason. It isn't mysterious, rather it is very real and its realness may be its greatest mystery. It seems to come to us in as much as it is given and received for it cannot be forced or taken. Mercy is like a rope in such a way that you cannot push it but when employed properly, it holds much weight.

Mercy seems also to be something that is very personal, at every level, whenever we encounter it. Mercy is never owed to anyone or any situation. You cannot possess mercy. Mercy can be learned but not created. In a more legal sense, mercy is never justice for justice is given to each what he deserves. Mercy then is giving to someone what they do not deserve.

Mercy is not illusive; it is not strange, exclusive, or closed-off. Again, it is never due and never owed. It is permanent and does not change when acted upon by an outside force. Mercy is impossibly robust, strong, convinced and unwavering. It cannot be destroyed. Mercy is an energy that cannot be created or destroyed. Mercy has a definitive source in the Divine for it is outside of our capacity as human persons to create such a thing ourselves.

Mercy is naturally cultivated in people that desire virtue. It is a gift that is grown inside of you, a gift that, like a wild flower, cannot be picked and given away until fully mature and in bloom. Mercy is given in front of a good conscience and is always the result of an act of goodwill. When received, mercy is both heavy and light as it demands it creates a permanence in the mind while lifting the burden of the heart.

Finally, it seems that mercy is naturally mysterious because it isn’t generated by us. This is the same experience of wonder and awe. These experiences are not created by us but rather we participate in them; they call us out of ourselves. And as Catholics we believe that this calling comes from a personal God who is always calling us back to Him.

Mercy is to hear this call and offer to communicate it in joy to others.

Diocesan Catholics live out the works of mercy

When Pope Francis opened the Extraordinary Jubilee of Mercy in December, 2015, he told Catholics around the world, “We need constantly to contemplate the mystery of mercy. It is a well-spring of joy, serenity, and peace. Our salvation depends on it.”

“Mercy is the very foundation of the Church’s life,” Pope Francis said, “All of her pastoral activity should be caught up in the tenderness she makes present to believers, nothing in her preaching and in her witness to the world can be lacking in mercy.

“The Church’s very credibility is seen in how she shows merciful and compassionate love,” Pope Francis continued “The Church has an endless desire to show mercy.”

Catholics in the Diocese of Ogdensburg share in that endless desire to show mercy.

Story ideas are welcome

In a new series “God’s Mercy in God’s Country,” the North Country Catholic will explore many of the ways this is happening across the diocese.

Following the direction of Pope Francis, we will “reflect on the corporal works of mercy,” through articles that show how Catholics in northern New York feed the hungry, give drink to the thirsty, clothe the naked, welcome the stranger, heal the sick, visit the imprisoned, and bury the dead.

We begin the series with a reflection “What is mercy?” by NCC writer Andrew Lauria of Wells.

Next week’s paper will feature an article showing how Plattsburgh parishioners are feeding the hungry and giving drink to the thirsty.

This will be followed by stories of people in Watertown burying the dead, in Saranac Lake caring for the sick, in Malone visiting the imprisoned and so on.

The editor welcomes articles and suggestions for articles to insure that every part of the diocese is represented. Material may be sent to Mary Lou Kilian at mkilian@rcdony.org.
Celebrating the Sisters of St. Joseph

Parish aims to ‘build a culture of vocations where Church vocations are encouraged and celebrated’

By Kathleen Lauzon Parishioner, St. Mary’s, Fort Covington

FORT COVINGTON- Bishop Terry LaValley called on Catholics in the Diocese of Ogdensburg “to build a culture where Church vocations are encouraged and celebrated.”

Parishioners of St. Mary’s of the Fort did just that on Aug. 14 as the parish enjoyed a celebration in gratitude and appreciation for the Sisters of St. Joseph. Father Tom Kommeyer, pastor, celebrated Mass assisted by Deacon Brian Dwyer with St Mary’s choir leading the music.

After Mass, parishioners and six Sisters of St. Joseph gathered for a lunch and a visit down memory lane at St Mary’s Parish Center, which served as the Catholic School from 1957 to 1971.

Parishioners and the Sisters provided memorabilia (including a pre-Vatican II habit). Shared pictures and stories brought back wonderful memories.

The Sisters of St. Joseph who took part in the celebration were Sister Mary Eamon, major superior of the Sisters of St. Joseph; Sister Mary Christine, Sister Noel Chabanel, Sister Suanne Johnson, Sister Shirley Ann Brown (who is from Fort Covington) and Sister Marie Cordata (who taught at St Mary’s).

Personal reflection about the day
How wonderful to have Sisters in our church and school/parish center again. Our thoughts and prayers were with other Sisters who were unable to come: those who taught us, and those from our parish.

These holy, dedicated women showed us how to “know, love and serve God.” As Father Kommeyer said, the foundation they laid here is still very evident today. If only our children could have the same opportunity today. So now it is our turn to pass this treasure along.

The Vocations Committee has accepted that task. We are working to raise vocation awareness among all parishioners.

We have initiated a Family Rosary campaign. Each week a large rosary is passed from family to family. While the rosary is in their home, they are asked to pray for holy vocations to the priesthood, religious life, single life and sacramental marriage. We are now in our tenth month of this prayer.

We pray that the Holy Spirit will call men and women from our parish to enter the consecrated life. We will do all that we can to assist those He has chosen.

Pope: Receive forgiveness in confession

By Cindy Wooden
Catholic News Service

VATICAN CITY (CNS) -- God’s mercy is poured out upon the repentant so that they can change and grow, sharing mercy with others and helping build families, neighborhoods and societies where people learn to forgive, Pope Francis said.

"One is reconciled in order to reconcile," the pope said in a message to bishops, priests and church workers attending Italy's annual week of liturgical studies.

"All liturgy is a place where mercy is encountered and accepted in order to be given, the place where the great mystery of reconciliation is made present, proclaimed, celebrated and communicated," said the papal message, released by the Vatican Aug. 22.

In order to learn to forgive others

Of course, he said, the gift of God's mercy is highlighted and experienced in a special way in the sacrament of penance or reconciliation.

Although the repentance and absolution are personal, he said, "God's mercy cannot be sealed up in intimist and self-consoling attitudes because its power is seen in its ability to renew people and make them capable of offering others a living experience of the same gift."

Catholics must be helped to see that when they are forgiven, they must learn to forgive others, the pope's message said. The world needs "witnesses of mercy in every sphere," people who can help others desire and learn how to forgive.

"This is a task to which we are all called, especially in the face of the bitterness that entrap too many people who need to find again the joy of interior serenity and the taste of peace," he said.

The rite of the sacrament of reconciliation, the pope said, must be experienced as "a door, not only to re-enter after being away, but also as a threshold open toward the various peripheries of a humanity increasingly in need of compassion."

Historic Louisiana flooding may change region forever

By Richard Meek
Catholic News Service

BATON ROUGE, LA (CNS) - Water lapped at the heels of Father Michael Galea, steady rain an arduous reminder of Mother Nature's unfinished business.

With a sadness in his voice, Father Galea, pastor at Holy Rosary Church in St. Amant, estimated that as many as 90 percent of his parishioners were impacted during the recent historic flooding that touched nearly every corner of the Diocese of Baton Rouge.

"It's going to change the whole dynamic of Holy Rosary as a parish as we know it," Father Galea told The Catholic Commentator, the diocesan newspaper. "It's not going to be the same. And we are going to lose quite a bit of people if they choose to move away.

"But hopefully with love and compassion and a lot of hugs we can become a family all over again. That is what is most important is for us to be together again."

Coming together as a family, whether it is a community, church parish or simply a family dinner, is a question many are asking in the wake of the floods that in some area dumped 20 inches of rain in as many hours. The carnage is stunning.

In Central, it is estimated 27,000 out of 28,000 people were impacted, leaving some to speculate if the suburban community will be able to recover.

In Livingston Parish, a civil jurisdiction, at least 75 percent of residents suffered some type of water damage, with most of the destruction major. Residents in the civil jurisdictions of East Baton Rouge, Ascension and Tangipahoa parishes also were forced to dig out.

Much of Zachary was damaged, as the wide swath of destruction seems endless. In the aftermath many residents residential streets appeared to be mere passes surrounded by mountains of debris. And the stench permeates one's pores, a smell that eventually subsides but never leaves.

Schools were closed, many for weeks, and businesses were struggling to reopen. Curfews were enacted in civil parishes throughout to lessen the threat of looting in the impacted areas.

Some estimates are as high as 100,000 homes damaged, with thousands fleeing to evacuation shelters. The floodwaters claimed 13 lives, and many others survived only after being rescued from their rooftops, reminiscent of Hurricane Katrina 11 years ago.

According to Joe Ingraham, chief financial officer for the Baton Rouge Diocese, six churches took on water and the parish schools at two of those also were damaged. Cristo Rey Baton Rouge Franciscan High School, which opened in August, was inundated with 4 feet of water and has to relocate.

Although the damage was widespread and costly, Ingraham managed to see the silver lining in the storm clouds that blanketed the area for nearly a week.

"It could have been worse, when you see four churches out of 71 severely damaged," Ingraham said. "The worst thing is the damage to our parishioners and their homes."

The storm, which first began to unleash its nearly weeklong fury Aug. 12, packed a one-two wallop that drove water into areas that had never experienced flooding. Initially, torrential rains from the slow-moving system initially caused street flooding, which also forced water into homes.

But the greater damage came in the days that followed as area rivers overflowed their banks and flowed unfettered into neighborhoods, businesses and even major thoroughfares.

At one point, Interstates 10 and 12, the two main arteries in and out of Baton Rouge, were closed. Along I-12, some motorists were trapped in their cars for more than 30 hours, presenting a unique opportunity for ministry for Father Jamin David, pastor at St. Margaret of Scotland Church in Albany.

After surveying the 20 acres encompassing the parish grounds, Father David said, “It became a humanitarian effort. Really, it was the multiplication of the fishes.”

Even as the waters continued to rise, donations, in the form of cash, clothes, gift cards, cleaning supplies and other necessities began to filter in from all over the world. On Aug. 23, the Knights of Columbus donated $200,000 to the diocese and another $30,000 to the Knights’ Louisiana State Council.
Retired Pope Benedict says it was his 'duty' to resign from papacy

By Junno Arocho Esteves
Catholic News Service

VATICAN CITY (CNS) - Retired Pope Benedict XVI said in an interview that he felt a "duty" to resign from the papacy because of his declining health and the rigorous demands of papal travel.

"I would have been truly worried if I was not convinced - as I had said in the beginning of my pontificate - of being a simple and humble worker in the Lord's vineyard," he said.

The retired pope added that while he was aware of his limitations, he accepted his election in 2005 "in a spirit of obedience" and that despite the difficult moments, there were also "many graces."

"I realized that everything I had to do I could not do on my own and so I was almost obliged to put myself in God's hands, to trust in Jesus who - while I wrote my book on him - I felt bound to as an old and more profound friendship," he said.

The retired pontiff spends his days in prayer and contemplation while residing at the Mater Ecclesiae monastery in Vatican City. For 19 years, different contemplative orders took turns living in the monastery with a mission focused on praying for the pope and the church.

Benedict said that upon learning that the Visitandine nuns would be leaving the residence, he realized "almost naturally that this would be the place where I could retire in order to continue in my own way the service of prayer of which John Paul II had intended for this house."

Among the visitors Pope Benedict receives is Pope Francis, who "never fails to visit me before embarking on a long trip," he said.

Asked about his personal relationship with his successor, Pope Benedict said they shared a "wonderfully paternal-fraternal relationship" and he has been profoundly touched by his "extraordinarily human availability."

"I often receive small gifts, personally written letters" from Pope Francis, he said.

"The human kindness with which he treats me is a particular grace of this last phase of my life for which I can only be grateful. What he says about being open toward other men and women is not just words. He puts it into practice with me."

Pope Francis, who wrote the book's preface, expressed his admiration for the retired pope and said his spiritual bond with his predecessor "remains particularly profound."

"In all my meetings with him, I have been able to experience not only reverence and obedience, but also friendly spiritual closeness, the joy of praying together, sincere brotherhood, understanding and friendship, and also his availability for advice," Pope Francis wrote.

The church's mission of proclaiming the merciful love of God for the world, he added, has and continues to be exemplified in the life of Pope Benedict.

"The whole life of thought and the works of Joseph Ratzinger have focused on this purpose and -- in the same direction, with the help of God -- I strive to continue," Pope Francis wrote.
SCRIPTURE REFLECTIONS

Why do bad things happen to good people?

"Who can know God’s counsel, or who can conceive what the Lord intends?"

How we would love to know the answer to that question, especially when a friend dies in a car accident, or a close relative is struck down with a life-threatening illness at a young age.

What was God thinking of when He allowed so much evil to happen.

Why do bad things happen to good people?

The first reading today from the Book of Wisdom asks the same questions, but fails to give us very satisfying answers.

It does, however, tells that when we are in real need of God’s guidance, He sends his Holy Spirit, and “thus were the paths of those on earth made straight”.

Often when with confident faith we plead, “Come, Holy Spirit...” light will lift us and enter into our confusion.

God will show us a way out of the darkness.

In the Gospel, Jesus demands of His followers total and complete obedience, choosing decisively to love Him more than we love our own families.

This means taking up whatever cross of suffering or trial He offers to us.

It means growing in detachment from our possessions.

DO YOU LOVE ME? KEEP MY COMMANDS

Of moms and dads and the 4th Commandment

When I was four a contractor was working in our house. The man was over six feet tall and when he noticed me staring he asked if I ever saw such a tall man. I said “My Dad is taller. My Dad is the tallest man on the whole street.” At five feet, nine inches, my Dad was actually one of the shortest.

When I was about eight-years old I fell off of a jungle gym in the neighbor’s yard and broke my arm. My Dad vaulted the fence to help me and it must have been impressive to me because I kept telling people how my Dad jumped over the fence in just one jump to help me.

When I was in college my Dad gave me his car so I could go back and forth from school. The car broke down while I was on my way home one weekend. I didn’t have much money on me and I didn’t know what to do so I called my Dad.

We are able to love because we were loved first. We share the love we learn from our parents with the rest of the world.

He had made plans for the evening, but he put those aside and drove out to meet me. He made arrangements to get the car towed to a garage, and when we arrived, he helped the mechanic push the car into position, without being asked, while I just stood there watching.

The mechanic made the repair and my Dad paid for everything. When we got home, my Dad added me to his credit card in case I had an emergency in the future.

At every point of my life my Dad has demonstrated his love for me, but because my parents divorced when I was a teen, there were times in my life when it was difficult for me to recognize or acknowledge my father’s love for me.

When I was teaching the Fourth Commandment to eighth graders I used to have my students do an assignment that involved making a chart of their life up to age 70, divided into five year increments.

I asked them to describe what it meant to keep the Fourth Commandement, to “honour your father and mother,” when they were five, ten, 15, 20 etc. all the way up to 70.

It’s unrealistic to expect a 13-year-old to know the intricacies of life, the sacrifices, the struggles, the pains and the joys of keeping the Fourth Commandment throughout an entire lifetime, so I made them do this assignment with their parents and I told them they could consult their grandparents too if they wanted.

This turned out to be one of their favorite assignments and it generated a great deal of discussion, for example:

- What if you are angry at one or both of your parents?
- What if your parents have done really bad things to you or other people?

Using the example of a person building a tower, a man must have enough materials to finish the job. Otherwise, those witness the project will laugh, saying, “This one began to build but did not have the resources to finish.”

Constant prayer, reading of Scripture, and trust in His Providence will provide all we need. Jesus, through the Holy Spirit, shows us the way of wisdom.

Tough advice this Sunday for those who aspire to be followers of Christ.

Though blood flows, it’s imperative mood .

Add to that the fact that his house is the only inhabited dwelling in an abandoned area of Detroit, and that it’s watched over by a ferocious guard dog, and it’s pretty clear just how soon the tables will be turned on the amateurish thieves.

Alvarez is fairly restrained in his presentation of the mayhem that follows. Though blood flows, it’s measurable in ounces not bucket loads.

Yet, as the action progresses plot developments begin to strain the laws of logic. More significantly, perverse behavior and the horror equivalent of gross-out humor creep in -- and creep out the audience in a way those seeking casual entertainment are unlikely to appreciate.

The film contains intense violence with some gore, a disturbing sequence involving a bizarre sexual assault, brief scatological humor, a couple of uses of profanity, much rough and crude language and an obscene gesture.

Gratitude: never taking something for granted

By Molly Ryan
Diocesan Mission office

The average American family will spend roughly $100 per student on school supplies this year - and that is not including school clothes, according to the National Retail Federation.

As I researched briefly for this article, the word gratitude comes to mind. Gratitude for so much and even more for so much that we may not take for granted. I hope that our returning students to schools across our diocese are grateful to their parents for providing school supplies to facilitate a year of learning. Gratitude to the facilities that will house them as they learn and grow throughout the school year.

Gratitude for the teachers and staff who will guide them on their sometimes difficult journeys. As students are finishing summer jobs, beginning Fall sports, purchasing their own school supplies, sneakers and back packs, I hope that they have a heart filled with gratitude. Yes, gratitude that they have the ability to play and work and earn money. Yes, gratitude that there are employment opportunities available. Gratitude that there are resources easily available and accessible.

Working in the Mission office, we hear stories about the children in our developing lands. For instance, in Mollendo, Peru home of our former Mission Parish, children in schools there are blessed if they have only one notebook and one pencil. The struggles that students in developing countries endure are countless, and the lack of access to school supplies is only one of them. You see, textbooks for courses are not available to each student. They must share and do not get to bring them home. Sometimes they are outdated and old.

This is such a departure from what our students here encounter in our schools. For Peruvians, their one notebook and pencil is a respected treasure. Many students in Peru have summer jobs that pay little or in some cases nothing. School clothes and new backpacks are a luxury.

While the struggle continues for students in developing countries, they continue to be grateful for what they receive through the mission appeals and collections by the people of our diocese. Additionally our Catholic school students and religious education program enrollees are generous with their time and treasure through donations to the Missionary Childhood Association (MCA). In great hopes that our pending generosity this school year will make for a fruitful learning experience for students living far away. Gratitude. That is what we in the Mission Office have for all you. Thank you again for all you do and all you will do this year. Good luck!

BISHOP’S FUND 2016...MERCY IN MOTION

Bishop’s Fund supports ministry to young people

By Kelly Donnelly
Diocesan youth ministry director

“Camp taught me so much and I don’t know what I would’ve done without it. When I got there Sunday night, I didn’t wanna stay but Friday afternoon when it was time to leave I cried because I didn’t wanna go. I met new friends and perfect counselors who taught me everything…”

These sentiments that a camper from Camp Guggenheim shared with me capture what I witness time and time again: youth programming in our diocese enables teens to have life-changing experiences.

Thanks to generous donations to the annual Bishop’s Fund Appeal, the youth of our diocese are given opportunities to grow closer to Christ. Diocesan-wide events such as the annual youth rally, Camp Guggenheim, leadership weekend, and the youth buses for life to the March for Life would not be possible without these donations.

Furthermore, in every corner of the diocese, local programs for youth that are offered are directly impacted by the Bishop’s Fund. Last year, the Youth Ministry Certification Program kicked off with a weekend retreat for youth ministers, and since then, classes and collaborative events have been held and will continue to be held so that youth ministers have the support to fully minister to the teens in their parishes. Thus far, all of these programs have been free to participants. Volunteers in parishes who work with youth are given tremendous responsibility, and helping them to have resources, support, and guidance in their work is vital to the growth of the young Church.

As I meet people across the diocese, I am blessed to hear stories of what a difference youth programming has made in their lives, or the lives of their children, grandchildren, neighbors, and fellow parishioners. Whether it is the camper who writes an essay about finding a sense of belonging and desire to stay committed to God because of his week of Camp, the March for Life pilgrim who explains that she entered into the experience looking for a few days in D.C. with friends and left the experience passionately pro-life, or the parent who stops me in the grocery store to say that their child put up a crucifix in her bedroom after a tremendous impact youth ministry has on individual lives.

Moving forward, I remind myself of the diocesan and parish youth ministry goal: “to provide age-appropriate opportunities which will lead our youth to a life-changing encounter with Christ which will nourish a faithful, fruitful and joyful friendship with Him and His Church.”

I ask you to prayerfully consider donating to the Bishop’s Fund Appeal in order that as a family of faith we might continue to have the resources available to help provide opportunities for youth so that they grow in friendship with the Lord.
