No magic in conversion

VATICAN CITY (CNS) - Conversion doesn't come from the wave of a magic wand, but from learning to do good through concrete actions every day, Pope Francis said.

While even "the saintliest person sins seven times a day," conversion happens through humility and trying to become "better than the day before," the pope said March 14 during the Mass in the chapel of the Domus Sanctae Marthae.

"Converting doesn't mean going to a fairy with a magic wand," he said. "No, it is a path, a path of turning away (from evil) and of learning."

Reflecting on the day's first reading from the prophet Isaiah (1:10, 16-20), the pope said, "You learn to do good through concrete things. Not with words, but with actions."

The reading from Isaiah gives three examples: "Help the oppressed, hear the orphan's plea and defend the widow."

Bishop's message for St. Joseph's Day

Bishop LaValley traveled to Watertown Saturday to join the Sisters of St. Joseph for their annual celebration of the Feast of St. Joseph.

In his homily, Bishop LaValley challenged the sisters to consider what God is "whispering."

"Do I have Joseph's trust, particularly when fear and confusion seem like constant unwelcome guests in my life," the bishop said. "Am I tuned in to receive and to act upon divine whispers? Do I dare pay attention to what God might be revealing to me?"

Rebecca Rose, musical director for St. Cyril Church in Alexandria Bay, took part in an international conference in Rome in early March on the theme: "Music and the Church: cult and culture fifty years after Musica Sacram."

Each of the participants was invited to meet Pope Francis during the conference convened by the Congregation for Catholic Education and the Pontifical Council for Culture.

Mrs. Rose asked the pope to bless two items of personal importance: her husband Kevin's identification shield (he is with the New York State Police) and her own necklace shield.

Finding, following God in married life

Longtime readers know that the NCC’s annual wedding issue takes a different focus than most other newspapers. Rather than articles on dresses, rings and honeymooners we look at the marriage, striving to offer support for the new husband and wife as they follow their call from God.

This year, we’re delighted to share the stories of six couples who recognize that their married life is truly a vocation, the way they have been called to live lives of holiness.

It’s not always easy to find and follow God in married life, but, as one couple said, “our family and our life together has been enriched by the love God has for us and the love we have for each other.”

And, the wise words of another wife: “My view of vocation has really grown in our years of marriage. In the past I believed those called to a religious vocation had a ‘higher’ calling and were holier than lay people. I now realize being married and a parent is not a lesser calling than the religious life, nor is it a higher calling than the single life. It is a different calling. We are all called to grow closer to Christ daily and share his love with others.”

Although it’s not common to hear the word “vocation” at a wedding, it wouldn’t be difficult for the bride and groom to say the word. The real meaning of a vocation to marriage would be blessedly hidden from their eyes.

Back in the dark ages, when Tom and I were married – with plenty of Catholic education behind us – we had all the right vows. We made the most of the sacrament with favorite scripture readings and beautifully rendered music. My groom even sang to me, performing a piece with words from the Song of Songs which he had composed for the day.

We were surrounded by friends and family members who shared our faith. We were ready to show the world how to live the vocation of marriage.

We didn’t know what we were talking about! Almost 40 years later, after decades of irritations, fights, worries about money, terrifying sicknesses, deaths and great sorrows as well as babies and grandbabies, holidays, fulfilling work, new homes and great joys, we have a much better idea.

Some days we did well at finding and following God, some days God seemed far from our grasp. Luckily, please God, we still have plenty of days to get it right!

Creating some space for God with silence

Each year we read the Gospel story of the Transfiguration on the Second Sunday of Lent. It is a rather curious story, wouldn’t you say? Jesus takes three apostles, Peter, James and John, up a mountain, Mount Tabor. It’s not a big mountain like the Adirondacks but it’s a fairly good hike.

Once up the mountain, something rather curious happens. The Gospel tells us that Jesus was transfigured – his face shone like the sun and his clothes become as white as light. I think Jesus wanted to impress these apostles, give them confidence, to face the shocking events of Christ’s Passion.

This must have been a well-remembered story since all three synoptic evangelists tell this story.

During this incident we are told that they were overshadowed by a cloud and, from that cloud, a voice speaks out. Obviously, it’s the voice of God the Father who says, “This is my beloved Son, with whom I am well pleased, listen to him.”

Prayer is about listening. I believe that each day of our lives the Lord longs to reach us, coming to us with love and compassion as well as with his challenges for us to live out our discipleship.

The Lord touches our lives in many surprising ways – not as flamboyant as in this Transfiguration story – but just as real. Too often we do not recognize the Lord’s message, we fail to listen. We need some silence.

You and I live in a very noisy world. We are constantly turning something on just for the noise of it all. Noise can be rather addictive for us. We seem to need the noise of the television or the radio or whatever to fill up the silence. All of this noise doesn’t leave space for the Lord to reach us. We are not listening; we need silence to give God some space.

My favorite saint, Thomas Merton, wrote a great deal about silence. It seems rather obvious that a Trappist monk would understand the importance of silence. These monks do not need or want all that noise that we think is so important.

I would like to share some ideas on silence from Merton. I discovered an essay by Merton in a book of his Essential Writings. He wrote this essay in 1968 at the request of some college students from the University of Louisville and titled it “Creative Silence.” He challenges his readers to discover the power of silence.

Merton writes this in an attempt to understand silence: “Silence has many dimensions. It can be a regression and an escape, or a loss of self or it can be a presence, awareness, unification, self-discovery.”

I know that in my own life there have been times when I used silence as an escape. I have blocked out myself from others, nothing to write, no listening. No one could reach me, especially the Lord.

I have learned that prayer becomes my solution to such times, to loneliness and emptiness. For prayer to be effective in my life silence is necessary. In silence, I can give the Lord space to be part of my life. In silence, I can listen without interference. In silence, I can find the Lord and find myself.

Merton goes on. “Positive silence pulls us together as a person makes us realize, who we are, who we might be, and the distance between these two. In prayerful silence, listening to the Lord, we discover so much about ourselves. Who are we? Who are the loved people. Jesus demonstrates God’s great love for us through his life, sufferings, death and resurrection. We must live like a loved person. Where I allow God to be, I know that in my own life I have learned that prayer becomes my solution to such times, to loneliness and emptiness. For prayer to be effective in my life silence is necessary. In silence, I can give the Lord space to be part of my life. In silence, I can listen without interference. In silence, I can find the Lord and find myself. I have learned that prayer becomes my solution to such times, to loneliness and emptiness. For prayer to be effective in my life silence is necessary. In silence, I can give the Lord space to be part of my life. In silence, I can listen without interference. In silence, I can find the Lord and find myself.
What is God whispering to you?

Bishop LaValley’s homily for the celebration of the Feast of St. Joseph at the Sisters of St. Joseph Motherhouse

What is God whispering to you?

That’s a question Pope Francis asked a crowd gathered at St. Joseph’s Seminary in Dunwoodie, during his 2015 pastoral visit to the United States. What prompted the question was the divine revelations that that seminary’s namesake, St. Joseph, experienced in his dreams.

Today’s Gospel (Mt.1:16,18-21,24) tells the story of one such dream about which we are all very familiar. It concerns the dilemma St. Joseph found himself in regarding his relationship with his betrothed, pregnant Mary and the whispers of a divine messenger. Joseph needed to make a decision. He acted upon what the divine messenger told him.

So, what is God whispering to you?

I thought this might be a helpful question to reflect upon on this occasion of celebrating your patron saint, St. Joseph who overcame fear and confusion by responding, with total trust, to the whisperings of God through a dream.

Do I have Joseph’s trust, particularly when fear and confusion seem like constant unwelcome guests in my life? Am I tuned in to receive and to act upon divine whispers? Do I dare pay attention to what God might be revealing to me?

I think one way of responding to this question is to ask myself: “Is God, God for me? Or have I become God for me? Or is there some other person or object or habit or an addiction, ruling my life?”

When I no longer pay attention to the voice of Me, LaValley alight, I can begin to hear the gentle, soft voice of my Lord. Do I have faith enough in God’s very existence, to allow God to be God for me? I pray, in every circumstance of my life, for confidence and trust in God’s very existence. Then my ears and my heart begin to hear God’s voice because I know God is real and present. It seems to me, that’s raw, bare-bones faith—believing with every bone of body that there is a God, one God, and it’s not me.

And then I pray in every circumstance, for confidence and trust in God’s Providence - in God’s plan for me. You see, sometimes we can get so preoccupied with day-to-day planning for our future, that they - my plans for me - distract me from being attentive to what plans the Lord might be whispering to me.

In every circumstance, I pray for confidence and trust in God’s plan for me. I remember Jesus’ words in Matthew’s Gospel (10:31), “So do not be afraid; you are worth more than many sparrows.”

It is good every day to ask the question: With all my being, do I trust totally that God exists, that God has a loving plan for me, personally?

With all my being do I trust that God will protect me in every situation I find myself in?

My sisters and brothers in Christ, in your prayer - know of God’s existence, His loving plan for you - you personally, and His desire to hold you dearly, keeping you close.

I’m sure that at times, like me, you probably find yourselves just a little confused, maybe a bit scared and unsure about what tomorrow has in store for you. Have you heard God whispering to you? What prevents you from hearing Him? Do you expect divine revelation during your prayer time?

Maybe you have low expectations when it comes to divine messages. What noise from “out there” drowns out any hope of the divine whisper from having a chance of touching my heart? Worries about personal health, community life, family problems, ministry woes get all my attention, perhaps. Worries and anxieties muffle my ability to hear any divine message.

What could possibly prevent me from hearing the message, misinterpreting the message, denying that there is a message?

Maybe I have low expectations for my prayer life. I don’t “hear voices” when I pray, but my heart does stir, in the quiet of prayer.

Maybe I am impatient with God. I expect quick results to my prayer or maybe I fear what God might be trying to tell me, so I welcome distractions.

Maybe the divine whisper coming my way become distorted, ‘filtered’ by my own agenda, selfishness, pride, comfort, jealousy. My hearing becomes defective because what the Lord has to say may demand too much from me. My hearing may be very selective. I hear what I want to hear because I serve as my own God and I figure my plans are God’s plans are or should be. Lent is a perfect time to take a look at our individual prayer life and determine, through the grace of God, where it might need some tweaking.

Doesn’t St. Joseph provide us with a wonderful example of paying attention to the divine messages that the Lord sends all of us?

Whether it’s at quiet time before the Blessed Sacrament, whether it’s in the midst of our ministry, perhaps it’s in the comforting words, witness or challenging words of another, we seek to do the Father’s will and follow Jesus.

Can you hear Jesus whispering to you? I wonder, what kind of “hearing aid” do I need?

Pope Francis wrote that “if the consecrated life wants to maintain its prophetic mission and its fascination, it must maintain the freshness and novelty of the centrality of Jesus...and show the beauty of following Christ and radiate hope and joy.” I would argue that that can only happen if my heart and soul is tuned into the divine whisperings. Blessed Feast Day everybody! St. Joseph pray for us.

Funeral held March 11 for Sr. Margaret Turner, GNSH

HUNTINGTON VALLEY, PA. — A Mass of Christian Burial for Grey Nun Sister Margaret Turner, 89, was held March 11 at Holy Redeemers Sisters Chapel. The former Sister St. George, died March 6 at St. Joseph’s Manor, Meadowbrook, Pennsylvania, in the 71st year of her religious life.

Daughter of the late Henry K. and Julia Jones Turner, Margaret Jean was born March 6, 1927, in Gouverneur. Growing up in northern New York, she attended Morris-town Central High School for three years but graduated from St. Mary’s Academy, Ogdensburg in 1946, entering the Grey Nuns of the Sacred Heart that same year.

She later received an RN degree from Champlain Valley Hospital School of Nursing, Plattsburgh. Her ministry spanned 50 years in the field of health-related care in Kodiak, Alaska; Plattsburgh, Ogdensburg, and Buffalo as well as in Philadelphia and Yardley, Pennsylvania.

North Country assignments included Champlain Valley Hospital, Plattsburgh; St. Joseph’s Home and A. Barton Hepburn Hospital in Ogdensburg.

Sister Margaret returned to the Motherhouse in 1991, serving for the next 10 years as driver for the sisters, as telephone operator and receptionist. When failing health and loss of most of her sight necessitated her retirement in 2001, her days included a ministry of prayer and receptionist for an additional 13 years.

She returned to the North Country and the Sisters’ Camp on the St. Lawrence River as often as she was able, to visit and vacation over the years.

Her brother, Emmett K Turner, predeceased her.

Donations in memory of Sister Margaret may be made to the Grey Nuns of the Sacred Heart, 14500 Bustedon Ave., Philadelphia, PA 19116.

Funeral held for Sr. Marie Elizabeth Cote, SCSL, 79

LEVIS, QUEBEC — A Mass of Christian Burial for Sister Jacqueline Cote, 79, a Sister of Charity of St. Louis, was held March 6 at the Chapel of Louise-Elizabeth House. She died at the Louise-Elizabeth House of the Sisters of Charity of St. Louis March 2 in her 58th year of religious life.

The daughter of Ovila Cote and of Queenie Byrne, she was born at the Saints-Martyrs-Canadiens Parish in Quebec. Sister Jacqueline was known as Sister Marie-Elizabeth when she served in the Diocese of Ogdensburg. She taught at Our Lady of Victory in Plattsburgh as well as in Cheshire, Connecticut.

Environmental Stewardship
“I was thirsty and you gave me a drink.” Mt. 25:34-35b

In midst of Lent (which means “springtime of the soul,”) comes “springtime for the earth.” Along with spring comes rain to water the earth. While we may not welcome the ‘mud season’ that comes with it, it is the rain that brings along a fresh supply of water for all life.

While we see many places in our country and around the world devastated by floods, we also witness an increase in prolonged droughts that has a direct negative effect on farming and the quality of life, the prices of food increases, and lives of millions of people every year who must leave their homes and lands to search for places with water.

At the same time we witness high levels of contamination in rivers, lakes and other sources of drinking water that threaten the health and even the lives of millions of people.

In Laudato Si, Pope Francis states “… access to safe drinking water is a basic and universal human right, since it is essential to human survival and, as such, is a condition for the exercise of other human rights.” (430)

During this Lenten Season, we may ask ourselves “What does this have to do with me who lives in an area of the country surrounded by rivers, lakes and streams?”

As good stewards and neighbors the challenge confronting us is to conserve and to protect the quality of water in our neighborhoods. To learn more, consider attending a presentation on “Water, Nutrition, and Your Health,” Sunday March 26. See Calendar Events for more info.

Lenten Practice for this week: Count the number of pipes that bring both hot and cold water into your home. As a family write down a set of simple rules for using water responsibly. With your family offer a prayer of thanksgiving for the gift of water.
In September 2016, INSPIRE: CALLED TO LOVE posed greater attention to the universal call to holiness - for all persons, in all states of life. The Catechism of the Catholic Church (1603-4) affirms that "The vocation to marriage was written in the very nature of man and woman as they came from the hand of the Creator...[and]their mutual love becomes an image of the absolute and unfailing love with which God loves man. It is good, very good, in the Creator's eyes."

These reflections testify to that goodness as they discuss the joys and challenges of finding and following God in married life.

Nick and Mary

Nick and Mary Haas. Married 26 years/ 3 children. St. Andre Bessette, Malone

On our wedding day, we each felt that we Were marrying the person God wanted us to be with for the rest of our lives, although the word "vocation" did not come to mind at that time. In retrospect, it is clear that we were answering God's call to marriage.

Over the years, listening to sermons, attending workshops, and generally learning more about our faith, we began to see that we were actually living our vocation.

We realized we were meant to be together from the first day of our marriage: God put us together for a reason. Looking at our marriage as a vocation strengthens this fact.

Our family and our life together has been enriched by the love God has for us and the love we have for each other.

The way we interact as a couple has shown our children how to love, listen to, and forgive one another.

The vocation of marriage strengthens not only the family, but the community as well. It is a witness to the loving grace that God has bestowed on his people.

Matt and Sarah

(Sarah) When we married, I did not think of it as a vocation, but I did feel I was where God was calling me to be. I did not think of us making one another holy, but being with Matt made me feel closer to God.

(Matt) I recognized marriage as being a vocation, but I didn't have a very deep understanding of what this meant, because I was not yet a confirmed Catholic at the time. I knew I wanted God to be the foundation of our marriage and to support us in growing closer to him.

(Sarah) I think when we had children the realization that marriage is a vocation really sank in. Several months into marriage I realized we were making one another holier as our faults were no longer hidden and we had to address them. It is easy to pretend you are perfect when you don't have someone who knows you so completely.

(Matt) Having children gave the vocation of marriage a whole new meaning and made us focus even more on working together as one. Learning about God's vision for marriage through NFP classes and studying the Theology of the Body really gave us a deeper understanding about how to live out this vocation through love.

(Matt) I think understanding marriage as our vocation has really strengthened our marriage because it's helped us remember we're not in it for ourselves. We don't worry about keeping score or whether we're being loved well because loving each other so deeply and unconditionally has allowed us to develop more and more trust.

(Sarah) In reflecting on vocations at the Vocation Summit, I realized my view of marriage has really grown in our years of marriage.

In the past I believed those called to a religious vocation had a "higher" calling and were holier than lay people. I now realize being married and a parent is not a lesser calling than the religious life, nor is it a higher calling than the single life. It is a different calling. We are all called to grow closer to Christ daily and share his love with others.

As a wife and mother, it's my husband and children who most challenge me to be less selfish and more Christ-like.

Brian and Monique
Deacon Brian and Monique Dwyer. Married 13 years/5 children. Catholic Community of Burke and Chateaugay.

Monique and I met at Church many years ago, but the whole idea of vocation may not have been at the forefront of our minds. Mostly the word vocation was used to pray for ordained or religious vocations. We always tried our best to follow the plan God had marked out for us, but in 2003, “vocation” may not have been what we thought we were committing ourselves to.

In the early days of our marriage, Monique and I were eager to begin a family and to continue to serve the Church as God would see fit. When we were blessed with our firstborn and revealed in the glory of new life, the concept of vocation was taking shape as we were responsible for a precious life and knew that our ultimate goal was to get that child(ren) to heaven one day.

We were accepting our responsibility to train our kids in the faith and to build a home on the solid foundation of Christ - and to hand on the faith to our children and so make our corner of the world a better place.

God has continued to bless our family and so to bless our marriage. Children are the supreme gift of marriage and have taught us much about being good parents through their simple acts of faith and charity.

We often overthink things, but our children have taught us that it is childlike faith, simplicity, and openness that lead to real holiness.

We look forward to all that God has in store for our family as we continue our journey of faith and serving the Church as family.

Henry and Dayna
Deacon Henry and Dayna

Deacon Brian and Monique Dwyer
The day that Henry and I said, “I do”, we were already in awe of the gift of each other that God had given us. We knew we were committing ourselves to each other, totally, faithfully, freely and faithfully, until death would separate us.

We knew that we would hold on to God as the center of our marriage and never let go. We knew marriage was a vocation, and we embraced it enthusiastically.

Still, as scripture says, “eye has not seen, ear has not heard, what God has ready for those who love him...”; our lives are more blessed than we could have ever imagined on our very happy wedding day.

We have been blessed to have eight beautiful children to raise, who have brought us more joy than we could have ever dreamed. We have a lovely daughter in law and two grandchildren, who are evidence of God’s abundant love for us.

Through the years, God has given us incredible opportunities to serve Him and His people. We immediately joined the Family Guggenheim family and have been part of it for more than 20 years. The love we were given through the Guggenheim family, with the leadership of Deacon Gary and Gayle Frank, encouraged us in countless ways as we raised our many little ones. We heard God calling us to serve Him as a family and we became part of the Family Guggenheim Staff fourteen years ago.

There, we have always received far more from the other families than we feel we have given. God has used Guggenheim as the lifeline that has brought us to so many other blessings within the Church, through dearest faithful friends, and their example of sacramental marriage and parenting for discipleship.

God, speaking through these faithful friends, led us to Worldwide Marriage Encounter, North Country Mission of Hope, and Franciscan University. With Gayle and Gary’s support, we made it through the formation process and Henry was ordained a deacon in 2013. Our greatest ministry together has been marriage preparation. We believe there is no greater need for our Church, our world, than for marriages to get it right. We are honored and truly blessed to witness to the blessings of marriage, and encourage young couples to embrace the grace of the Sacrament of Marriage.

Tom and Maureen
Tom and Maureen Dumont. Married 48 years/6 children, 13 grandchildren. St. Andre Bessette, Malone
Our wedding day was our answer to God’s call for us to serve him and bring more lives into this world to love and serve him.

The call for our vocation was very clear years before we were married as we drew closer to Our Lord and to one another with mutual love and respect. The Holy Spirit was leading our lives toward each other and guiding us to be together.

Our Lord, Our Lady, and the Holy Spirit have guided us and strengthened us through many challenging times, always helping us to follow God’s will.

We raised our six children the same way we were raised: God and his will come first! They all knew that their core values and love were based on faith and trust.

Of course, it was not always easy. When our five-year-old Aimee was diagnosed with leukemia, we were shocked and heartbroken. I asked God to let her live and do great things for him—which he did. After five long years of chemotherapy, she was healthy; today she is mother of three and an oncology nurse!

Our years together have been filled with so many blessings; they could fill a book. Looking back fills us with awe and thanksgiving!

Dan and Patricia
Dan and Patricia Tower, Married 26 years, 2 children, St. Andre Bessette, Malone.

Though certainly a lifetime commitment, our marriage spoke more “storybook” to me than it did “vocation.” I knew my husband was honest, hardworking, and had the integrity to be a wonderful leader in our family. My faith had always been important to me, but I did not quite realize that marriage would be a walk with God toward heaven and would require daily sacrifice.

But the fairytale ended just after the honeymoon when a freak stovetop accident spewed hot spaghetti sauce over everything in sight, including Dan’s new puppy, and ruined the stove. The unhappiness that followed ended my fairytale ideals.

Next, while using NFP we waited for two anxious years before conceiving our daughter 21 months later. Then the children and I were in a head-on collision when a vehicle crossed the center lane. Through a two year ordeal of constant pain, and struggles with fear and disappointment, the reality of marriage came back with resounding clarity.

We realize more and more that God gives the sacrament of marriage abundant blessings, but we have to remember to ask for them. Our marriage has not been a perfect one, but one with much love.

Our marriage has not been one without suffering, but one with blessings too numerous to count. It may not have been what we expected, but the Lord has had a hand in it every step of the way. When society tells you to give up on your marriage vocation, remember: you have a spouse to laugh with, trust, lean on and confide in. But don’t expect them to be perfect and fill every desire of your heart—that place is reserved for the Lord!

For wedding memories as precious as your childhood dreams...

ON THE PATH TO A SACRAMENTAL MARRIAGE

By Stephen Tartaglia
Diocesan director of family life

My niece was married last July. I was amazed at how strongly I felt God’s presence at the ceremony. My niece and her husband are non-Catholic Christians, both baptized and serious about living out the Christian faith as they understand it.

I’ve attended a number of wedding ceremonies that were overdone and expensive, and left feeling like I just saw a show instead of a holy sacrament. The experience at my niece’s ceremony was different for me. It was prayerful, peaceful, and joyful.

I was acutely aware of the presence of God and it strengthened the love I have for my own wife and family.

This called to mind the difference between ‘Natural Marriage’ and ‘Holy Matrimony.’

‘Marriage’ means a joining together of two items. For example, the marriage of chocolate and peanut butter gives us peanut butter cups, arguably the best candy ever invented, and although they come in pairs, unfortunately they do not multiply and get miniatures.

Natural and sacramental marriages both have as their purpose the joining together of a man and a woman for the pursuit of some temporal good. Historically, the main idea is that natural marriage as an institution is good for everyone. It generates new life, and provides for the needs of the children in an environment that is stable and has the greatest likelihood of success.

A sacramental marriage has the additional purpose of helping the spouses and their children get to heaven. Holy Matrimony offers the kind of help that other Sacraments give, namely grace. God becomes present in real, concrete ways in the lives of the couple and their family.

Parents can help their children to ‘catch’ God’s plan for marriage in several ways

The love between a man and a woman in a sacramental marriage is said to reflect God’s love in that it is full, free, faithful and fruitful. This love, first experienced in the family, extends outward to the community.

Unlike natural marriages, which are simply contractual agreements which can be broken and ended, Holy Matrimony is permanent because Sacraments cannot be undone. You can’t be unbaptized or unconfirmed. A priest may be laicized, but he remains an ordained priest who does not perform priestly ministry. The Eucharist cannot become unconsecrated. Likewise, the bond that a couple forge in Holy Matrimony cannot be undone.

Some people mistakenly believe an annulment is just a ‘Catholic Divorce.’ To help them understand, I ask them to consider another scenario. There is a significant difference between the Eucharist and unconsecrated bread and wine, even though they look identical. What if a host falls onto the credence table and is accidentally left off the altar during Mass? After the Mass the host is discovered by the sacristan who questions what to do with it. The priest investigates and eventually declares that the host is unconsecrated. He did not do anything to the host to remove the consecration, the consecration never happened. Although it looks the same as a consecrated host, it remains naturally bread only.

The same idea applies to the sacrament of marriage. A couple can have a relationship that appears to be a sacramental marriage but it isn’t because something was missing at the time of their marriage ceremony. In those cases, the couple may have a natural marriage, but not a sacramental one.

The same skills that make natural marriage easier and better also benefit sacramental marriages: financial management, effective communication, good parenting, conflict resolution, etc. But to have a successful sacramental marriage the couple must receive and live out the sacrament with the proper disposition for the grace to be effective.

This ‘proper disposition’ is usually developed within the family, from the time that the children are conceived up until their engagement. This time period, called the remote stage of marital preparation, is when children learn to give and receive love, and learn to respond to God’s promptings in their life through the catechesis and example of their parents.

Parents can help their children to “catch” God’s plan for marriage in several ways, such as sharing personal stories about their own faith experiences, guiding their children in making moral decisions, praying regularly as a family, reading the Bible, the Catechism, and other age-appropriate spiritual books, choosing good movies and television programming to view as a family, and monitoring the use of technology. Modeling courtesies such as please, thank you, I’m sorry, and I forgive you, are also important.

It is essential for families to go to Mass and Reconciliation regularly. Parents must teach chastity through their words and their behaviors, and communicate that marriage is the proper context that God established for physical intimacy.

This is challenging because our culture works against the message of chastity, but it is an investment that yields countless blessings.
The multiplication of ice skates

It is an understatement that Guggenheim changed our lives. From our first summer, there, in 1994, with our oldest Zack just turning two years old, it became the “center of our lives,” where the center of our lives, our faith in Christ, became alive.

Guggenheim, and the people there, became a physical home that we returned to every year, to refocus and gain strength for the challenges of family life.

And, there were challenges!

When our twins were born, we had a six-year-old, and four children under four years old, four children in diapers.

There were challenges, sleepless nights, messy days, and moments of exasperation.

I would love to be able to say that I handled endless demands of dying to self with grace and gentleness.

I would love to be able to say that I handled endless demands of dying to self with grace and gentleness.

Although grace and gentleness was my goal, many times I fell so far from a mother of virtue, that I would be overcome with shame.

Sometimes the desire to be the mother I was called to be was so impossible that I would surrender in bouts of crying.

One episode of defeat that I will never forget, was preparing our family for a Wadhams Winter Weekend. We were all so excited to be with our Guggenheim families for some winter fun and prayer.

In preparing for the seven of us, I realized that we did not have enough ice skates for each child. The frustration grew as I would find several pairs either too small or too large that fit no one. My determination to be the “perfect mother” led me to tell Henry that I was going out to buy everyone new ice skates.

After trying to stay calm as I raised the stress level in the home, he finally snapped and told me we were not buying brand new ice skates for five children.

I felt like a complete failure, and irrational fear took over. I cried and declared that we were not going to the Wadhams Winter Weekend because our family was a failure!

Yes, I went to my room, slammed the door, sat in a chair and cried. I remember the feelings colliding in my heart; they come at those times when our hurts, exhaustion, and failures bring us to our knees.

In those times, I want to give up. I tell God that I cannot take the path to holiness any longer, and I quit!

...but sometimes the desire to be the mother I was called to be was so impossible that I would surrender in bouts of crying.

When one spouse is at that place, the other can choose to throw in the towel as well and add fuel to the fire, and have a regrettable episode. Henry chose to love me. He came to me, took my face in his hands, and promised me all would be well. He dried my tears, and made me laugh as we ventured to Wadhams Hall.

Of course, the peace of God poured out us that weekend. We prayed, made the Holy Family out of snow, and went on a hay ride. We did go ice skating, and as Henry promised, all was well, when all our friends brought their baskets of mismatched, wrong sized skates to share! We had more than enough.

(We did accidentally leave one child at Wadhams Hall when we drove to the ice rink, but another family brought him before we even realized we had left him! Father Chris Looby rode in our vehicle and it threw the whole head count off!)

It was to this day, one of the most blessed weekends that we have ever had as a family. Those times when we feel we have nothing left, yet risk and reach out, and we choose to love our spouse, God’s grace overflows; we trust and we heal, and continue to answer God’s call to holiness.

NFP: a wonderful wedding gift!

By Angelo and Suzanne Pietropaoli
Diocesan NFP directors

Congratulations! Perhaps you are newly married, or maybe you are still busy getting ready for the big day. Issues and adjustments of all kinds are keeping you crazy-busy, and it is easy to let some things just slide.

Even so, starting a new life together is an important time for the two of you to have a heart to heart talk about family planning.

Really? Wasn’t that all settled at the doctor’s office? Well, that is the first thing to consider: being a healthy fertile woman is not a disease that needs medical treatment. In fact, any woman can learn to understand her own fertility through easily observable physical signs. This knowledge gives her an entirely safe, highly effective (98-99%), healthy and readily reversible way to plan a family, simply by abstaining during the fertile time.

Furthermore, since a woman is fertile only a few days in each cycle and a man is continuously fertile, it hardly makes sense that she should bear the burden of risky contraceptives.

So, yes: learn all you can, even if you may need a magnifying glass to read the fine print in the package inserts. This information will alert you to some of the immediate medical hazards faced by women using the Pill and other chemical contraceptives, including Norplant, patches, rings, IUD’s, Yaz, and Plan B.

In addition to raising the risk of blood clots, heart attacks, stroke, gallbladder disease, and depression, these chemicals substantially increase the lifetime risk of breast cancer. (See www.bcpinstitute.org for more on the Pill/breast cancer link. Google http://thepillkills.org to learn more about the hundreds of side effects associated with chemical contraceptives.)

It is also important to realize that chemical contraceptives have abortifacient potential, which is even greater with the IUD.

NFP is a lifestyle that has the potential to enrich couple communication, deepen their love, and strengthen their faith and families.

After all, knowing the facts is essential to good decision making. And there are other things to consider as well—like the effect contraception can have on your relationship, especially in the long term.

When you stand before God at the altar on your wedding day, you promise yourselves to one another in a love that is free, permanent, faithful, and fruitful. This is the kind of love with which God loves us, and it is the unconditional love for which we all long.

It is the love that God intends should be embodied in every act of sexual intercourse, an act that by its nature says: “I love you. I give all of myself to you forever, and I accept all of you.”

Contracepted intercourse says something different: “I love you, but I withhold my fertility/I will not accept your fertility.”

In this way, married love can become conditional and divisive rather than uniting the couple in complete and joyful acceptance of one another.

Little wonder then, that the Church calls our attention to nature, to the way God made us, to that awesome design that allows us to live in harmony with our fertility.

The couple then uses this knowledge to postpone or to achieve pregnancy according to their family planning intention in a way that is safe, healthy, and effective. NFP is a lifestyle that has the potential to enrich couple communication, deepen their love, and strengthen their faith and families.

Modern methods of Natural Family Planning have been developed through more than half a century of careful scientific and statistical research. A variety of methodologies offer real choices for couples wanting to learn and live Natural Family Planning. From in-person to online classes, from CyclePro charting software to new apps, NFP is more accessible than ever before. But in any form, NFP remains the option of choice for couples concerned with respecting nature, one another, and the loving plan of the Creator. Watertown Knights support seminarians

WATERTOWN - A “Pennies from Heaven” fund has been established by the Watertown Knights of Columbus Council #259 for the support of the education of seminarians.

With “Pennies from Heaven”

This past September, the council donated $10,000 to the Sacred Heart Foundation which helps to finance the education of seminarians around the world. Council members collect the “Pennies from Heaven” funds monthly from the local Watertown parishes. The funds are managed by the Board of Trustees of the Watertown K of C Council and are used when requests are received to aid seminarians in their studies.

The success of this program has resulted in supporting men studying for the priesthood for the Dioceses of Ogdensburg and, with the donation to the Sacred Heart Foundation, support will be given to Missionaries of the Sacred Heart seminarians around the world.

Because of the success of the “Pennies from Heaven” program the Watertown Knights of Columbus have recently partnered with the Northern New York Community Foundation to maintain their “Pennies from Heaven” funds and has established a fund for “Catholic Education” in Watertown.

Members of the Watertown Council will continue their monthly collections with one month for the education of seminarians and the next month for education needs in the Catholic elementary school.

17 Republicans seek House support for ‘conservative environmental stewardship’

By Dennis Sadowski
Catholic News Service

WASHINGTON (CNS) -- Seventeen Republicans in the House of Representatives are calling on their colleagues to express a commitment to "conservative environmental stewardship." Rep. Elise Stefanik of New York introduced a resolution in the chamber March 15 with 16 co-sponsors. At least four are Catholic.

A spokesman for the Catholic Climate Covenant expressed support for the measure, saying it could widen the discussion of environmental concerns and climate change in particular.

“We're very encouraged about this as the first step toward bipartisan dialogue,” said Jose Aguto, associate director of the organization, which has worked with House Republicans on the measure.

“It is heeding Pope Francis’ appeal to dialogue on climate change,” he said.

The pope discussed care for creation and the importance of elected leaders working together for the common good on the many issues facing the country during his address to Congress Sept. 24, 2015.

The speech came three months after the release of “Laudato Si’, on Care for Our Common Home,” the pope's encyclical on the environment and human interaction with the earth and its inhabitants.

“We want this to be the foundation stone, to be an expression of Catholic concern about climate change not only to Congress and the administration, but to the nation and to the world that we care about this,” Aguto told Catholic News Service.

“We are seeking to lift up the Catholic voice of concern about climate change in the U.S. community,” he added. "We see this as a moral call to Congress."

The resolution's introduction drew support from the chairmen of two committees of the U.S. Conference of Catholic Bishops.

The resolution is introduced by Rep. Elise Stefanik who represents the 21st Congressional district where the Diocese of Ogdensburg is located.

Bishop Frank J. Dewane of Venice, Florida, chairman of the Committee on Domestic Justice and Human Development, and Bishop Oscar Cantu of Las Cruces, New Mexico, chairman of the Committee on International Justice and Peace, said in a statement that conversation among members of Congress about climate change and the environment is important for the country.

"The Catholic Church has consistently been an advocate for environmental stewardship and Pope Benedict XVI presciently called care for creation a "sign of the times." Environmental challenges are not going away and it is a sign of hope to see political leaders rise to meet a challenge that is the common responsibility of all," Bishop Dewane said.

Bishop Cantu said the representatives who introduced the resolution demonstrate that “stewardship of creation is an issue that rises above political partisanship."

"It is in the interest of lawmakers in all parties to recognize the protection of the environment as an important responsibility and to explore the numerous rationales for taking action," he said. "This resolution provides an important avenue toward answering the appeal in 'Laudato Si’” for a new dialogue … that includes everyone."

The introduction comes as Congress is bitterly divided on the issue of climate change and its causes. Some members are seeking aggressive action to limit the release of greenhouse gases that get trapped in the atmosphere while others have claimed the science remains under debate.

The resolution calls for the House to commit "to working constructively … to create and support economically viable and broadly supported private and public solutions to study and address the causes and effects of measured changes to global and regional climates, including mitigating efforts and efforts to balance human activities that have been found to have an impact."

The Catholic Climate Covenant is undertaking a campaign to gain support for the resolution to be adopted, Aguto said.

Outreach is planned to parishes, schools, religious congregations.

A letter supporting the resolution from 12 Catholic organizations was to be sent to Congress after the introduction, Aguto said. The organizations are asking representatives to join the bipartisan House Climate Solutions Caucus and are offering their assistance on the climate change front.

A similar resolution was introduced by Rep. Christopher Gibson, R-New York, in September 2015, days before Pope Francis addressed Congress on a number of topics, including care for the environment. The resolution was referred to the House Subcommittee on Energy and Power where no action was taken.
Evangelization, mercy, encounter

Pope Francis waves from the central balcony of St. Peter's Basilica following his election March 13, 2013. March 13 marked the fourth anniversary of the Argentine cardinal's election as pope.

The nuncio said Pope Francis' apostolic exhortation "Evangelii Gaudium" ("The Joy of the Gospel") is based on the closing document of the 2007 meeting of the Latin American bishops' council in Aparecida, Brazil. Then-Archbishop Bergoglio led the editing committee for the document. A document intended for the Latin American bishops "became the patrimony of the whole church," Archbishop Pierre said.

He said Pope Francis' experience living in a "peripheral" country helped him elabo­rate a different kind of opinion for the poor than the one envisioned three decades earlier at the Medellin, Colombia, meeting of the Latin American bish­ops. "The reality is the people had been evangelized so deeply that the culture was filled with the Gospel," he said.

Because the church does not play the same role in people's lives it once did, the church today is challenged to help people encounter Christ and rediscover the presence of God in their own lives. It must be missionary and not self-referential, the nuncio said.

SC呕吐ETURE REFLECTIONS

The Fourth Sunday in Lent is filled with light and celebrated in joy. In fact, we call it “Laetare Sunday.” At the beginning of the Mass today, the Church commands us: “Rejoice!” (Laetare). If your parish is fortunate enough to own a set of rose-colored vestments, the celebrant will probably wear them at Mass. It’s even o.k. to have flowers on the altar today. Why all this joy? Because it’s break time!

The readings are all about walking in the light, all about seeing things and people as God sees them. In the first reading, Samuel is forced to choose a new and better king than Saul. He visits Jesse, who lines up six stalwart sons. Which one is it, Samuel wonders? What a puzzle! Without the help of the Holy Spirit, he would never have chosen the seventh and youngest son, David. In the second reading, St. Paul tells us to live as “children of the light.” Light brings goodness. Light exposes the shameful works of darkness. And then comes a very long Gospel which tells the story of the man born blind. After denying that the man is blind because of some terrible sin, Jesus bends over, scoops up a little clay, and smears it on the eyes of the blind man. You’d think the Pharisees would have been delighted and grateful at this miracle, but because of their own spiritual blindness, they quibble and complain that Jesus has broken the Sabbath rest. Even though they consider themselves enlightened scholars, they’re really blind. They did not see from the heart. The newly-discovered sight of the blind man is also a metaphor for faith that comes when God draws us out of darkness to light.

If Laetare Sunday is a time to rejoice, then we rejoice today that we have light in us which comes from our Baptism and from the lived experience of sharing faith in our families, from having our sins forgiven in the Sacrament of Reconciliation. Best of all, we are able to see with the eyes of Jesus our bodies and souls are joined with the Body and Blood of Jesus in the Holy Eucharist.

Sometimes we are unaware of the light of our faith, and we slip back into darkness. We misjudge people, seeing only the exterior. We do not see as Jesus sees. From this comes rash judgment, a critical spirit, and unforgiveness. In this darkness, we cannot even see ourselves as God sees us. We know now that its time to get ourselves back in the light.

This is a good Sunday to resolve to shun the darkness, and see all things in the light of faith. After all, as members of His Body, we are the light of the world, that can help adjust the vision of those we live with. Let’s rejoice today, and resolve to live always in the light.

Normalizing abortion for teenage girls

Teen Vogue is a magazine for teenage girls that focuses on fashion, makeup, shopping and pop culture. Their on-line magazine contains a slide show titled “What to Get a Friend Post-Abortion.” It’s essentially a top ten list of best gifts to give a friend after she’s had an abortion.

It details the best movie to stream to help with the cramps, the newest under garments to help soak up the blood, and an “angry uterus” heating pad to ease the pain. It offers suggestions for hobbies to keep your friend’s mind occupied: a sign-up sheet to become an abortion clinic escort, a “we won’t go back” needlepoint project, and a Supreme Court Justice Ruth Bader Ginsburg coloring book. (I am not making this up.)

The piece is so offensive and insensitive that it’s hard to put into words. It is transparent in its attempt to sell abortion to young people, to market it as a mainstream “good,” and to treat it as casually as a manicure. It’s downright celebratory over abortion, ensuring readers who abort that they are smart, strong, powerful, and resilient change-makers. “There is nothing to be ashamed of or feel guilty about” they instruct the children — yes, children — who read this propaganda.

Teen Vogue advises girls that if their BFF chooses the abortion pill, she may experience cramps that feel “like two throbbing hot balls of lead are trying to escape your body.”

No, it’s not lead that leaves your body in an abortion, it’s a baby. A small, defenseless, unborn human baby. There is nothing strong or powerful about destroying an innocent unborn baby, especially when it’s yours. Abortion is not a tooth extraction. It’s not like getting your nails done. Even the U.S. Supreme Court, which Lord knows invented the right to abortion all those years ago, has admitted that abortion is unlike other medical procedures, “because no other procedure involves the purposeful termination of a potential life.” (Harris vs. McRae, 1980)

Despite the abortion industry and pop culture denials, abortion is a profound life-altering event. Don’t least know what abortion is and get all the facts before they make their “choice”? Shouldn’t they be informed that at some point post-abortion they may indeed feel sorrow, doubt and shame, and that counseling and other assistance is available to them?

“Does modern feminism have so little confidence in women that it has to brainwash teenage girls into believing that abortion is the normal natural choice, and that the choice doesn’t matter at all? It’s the post-abortion gifts that really count.

I don’t know about you, but this kind of thing just makes me want to cry. Our teenage children are being fed fake news, and it breaks my heart, because at some point in their lives, the reality of their abortion is likely to break theirs.

Dear Heart of Jesus, in the past I have asked for many favors. This time I ask you this very special one. Take it Dear Jesus and place it within your own broken heart where your Father sees it. Then in our merciful eyes it will become your favor, not mine. Amen.

Disney's live-action adaptation of its beloved 1991 animated film "Beauty and the Beast" arrives in theaters amid a swirl of controversy over the updating of one of its characters into an openly gay man.

The decision of the studio, director Bill Condon ("Dreamgirls"), and screenwriters Stephen Chbosky and Evan Spiliotopoulos to reimagine LeFou (Josh Gad), sidekick of the villainous Gaston (Luke Evans), as Disney's so-called "first gay character" is a regrettable one. A cherished family film character is a regrettable trade for an underlying agenda that is firmly at odds with Christian values.

Admittedly, many grown moviegoers will take LeFou's transformation in stride. "Beauty and the Beast," however, is a must-see film in its character. A spirited maiden in a French village who longs for excitement.

"I want adventure in the great-wide somewhere," she warbles. "I want so much more than they've got planned!"

Be careful what you wish for, dearie. No sooner does she spurn the advances of the vain hunter Gaston than Belle winds up imprisoned in a haunted castle, having swapped places with her kidnapped father, Maurice (Kevin Kline), Enter said Beast (Dan Stevens), aka The Prince. We learn in an extended prologue that this handsome royal was transferred into a horned (but infinitely more dapper) version of Chewbacca from the "Star Wars" franchise by Agathe (Hattie Morahan), a local enchantress, as punishment for his selfishness.

Agathe's curse extended to The Prince's staff, who became not furry creatures but household objects. These exceedingly loquacious items include Cogsworth (Ian McKellen), a stuffy mantel clock; Lumiere (Ewan McGregor), a dancing candelabra; twirling feather duster Plumette (Gugu Mbatha-Raw); Mrs. Potts (Emma Thompson), a motherly teapot; and her cup of a son, Chip (Nathan Mack); and musical duo Cadenza (Stanley Tucci), a harpsichord, and Garderobe (Audra McDonald), a wardrobe.

Only if Beauty grows to love the Beast will the spell be broken, which seems a very long shot for this odd couple. A courtship ensues -- with a nice lesson on looking beyond outward appearances for true love -- until a vengeful Gaston raises an angry mob to kill the Beast, casting doubt on a happy ending.

Even in the absence of the hot-button issue already discussed, young children might be frightened by several dark moments in the movie, including attacks by wolves and Gaston's violent assault on the Beast's castle. The film contains a few scenes of peril and action violence, a benign view of homosexual activity, and some sexual innuendo. The Catholic News Service classification is L -- limited adult audience, films whose problematic content many adults would find troubling. The Motion Picture Association of America rating is PG -- parental guidance suggested.

Catholic Heart Workcamp

Catholic Heart Workcamp (CHWC) has announced that it will be coming to Plattsburgh this summer, from June 25 to June 30.

This week-long service camp, being housed at Seton Catholic Central, is open to high school (entering 9th grade in Fall 2017) and college students.

During the week, campers will volunteer at various sites throughout the Plattsburgh area during the day and participate in fun, faith-building programs in the evening. Daily Mass, Adoration, Penance and prayer nourish campers for their work in the community.

The cost is $375 per person, which includes meals, lodging, transportation to the work sites, t-shirts and snacks.

Registration for the Plattsburgh camp may be made through managers Jocelyn Kelly and Samantha Poulin at chwc.ogdensburg@gmail.com or call Jocelyn at 518-651-0786.

More on prayers and pennies

Part 2

Welcome to National Prayer and Penny Week! This year, the Missionary Childhood Association celebrates National Prayer and Penny Week from March 19-24. This program is a prayer movement that serves as MCA’s Lenten prayer and sacrificial program for Grades K-8.

Last week’s NCC article featured days one through three of Prayer and Penny Week. This second excerpt below will highlight the prayers for the remaining days of four and five. Prayers are urgently needed for missionaries who have answered the call to spread the Gospel message “to the ends of the earth,” for those hearing about Jesus and for those who may be discerning their own missionary vocations.

While MCA depends greatly on the financial sacrifices of students in this country, prayer is of greatest importance. In fact, Pope Francis said that he too counts on the prayers and missionary commitment of children. During National Prayer Week, MCA invites students to remember children in the missions, especially those who are waiting to hear the “Good News” proclaimed as we pray together as a mission family here at home:

Day Four (Thursday)

God, our Father, Help us to be your witnesses and disciples and share the Good News of the Gospel with our lives. Jesus, our Lord, You teach us that all life is sacred. Strengthen us to witness every day to Your love with our words, actions and sacrifices. Holy Spirit, Giver of Life, as missionary disciples you invite us to share the Good News, cooperating with you and one another to walk with our brothers and sisters who live in poverty, loneliness, and despair. In a special way we ask You to bless all the missionaries sharing Your love. We send this prayer across the world in Jesus’ name. AMEN

Day Five (Friday)

God, our Father, Help us to be your witnesses and disciples and share the Good News of the Gospel with our lives. Jesus, our Lord, You teach us that all life is sacred. Strengthen us to witness every day to Your love with our words, actions and sacrifices.

Holy Spirit, Giver of Life, as missionary disciples you invite us to share the Good News, cooperating with you and one another to walk with our brothers and sisters who live in poverty, loneliness, and despair. In a special way we ask You to bless all the missionaries sharing Your love. We send this prayer across the world in Jesus’ name. AMEN
