God’s fatherly love

VATICAN CITY (CNS) - The mystery of God’s relationship with humankind is revolutionary in that Christians can look to him without fear as children to a loving father, Pope Francis said.

In teaching the Lord’s prayer, Jesus invites all Christians “to have the courage of calling God with the name ‘father,’” the pope said June 7 at his weekly general audience in St. Peter’s Square.

“This is the great revolution that Christianity ingrains into the religious psychology of man,” he said.

“The mystery of God who always fascinates us and makes us feel small but no longer frightens us, he doesn’t crush us, he doesn’t distress us,” Pope Francis told the crowd.

In his talk, the pope reflected on the theme of God’s fatherhood as a source of hope for Christians as conveyed in the prayer of the “Our Father.”

Capital campaign to begin

Bishop Terry R. LaValley has announced his decision to move forward with a capital campaign to be conducted in all parishes of the Diocese of Ogdensburg. The campaign is expected to generate up to $15 million over the next four years.

Bishop LaValley’s decision is in response to a feasibility study recommendation that the diocese undertake the campaign, with 75% of the total funds being directed to the needs of local parishes and 25% being directed to diocesan needs.

LAY MINISTERS ON RETREAT

Candidates who have completed the Formation for Ministry program in anticipation of the June 25 commissioning service at St. Mary’s Cathedral are shown while on retreat at Wadhams Hall in Ogdensburg in May. Preparations are underway for the next two-year Formation for Ministry program, featuring classes in Lake Placid, Carthage and Canton. Deacon Patrick Donahue, program coordinator for Formation for Ministry, will be leading information sessions in those three communities this month. See page 6 for the details.

EDITOR’S NOTE

A June full of joys

After two exciting weekends on the road – at a family wedding and a college reunion – it’s good to settle back into my own personal “ordinary time.”

Sharing stories with people from my past always makes me appreciate all the gifts of my “present.”

There aren’t many who can brag about a long loving marriage, accomplished kids, perfect grandchildren AND a very satisfying job.

I am blessed indeed.

And, traveling to different parts of the country certainly makes me appreciate how blessed we all are to live where we live.

Yes, the rainy spring brought challenges but the sun is shining today. The St. Lawrence River is high, but as beautiful as ever.

I know that mountains, lakes, rivers and sunshine are bringing joy to every corner of our diocese this month.

This is also a good time of year to take stock of all the extraordinary people of our diocese.

The merry months of May and June bring special celebrations as we salute graduates, jubilarians, lay ministers and, this year, a brand new priest.

In a couple of weeks, the gates of Guggenheim will open to welcome hundreds of young people for weeks of faith-building fun.

Parish picnics, fairs and festivals are all on the calendar. Let the merriment begin!

And, for me, seeing the faces on the front page of today’s paper – the lay ministers ready for their commissioning – is just about the greatest cause for gratitude in our North Country Church.

The generosity of these Catholics who traveled to classes every week for two years and gave up their Saturdays for workshops and retreats would be beyond comprehension for the average American.

But some of these remarkable people are my friends and their faith, hope and love doesn’t surprise me one bit.

I can’t wait to celebrate with them on June 25 when Bishop LaValley brings them into the every growing family of commissioned lay ministers.

We are all truly blessed indeed!

FATHER MUECH SAYS

Witnessing the Holy Spirit in our lives

Today, I would like to spend some time with you considering the Holy Spirit as the Holy Spirit has profoundly influenced my life. We have just celebrated the Pentecost and also recently had Confirmation here in the parish.

The Holy Spirit entered my life in Baptism and Confirmation. I am certain the Holy Spirit reached out to me leading me to my vocation, to study to become a priest.

My long adventure of study and preparation for the priesthood through the year of seminary study were never easy. The Holy Spirit brought into my life wonderful priests and professors – inspiring directors – and great classmates and friends to stand with me. This was the kind of support that made a great deal of difference in my life.

The Holy Spirit brought God’s grace and love alive in my life as a support for my decision to accept ordination as a priest. This was a decision to be ready to accept ministry as a priest for the Diocese of Ogdensburg. I know only too well how I have relied on the power of the Holy Spirit over the years of my priesthood. Also, I know well the good things I have been able to accomplish through the constant power of the Holy Spirit.

Every time I join with you and the people of my parish to celebrate Mass the Holy Spirit fills us all with peace, love and challenges us as we join in prayer. We are challenged by the Spirit to be transformed in God’s love, to take that love to those who need us.

I must add one thing here. I continue to be so saddened that too many who are participating at Mass do not realize or recognize the presence of the Holy Spirit with them.

Further, I am saddened that too many no longer join us at Mass anymore, no longer opening themselves to the power of the Holy Spirit. I know no answers for this situation. I do know from my experience how much I have found support and guidance from the Holy Spirit. How I wish that all will discover and experience the Holy Spirit.

Here, I would like to share with you something that St. Augustine wrote in describing a Christian. He said that a Christian is not someone who lives a life of following rules and regulations; rather a Christian is someone who lives by the constant promptings and directives of the Spirit of God who is within, around and upon us.

Personally, I know that there have been innumerable times I have experienced the Holy Spirit supporting and helping me. The Spirit has never failed me. Let me tell you, I know only too well that I never take any credit for something I do – a writing or a talk. I know only too well that the Holy Spirit has been there for me. I am eternally grateful to God’s love as expressed for me through the power of the Spirit. The Holy Spirit continues to help me to do what I must, to help others in need, to lead me to say the right thing.

Today, I am anxious to convince you and all others that you all continue to experience the power of the Holy Spirit as an everyday part of your life. I believe it is all about being honest and humble so that you realize how much you need God, that you realize how much you need the Holy Spirit to guide you to make the right decisions. Turn often to the guidance and leading love of the Holy Spirit.

One more thing in this regard: when Jesus came to the apostles after his Resurrection, he said to them, “Peace be with you. As the Father has sent me so I send you.” Then Jesus calls down the Holy Spirit upon them, “Receive the Holy Spirit, whose sins you forgive are forgiven them, and whose sins you retain are retained.”

The Holy Spirit enters my life and yours as God’s forgiveness. We are a blessed people. Our God loves us so much that Jesus came among us and died for us to demonstrate God’s love and forgiveness. We are a forgiven people God never gives up on us.

This is the involvement of the Holy Spirit in our lives every minute.
Homily for Father Michael Jablonski’s ordination to the priesthood May 27

“Simon, Son of John, do you love me? Feed my sheep.” Love of our Lord precedes any fruitful service in His name. This is the lesson which Jesus teaches in our familiar Gospel story from St. John. Here the Resurrected Christ reinstates Peter to the apostolic office from which he had fallen. Jesus addresses him as Simon, reminding him of the critical moments when Christ had first given him a new name and a new authority and had warned Peter of his impending fall. The Lord asked for a love of devotion, and all He got was a love of emotion. But even that Jesus does not reject. It is not enough, Jesus says, but it is enough to start.

The very life of the priest is, or should be, a hymn of God’s love. Even if your vocal chords don’t provide you with perfect pitch, your priestly life is to be a song of praise to God in the midst of the cacophony of this world’s noise.

Your priestly vocation, Deacon Mike, is a love story. After hearing Fr. Lucia’s attestation on behalf of the People of God and in light of my own personal observation, I know you love Jesus and His holy people. Right now, though, Jesus might be saying “It’s not enough” (It never is, considering our sinfulness!), but it is enough for you to start to share that love as an ordained priest of God. God’s love story must be told. And the very life of the priest is, or should be, a hymn of God’s love. Even if your vocal chords don’t provide you with perfect pitch, your priestly life is to be a song of praise to God in the midst of the cacophony of this world’s noise. Deacon Mike, make your priestly life a song of praise to God. Let those whom you meet and serve join in the refrain of your priestly song of praise to God.

When love goes out of our heart, we begin to harden the things we are obliged to do, or at least we cover up our deep feeling of indifference with the metallic ring of formalism or the harshness of rigidity. We become mere functionaries, doing what priests are expected to do, and our folks, God’s fragile, yet holy people, suffer through such superficiality. Our people know when their priests are not in love with God. Our homilies become scoldings, dissertations or entertainments. The doorbell becomes an interruption to my leisure, to my time. We greet the visitor with a sigh. Our non-verbal communication screams: “unwanted, unwelcome intruder!” Our parishioners are not disturbers; they are our heart, our body, our blood. They call us “Father.” That must mean something. To minister at the altar of love with an unloving heart; to belong to a vocation of self-sacrificing love while seeking our own comfort is to offer hollow, scandalous words from the pulpit and in the public square. You see, love begins when duty finishes. It is a giving of a shirt after the coat is taken. It is walking the extra mile, blisters and all. Ask your parents. They can tell you the meaning of love and the sacrifice it entails and the joy it brings.

It is by contemplating the face of Christ in prayer that a priest can acquire the generosity to give himself, body and soul to his priestly ministry, as Christ lived and died. Deacon Mike, you are about to enter a presbyterate, a fraternity of priests whose lives have been spent walking the extra mile. The joy these men exude in their priesthood reflects a love story whose pages continue to be turned with such pastoral zeal and loving faithfulness. For that, this bishop and the Church of Ogdensburg are so very grateful.

It is through the power of prayer that a priest’s ministry is truly a labor of love. Jesus’ self-giving love is meant to become yours and mine. Pray well so as to speak about God better, for I can find words about God only after having encountered Him and established personal ties with Him. In the priesthood, prayer is always the first thing. Without the vitality of prayer, the priest’s motor idles and, therefore, the parish’s, as well. As I’ve stated on other occasions, when it comes to our faith, ordained or lay, we cannot be idling, in a holding pattern or running in place. The faith life of those entrusted to your care must continually be fed and nurtured by your personal encounter with Jesus, your love story with the Divine. Because, Deacon Mike, as a priest, you are not your own. You are a link in a chain that extends from the Cross to eternity. Do not be a lone ranger priest. Ordination to the priesthood does not bring with it a license for private practice, but a bridge, with a mission to communion. Ordination sanctifies you for this role. The Eucharist will help transform your innermost being.

Ordination story and photos: page 8

Christ-led, Christ-fed, and Hope-filled, your priestly ministry will not be without its challenges and personal sacrifice in this time and place. But, we will never be more overwhelmed than the apostles were! What matters is the quality of your heart, the strength of your faith and the substance of your interior life. All make way for God’s grace. Priests lacking in zeal in their ministry are tired in mind and spirit before they are tired in body. Eucharistic devotion and strong faith can only return to the faithful if priests are filled with zeal and love for the Christ who lies hidden in the sacrament. The Eucharist transforms us down to the inmost depths of our being. Jesus’ self-giving love is to become mine. As one author noted, the priest who has not kept near the fires of the tabernacle can strike no sparks from the pulpit.

In collaboration with our consecrated Religious, deacons, and pastoral staff, let the holiness of your life build up the house which is God’s Church. To build the Church, we must labor, we must suffer. There is no pastoral success without sharing in Christ’s suffering. Your own embracing of the Cross gives needful witness to our sisters and brothers who have grown up in an anesthetized culture that seeks to avoid suffering at all costs.

Of course, the life of a priest is inconceivable without a filial bond with Mary. May Our Lady of Fatima support you in your fidelity to her Son. I extend my deep gratitude to your family, Deacon Mike, particularly your mother and father, all your loved ones who are rightly very proud individuals this day. Rachel and Joseph, your own faith, love and guidance have brought us to this day. Thank you for your son. We are grateful, also, to all those who have been important facilitators of Deacon Mike’s intellectual, human and spiritual formation. We extend words of appreciation to the faculty, staff and community of the Pontifical College Josephinum where Deacon Mike has called home these last six years. We, particularly welcome Fathers Louis Iasiello and Michael Kelly who have trekked to the North Country and are present with us this day representing the Seminary community.

And now, my brother, Michael, please rise to declare publicly your desire to become a priest and to serve the Church of God in our Diocese of Ogdensburg. Let your extraordinary adventure of priestly love begin!
Bishop announces changes in assignments

Bishop Terry R. LaValley has announced pastoral changes, effective, June 21.

- Msgr. Harry K. Snow, due to health concerns, will be retiring as judicial vicar and as pastor of St. Mary’s Church in Waddington and St. John the Baptist Church in Madrid. He will reside at St. Joseph’s Nursing Home in Ogdensburg.
- Father Douglas J. Lucia, pastor of St. Mary’s Church in Canton, adjunct judicial vicar of the Tribunal, diocesan director of the Department of Worship, vice-chancellor, and seminarian director of family life, has been appointed judicial vicar and pastor of St. Mary’s Church in Waddington and St. John the Baptist Church in Madrid. He will continue as director of vocations and seminarians.
- Father Bryan D. Stitt, parochial vicar of St. Patrick’s Church in Rouses Point and St. Mary’s Church in Champlain, has been appointed pastor of St. Mary’s Church in Canton and director of the Office of Worship.
- Mr. James D. Crowley, chancellor of the Diocese and director of the Office of Public Information and Office of Cemeteries, has been appointed also as executive director of family life. Mr. Stephen Tartaglia remains director of the Family Life Office.

Profiles of the new pastors follows. (An interview with Msgr. Snow will be featured in an upcoming issue of the NCC.)

Father Lucia

Father Lucia was born March 17, 1963, in Plattsburgh and grew up in Altona. He studied for the priesthood at Wadhams Hall Seminary College and Christ the King Seminary in East Aurora, NY, before his ordination May 20, 1989, by Bishop Stanislaus J. Brzana. In his first assignment, Father Lucia served as parochial vicar at St. Patrick’s in Watertown. In 1990, he left the diocese for two years to serve in the Diocese of Alexandria-Cornwall. He returned to become parochial vicar at St. John’s in Plattsburgh and then parochial vicar at St. Mary’s Cathedral.

From 1997 to 1999, Father Lucia was assigned to study canon law in Rome. During the summer of 1998 he served as a parochial vicar at Holy Family in Watertown and worked part time for the diocesan tribunal office.

Upon the completion of his studies, Father Lucia was named adjutant judicial vicar and vice chancellor. He also served as assistant director at St. Raphael’s in Heuvelton and as a part-time chaplain at the Gouverneur Correctional Facility.

In 2000 he was named bishop’s secretary and in 2003 was named diocesan director of vocations. From September 2003 to March 2004, Father Lucia served as administrator of St. Mary’s in Canton. In September 2004, Bishop Robert Cunningham appointed him as chancellor and diocesan vicar for diocesan services. In 2005 he was given additional responsibilities as diocesan director of seminarians.

In June 2006, Father Lucia was appointed pastor of St. John the Evangelist Church, Morrisstown and St. Peter’s Church in Hammond with its mission of St. Patrick’s Church in Rossie. He was also appointed diocesan director of the Worship Office.

Father Lucia returned to Canton in 2008 as pastor. In 2010, Bishop LaValley appointed him as judicial vicar and as parochial vicar for worship and family life.

In September, 2016, he was given added responsibilities as diocesan director of vocations and seminarians.

Father Stitt

Father Stitt, new pastor in Canton and director of the Office of Worship, served in the diocesan vocation office for many years of his priesthood.

In 2007, he was named associate vocation director and, in 2010, vocation director, a position he held until September, 2016. At that time, he was named parochial vicar for Chal placeholders.

Father Stitt, a native of Crown Point, was born Aug. 12, 1977. He studied for the priesthood at Wadhams Hall Seminary College and the Pontifical North American College in Rome.

He was ordained July 19, 2003 at St. Mary’s Cathedral by Bishop Gerald M. Barbarito and then returned to Rome to complete a licentiate in spiritual theology degree.

Through the years, Father Stitt has served as parochial vicar in Ticonderoga and Saranac Lake and at St. Peter’s in Plattsburgh.

He has also been assigned as special parochial vicar at St. Mary’s Cathedral, administrator of St. Patrick’s Church in Colton with its missions of St. Paul’s, South Colton and St. Michael’s, Parishville.

Previously, he was administrator in Clayton and LaFargeville from May 2009.

Prior to that assignment, Father Stitt served as bishop’s secretary from 2007 as well as associate vocation director for the diocese and part-time parochial vicar at St. Mary’s Cathedral in Ogdensburg until 2010 when he became full-time vocation director.

Between, 2010 and 2015, the priest provided temporary pastoral service as administrator at St. Joseph’s/ St. Mary’s in Massena and for Fort Covington and Bangor along with his work in the vocation office.
After completion of a feasibility study, diocese to launch effort to raise $15 million

Diocese, parishes prepare for capital campaign

By James D. Crowley
Chancellor

OGDENSBURG - Bishop Terry R. LaValley, after consultation, has made the decision to move forward with a capital campaign to be conducted in all parishes of the Diocese of Ogdensburg. The campaign is expected to generate up to $15 million over the next four years.

Bishop LaValley's decision is in response to a feasibility study recommendation that the diocese undertake the campaign, with 75% of the total funds being directed to the needs of local parishes and 25% being directed to diocesan needs.

Feasibility study

In December 2016, the diocese retained Guidance In Giving, to undertake a feasibility study to determine the level of support and financial potential for a major fundraising campaign.

Guidance In Giving, Inc. is a national Catholic organization serving as stewardship, development and campaign counsel to dioceses, parishes and Catholic schools. The firm has extensive experience in conducting capital campaigns and implementing stewardship in Catholic dioceses, parishes and schools throughout the United States.

"Looking at some sort of financial campaign seemed like a natural follow-up to our Living Stones Planning Process," said Bishop LaValley. "Our plans for making our parishes vibrant led to the question of how we would get the resources to support that vitality."

"Our plans show the need for more personnel, more training, stronger programs and materials for various programs," he said, "and all of these things take resources on the parish level."

The feasibility study measured the level of interest and financial potential for the campaign. It also tested model campaign case statements and determined the impact of the Living Stones process on a potential capital campaign.

Representatives from Guidance In Giving conducted personal interviews with all priests and a representative number of retired priests.

Additionally, 50 lay people were interviewed to give their feedback to the questions posed in the feasibility study.

A direct mail questionnaire was sent to 5000 Catholic households throughout the diocese to obtain their input. Included in the mailing was a letter from Bishop LaValley, a survey form and a return envelope. Nineteen percent of the surveys were completed and returned, providing valuable information about the feasibility of a capital campaign. The feedback was very positive in favor of a capital campaign.

"We're very happy with the consulting process used by Guidance In Giving," said Scott Lalonde, Director of Development for the Diocese. "Generally, a ten percent response to a survey is considered to be a good response. We had nearly double that number, which is outstanding. That response and the face to face interviews give us a solid basis upon which decisions can be made."

Consultations.

The decision to conduct a feasibility study follows consultations with the Diocesan Finance Council, Investment Advisory Committee, the Priests’ Council, Diocesan Pastoral Council and the Episcopal Council. All of these bodies recommended that the diocese consider a capital campaign.

"To be successful we had to have the support and dedication of a wide base," said Bishop LaValley. "I wanted input from all our consultative boards before we made any decision on this campaign. The support of our consultative bodies and the responses to the feasibility study told us that we had overwhelming support from our pastors and our faithful."

Support from pastors

"It is a perfect time for a capital campaign," said Father Joseph Morgan, rector of St. Mary's Cathedral and pastor of Notre Dame Church in Ogdensburg. "The planning process made it clear that we need additional personnel, training for our laity, and more materials to maintain the vibrancy of our parishes in the future."

"The question turned to 'How are we going to pay for these things?'" Father Morgan said. "Our planning was leading us to some sort of financial campaign, so this diocesan-wide campaign is a true gift."

Msgr Dennis Duprey, pastor of St. Peter's Church in Plattsburgh, said, "This campaign can be very helpful to accomplish our diocesan goals and priorities. Vibrant parishes, which are hotbeds for vocations, catechesis and the building up of the family need additional resources as we each move ahead with our plans."

"We know that our needs are varied and extensive, but understand that what we do now in a diocesan campaign will only strengthen our parishes," Msgr. Duprey said. "When the need is clear, our people will embrace God's work as reflected in the ministries of the Church."

Next steps

Bishop LaValley has decided to retain Guidance In Giving to provide professional counsel in conducting this capital campaign.

"I was pleased with the professionalism of Guidance In Giving in the conduct of the feasibility study. They were thorough, competent and user-friendly," said Bishop LaValley.

The diocese recently entered into a contract with Guidance In Giving, Inc. recommends that the diocese begin working on campaign case statements, establishing a Clergy Advisory Committee, a special gifts committee, and work on campaign themes and strategies in order to prepare for the actual campaign in each parish.

Since 75% percent of the funds contributed to this campaign will only be used in the parishes, Guidance In Giving personnel will meet with each pastor to help him to form a leadership team, develop case statements pointing out the parish needs and the proposed use of the funds, and prepare campaign materials.

It is anticipated that the campaign in the parishes will begin in Spring 2018. The parish portion of the campaign will be conducted in three blocks, at times to be determined. It is anticipated that redemption of pledges to the campaign will be conducted over a maximum of four years.

Bishop 'delighted' with support

"I am delighted that we have the support of our priests and faithful as we undertake this important campaign," said Bishop LaValley. "We embarked on a bold undertaking in 2014 by setting Diocesan Goals and Priorities. Every parish is working to establish a culture of vocations, promoting religious vocations and the vocation of marriage to build up our families. Our parishes are seeking to make catechesis more available, not only to our young people, but also to our adults. Training and enabling our laity to undertake their proper role in the parishes is also a priority in all our parishes, so that our priests and deacons can focus on the work that is properly theirs.

"This campaign will give us the resources we need to do the things that we set out to accomplish through the Envisioning Leadership Process," Bishop LaValley said. "These goals and priorities came from the grass root level, and it is gratifying to see the wide-spread support for a campaign to raise the resources necessary to accomplish them."

Formation for Ministry information nights set

Deacon Patrick Donahue announced that three information nights have been scheduled for the next cycle of the Formation for Ministry program that begins in September.

The title of the presentation by Deacon Donahue is "Co-workers in the Vineyard: Lay Ministry Today!" and will be offered at the sites selected for the next program cycle: Canton (St Mary's) on June 20, Lake Placid (St Agnes) on June 27 and in Carthage (St James) on June 29.

The information nights are offered to help prospective candidates for lay ministry learn more about the Formation for Ministry program and have an opportunity to ask questions about the requirements of the program.

Deacon Donahue will talk about each of the sites and introduce recently commissioned lay ministers who will briefly share their experiences in the Formation for Ministry program and subsequent parish ministry.

Applications for the new cycle of the FFM program are due July 25 with classes beginning at all three sites during the week of Sept 9.

To RSVP for the meeting or to receive more information about the Formation for Ministry program, contact Deacon Donahue at pdonahue@rcdony.org or Jeannie Grizzuto, Formation secretary, jgrizzuto@rcdony.org.

Immaculate Heart Central sees structural changes

WATERTOWN - Beginning on July 1 Immaculate Heart Central School will operate with several structural changes.

In 2004, the four parish schools of Watertown and Immaculate Heart Central High School were joined together under one Education Council, similar to a public school Board of Education, but with limited jurisdiction.

In 2016, in order to emphasize the unity of the system from pre-k to 12, the Education Council voted to change the official name of the system from Immaculate Heart Central Schools to Immaculate Heart Central School.

Deacon Donahue, the official name of the system from pre-k to 12 located at the high school.

The school principal, in addition to being the head of school, will serve as the principal for grades 7 to 12. Each of the elementary buildings, grades 4 to 6, will have a vice principal, each of whom will be responsible for the day to day operation of the school, including, but not limited to, the academic program, student activities, and communication with parents.

These two vice principals, the fiscal officer, the director of advancement, and the high school vice principal, will report to the school principal. The Education Council will be charged with hiring the school principal who, in turn, will hire all other personnel as needed.

The Education Council will begin a comprehensive search to fill the position of school principal.

Environmental Stewardship

Sowing Seeds of Hope and Healing (Part 1)

As the farmers and gardeners plant their seeds to provide us with essential foods to sustain our bodies, Pope Francis plants seeds of hope and healing for our world in his first encyclical, entitled Laudato Si. Care for our Common Home released two years ago this month.

In this encyclical he recognizes that care for the poor and most vulnerable in our midst are not separate from but are intricately connected with our care for the earth from which we came and are sustained daily.

He sees the need for all people on the planet to join together to protect and care for it as a moral responsibility.

For one young mother this encyclical has had a powerful impact, since the birth of her first child coincided with its release.

She writes ‘My little son is going to grow up in this world and suddenly the topic of care for our earth seemed exponentially more important…The encyclical ended up being a real gift to me. It has become my guiding star, especially about certain ideas I want my son to learn about his place in the world.’

Here are some points from the Encyclical that really stood out for this mom:

The natural world will show you the face of God. “We often think of God as existing beyond the world, when in fact, He is to be found there in the heart of the world… we shouldn’t forget that nature is still sacred, because, as Pope Francis writes ‘The universe unfolds in God, who fills it completely. Hence, there is a mystical meaning to be found in a leaf, in a mountain trail, in a dewdrop, in a poor person’s face.’”

When this mom’s sees a beautiful sunset, she wants him to recognize the beauty of the Creator.

What do you want the children in your life to learn about God through the beauties that surround you this week?
15th Annual Rosary Crusade

Scores gathered at St. James in Carthage, hundreds more joined in prayer from afar.

By Kristina Dean
Staff writer

CARDHAGE—Including prayer warriors in attendance and those who prayed the Rosary in spirit, organizer Robert Renaud estimates hundreds and possibly thousands joined in prayer for the 15th Annual Rosary Crusade Friday at St. James Minor Church.

The event coincided with the 100th anniversary of the Blessed Mother’s appearance to three children in Fatima, where she encouraged praying the Rosary for peace.

According to Mr. Renaud, approximately 100 attended Mass at 5:15, with between 30 and 50 praying every hour until 1 a.m.

The seven-hour event is based on the Seven Sorrows of the Blessed Mother. Each hour has specific prayer intentions and includes three complete Rosaries, or 15 decades. Every hour, three different families or groups lead the Rosary.

Prayer intentions are for all life, families and the sacrament of marriage, innocence and all children and grandchildren, the Holy Church, vocations and all priests and those consecrated to religious life, the Holy Father’s intentions, soldiers, world peace and all sinners and poor souls in Purgatory. The last hour is dedicated to prayers of thanksgiving.

At 7 p.m., Mr. Renaud noted it was May 13 in Fatima, so six of the seven hours of prayer coincided with pilgrims praying across the world for the 100th anniversary.

“You could literally feel the (Holy) Spirit that night,” Mr. Renaud said.

The St. James Crusade spans the globe. New groups and individuals recruited by Mr. Renaud this year include the offices of St. Luke Productions and Family Theater Productions, Catholic author and speaker Scott Hahn, speaker and spiritual warfare expert Father Chad Ripperger, and Father Donald Calloway of the Marians of the Immaculate Conception.

Other groups included laity and religious communities from New Zealand, Korea and Australia, London and the Philippins.

Mr. Renaud said social media such as Facebook and Instagram “played a huge part in spreading the word.”

“Social media is positive in this way, although there is so much evil with both of these and social communication in general. I’m just glad there are some positives and these venues have certainly helped to spread the word,” Mr. Renaud said.

Through the night many groups led the Rosary, including families in the local parish and St. Mary’s in Watertown, local chapters of Women of Grace, Ave Maria Circle and the Knights of Columbus.

Other groups include a Legion of Mary from Watertown, an Altar and Rosary group from Lowville, and members of St. Stephen’s parish in Croghan and St. Anthony’s Church in Watertown.

Every year, Mr. Renaud, a celebrated Catholic artist and art teacher, creates and paints an original painting for the Crusade. A print of this year’s artwork titled, “Our Lady of the Rosary,” is given to each person who stays at least three hours in honor of Jesus’ three-hour crucifixion on the cross.

Mr. Renaud said 40 people signed up to stay.

The painting depicts two images of the Blessed Mother and her son, one in Jesus’ infancy, and the other as she holds Him crucified.

According to Mr. Renaud, all the mysteries of the Rosary are represented in the painting. The Joyful and Sorrowful are depicted in the scenes, while the Luminous through the Monstrance containing the sacrament, while the Glorious is shown through the crown of the Trinity.

The night began with a Mass celebrated by St. James Pastor Father Donald Robinson, whom Mr. Renaud thanked for his support of the event and his love for the Blessed Mother.

Mr. Renaud lives in West Carthage with his wife, Mary Beth. He sells many of his works and prints out of his studio, located next to his house. More information can be obtained by going to the parish’s website at catholicsofcarthagecopenhagen.org

Fatima: anniversary of the second apparition

The year 2017 marks the 100th anniversary of Our Lady of Fatima Apparitions.

This is the second of a series featured from May 2017 to October 2017 in the North Country Catholic to honor the Blessed Mother’s monthly appearances to three children in Fatima, Portugal. The first installment was printed in the May 10 issue.

Part 2

The second apparition of Our Lady of Fatima: June 13, 1917.

“By now word had spread among the village of the three children seeing an apparition of Our Lady. Ridicule began not only by neighbors, but also among their own family members who did not believe them.

About fourteen of Lucia’s friends joined her as well as a few neighbor women. It was near noon on the thirteenth of June and they all said the Rosary and then the litany.” Lucia stopped them and stood up; “Jacinta, Jacinta, here comes our Lady. I just saw the flash.” They all ran to the holm oak and knelt among the brush.

Lucia was looking up as if in prayer. She could hear Our Lady speak to her but the others heard “like a gentle humming of a bee.”

“Lucia in later years tells us what Our Lady told her; ‘I want you to come here on the thirteenth next month. Say the Rosary inserting the mysteries between the mysteries the following: O my Jesus forgive us our sins and save us from the fires of hell, lead all souls to heaven, especially those most in need.’

More conversation about heaven ensued with Our Lady telling Lucia that Jacinta and Francisco would be in heaven soon but that ‘Jesus wants to use you to make Me known and loved. He wants to establish the Devotion to my Immaculate Heart in the world. I promise salvation to those who embrace it and their souls will be led by God as flowers placed by myself to adorn His throne.’

When Lucia feared being alone our Lady said, ‘I will never leave you, My Immaculate Heart will be your refuge and the way that will lead you to God.’”

Father Michael J. Jablonski is ordained

By Kristina Dean
Staff writer

OGDENSBURG — Calling a priest's life a love story, Bishop Terry R. LaValley welcomed Father Michael J. Jablonski to the priesthood in front of a crowd of several hundred at St. Mary's Cathedral May 27.

In his homily, the bishop emphasized the importance for a love of God in a priest's life and that his life must be a song of praise to God in the midst of the discord in the world.

"This love begins where duty ends," the bishop said, adding that priests must be willing to give their shirt when their coat is taken.

"You, Michael Jablonski, are about to enter a fraternity of priests whose lives have been spent walking that extra mile," he said to the candidate.

Bishop LaValley told him that he must nurture his parish with his love story, using prayer to sustain him and said he would be a link in a chain that extends from the cross to eternity.

The bishop thanked the candidate's family for their son, and acknowledged the family and friends, some of whom traveled from Las Vegas. He joked with the congregation that "the odds for today are very good."

Prior to the homily, Father Douglas Lucia, diocesan director of vocations and seminarians, presented the candidate to Bishop LaValley, stating there were no doubts regarding his readiness for ordination.

Immediately after the homily, the future priest vowed to the bishop to carry out the office of a priest under the direction of the bishop. As the congregation stood, the candidate prostrated himself before the altar, and the Litany of the Saints was sung.

Afterward, the bishop laid his hands on Father Jablonski's head and conferred the office of a priest upon him through the prayer of ordination.

Father Jablonski was vested in his stole and chasuble by Father Gregory Weider of the Diocese of Albany. Each concelebrating priest laid their hands on the new priest's head and prayed for him.

After the Bishop gave Father Jablonski the fraternal kiss welcoming him into the ministry, the newly ordained priest gave his first blessing to his parents. He also spent time after Mass giving his first priestly blessings to a long line of people waiting.

During Mass, Corey Haynes of St. Regis Falls and Jamie Burns, Canton, proclaimed the scriptures. The Gospel was read by Deacon Michael J. Allan. Gift bearers were Joseph Jablonski and Stephen Jablonski, Jr.

In 2016, Father Jablonski was ordained to the diaconate at St. John's Church in Plattsburgh. He has served as a deacon at St. Joseph's Cathedral in Columbus, Ohio, from August, 2016 to April of this year.

His first assignment as a priest will be as parochial vicar of the Church of the Sacred Heart and St. Lawrence and to St. Mary's and St. Joseph's in Massena, effective June 21.

Father Jablonski is originally from Montgomery County, where he was raised on a dairy farm by his parents, Joseph and Rachel Jablonski.
Sr. Gregory named IHC director of advancement

WATERTOWN – St. Joseph Sister Mary Gregory Munger has been appointed director of advancement at Immaculate Heart Central School, replacing Robert Piddock, effective July 1.

Sister Mary Gregory is an alumna of Immaculate Heart Academy and a former teacher at Immaculate Heart Central High School.

She earned a bachelor’s degree in science from SUNY Potsdam, a master’s degree in music education and liturgy from Catholic University of America and a master’s degree in education, administration/supervision from Boston College.

Sister Mary Gregory has taught in Catholic schools at the elementary, junior and senior high school levels.

She was an adjunct professor at SUNY Potsdam in the school of education and taught evening courses at Boston College. She has served as principal of Catholic schools in the diocese of Ogdensburg and Syracuse.

Commenting on her appointment Sister Mary Gregory noted that she has spent most of her life in Catholic schools either as a student, teacher or administrator.

“The mission and tradition of Immaculate Heart Central School are particularly important to me having graduated from IHA and taught at IHC, she said. “I am enthusiastic about the opportunity to promote IHC’s mission throughout the Watertown area and to maintain and cultivate relationships with our alumni.”

(A story on upcoming structural changes at Immaculate Heart Central School is printed on page 6 of this Week’s NCC.)

Patriotic parish celebration

Piemakers send kids to camp

MALONE – The Rosary Society of St. Andre’s Bessette parish held a fundraiser for teenagers who want to attend Camp Guggenheim this summer.

Pie tins were passed out to volunteer parishioners who like to bake.

They were returned the next weekend on May 6-7, after all Masses. Sale of the pies brought in almost $1,400 even though there weren’t enough pies for everyone.

The teen applicants had to write a 300-word essay stating why they wanted to attend Camp Guggenheim this summer and what they expected to gain from this experience.

Their parents/guardians were asked to send a note along as to why they would like to see their teen go to camp and the parish priests were invited to judge the essays.
The fight for religious freedom

By Mark Pattison
Catholic News Service

WASHINGTON (CNS) -- It has been nearly 20 years since the International Religious Freedom Act became law. Organizers of a forum at Georgetown University thought it a good time to see how the religious freedom landscape worldwide has changed since 1998. Passed by overwhelming majorities in both houses of Congress and signed into law by President Bill Clinton that year, the U.S. law created a multifaceted system for promoting religious freedom as part of U.S. foreign policy, monitoring religious persecution in foreign countries and advocating on behalf of individuals persecuted in other countries for their religion.

At the forum, while the view wasn't always encouraging, speakers professed hope for the future -- along with a side dish of skepticism.

Andrew Bennett said those concerned about the issue should ask whether they ought to be similarly concerned about protecting religious beliefs of someone in another country as they are about fighting political discrimination against individuals overseas. He had been the first ambassador for religious freedom within Canada's foreign ministry, from 2013 to 2016 -- until the Cabinet position created by the Conservative Party was abolished by the Liberal Party government of Prime Minister Justin Trudeau.

"We in Canada are increasingly vague as to what those answers should be," said Bennett, now a research fellow at the Religious Freedom Research Project of Georgetown’s Berkley Center for Religion, Peace & World Affairs, which sponsored the forum.

Canada's founding story, he noted, is quite different from that of the United States, whose first refugees were those who fled England because of religious persecution, Bennett said at the forum, "Best Practices in International Religious Freedom Policy."

Bennett cited "ignorance of religious faith and tradition" for liberal Western democracies being diplomatically tone-deaf on the matter. A "narrowing of our understanding of human rights" that may leave religious freedom out of the picture can result, he said. "We should not be equating freedom of expression with freedom of religion," Bennett added.

Kristina Arriaga de Bucholz, a Cuban-American who is a member of the U.S. Commission on International Religious Freedom -- created as a result of the 1998 law - said her experience working in the Reag­ena­ra State Department led her to believe that "giving a religious freedom speech was a career-killer - and still is."

Religious freedom does not always get the high priority it deserves, according to Arriaga.

In other cases, countries enforce restrictions based on religion. In Saudi Arabia, she said, "women cannot get surgery unless they have permission from a (male) guardian," which Arriaga held as an interpretation of religious codes in the predominantly Muslim nation. Americans looking to make trade deals in that country, she added, may look askance at its "open for business" sign because of these and similar religion-based restrictions.

Tom Farr, director of the Religious Freedom Research Project and forum moderator, noted that nations that give greater religious freedom to its people are both more stable and more attractive trading partners.

Arriaga outlined several suggestions for improving U.S. analysis of religious freedom issues in other nations.

One was to develop an "international balancing test" for the issues involve to avoid the dangers of missteps on religious freedom, calling for more comprehen­sive education for diplomats and others receiving foreign postings.

"We should be working with all the (United Nations') special rapporteurs who work in the area" to get them attuned to religious freedom issues, Arriaga said. The United Nations' own religious freedom specialist has no staff save for a part-time secretary, she added; the State Department, by comparison, now has about 50 people on staff working on religious freedom issues.

"We should all be princi­pled" in international dealings, Arriaga said, such as taking Iran to task for its treatment of Baha’is living there despite the lifting of U.N. sanctions against Iran in 2015. And "raise religious freedom to the seventh floor always," where the secretary of state's office is in the State Department building in Washington, she added.

Rabbi David Saperstein, now a senior fellow at the Religious Freedom Research Project after his term ended earlier this year as U.S. ambassador at large for religious freedom -- another outgrowth of the 1998 law -- said he had then-Secretary of State John Kerry's ear on religious freedom issues during his tenure.

He said one reason he accepted the appointment was because he was promised "structural access" to Kerry, adding Kerry would get back to him within 30 minutes on notes he had written.

Kerry set up the office on global religious freedom and that it had worked well. But "it's not enough to talk theoretically about the role of religious freedom in statecraft," Rabbi Saperstein said. "These issues really had to be woven in at the macro level."

No replacement for Rabbi Saperstein has been nominated yet. Rumors were circulating aloud during the forum, and Arriaga even gave the initials of who she believed would be President Donald Trump’s nominee.

Rabbi Saperstein cautioned that diplomats have to avoid being seen as "Western imperialists" by extremists in any one country by the mere giving of assent to an event or initiative in that country that promises to expand religious freedom within that country which would win approval by its moderates. Even so, he said, "I was encouraged by how many people wanted our support, our stamp of approval."

He added, "There are times when the tools that we have really make a difference," referring to sanc­tions or the threat to apply them. "I don't think we use the tools nearly as well as we can."

"We feel that the problem is too large and it's impossible to do well. That's not true," Arriaga said. "It is our right to live according to our deeply held convictions. It’s our duty to defend those to others."
Bishops: Senate health care bill must respect life, be 'truly affordable'

WASHINGTON (CNS) -- Members of the U.S. Senate "have a grave obligation" to make sure their health care reform bill respects life, provides access to adequate health care "for all" and is "truly affordable," the chairmen of four U.S. bishops' committees said in a letter to senators released June 2.

"As the Senate takes up health care reform, it must act decisively to remove the harmful proposals from the House bill that will affect low-income people -- including immigrants -- as well as add vital conscience protections, or begin reform efforts anew," the chairmen said, reiterating key moral principles they urged be in the U.S. House bill to replace the Affordable Care Act.

By a four-vote margin May 4, the House passed the American Health Care Act to replace the Obama administration's health care law.

Sen. Chuck Grassley, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, said the proposal reduces the deficit by $770 billion over 10 years, decreases the deficit "by $1 trillion by 2026," and eliminates "the mandate" requiring most people to have health insurance.

In an interview, Grassley said the Senate health care legislation will be "a lot bigger" than the House bill, which is "only a outline." The Senate measure needs "a lot of work," he said, not only on the "big picture" but also on "the small stuff." (CNS photo/Reuters)

Celebrating the Feast of Corpus Christi

During Jesus’ time on earth, the doctrine of the real presence of the Body and Blood of the Lord shocked his followers more than any other truth. Many people turned away from what seemed like cannibalism to them. The Old Testament forbade the eating or drinking of human flesh or blood.

It was only when the grace of the Holy Spirit penetrated their hearts and minds at Pentecost did they fully understand what a divine gift He had given them. The Catholic Church has defended this doctrine ever since. In the first reading for this great feast of the Body and Blood of Christ, Moses reminds the people in the desert to “remember that God the Father, from the first moments of Creation, had always taken care to feed the people he created.” They failed to appreciate the delicious fruit in the Garden of Eden, so they lost it! But later he gave them that mysterious “manna” in the desert. Jesus used this story when he revealed to them a much better food than manna. “After all”, he told them, “your fathers ate manna in the desert, and they’re all dead!” They still didn’t believe Him, so they turned away... all except Peter and the apostles!

How lucky for the Church and for us that they stayed! Even though the Last Supper would still be shrouded in mystery, they now knew what His Body and Blood would taste like as food.

Full understanding and acceptance came only with Pentecost. In the second reading, St. Paul insists we are all one body when we celebrate the Eucharist - French or Latino, American or African or Chinese - we are all one body or rejoicing, for loving, and for giving away. I think the biggest questions this week for us, besides firmly believing in the Real Presence, is the question of how much of the Eucharist do we share with our brothers and sisters.

In the passage from John’s Gospel today, we find the most difficult teaching of Jesus about the Eucharist, one that was difficult for his listeners then, and still is for many Christians. “I am the living bread... Jesus told them, “Whoever eats my flesh and drinks my blood remains in me and I in them.”

Pope Benedict XVI has commented on this passage. He says, “Without the God-with-us, the God who is close, how can we stand up to the pilgrimage through life, either on our own or as a society and the family of peoples? The Eucharist is the Sacrament of the God who does not leave us alone on the journey with the strength God gives us through Jesus Christ...”

After Jesus enters us so intimately, we must listen to his inspirations, then “go” and “give.”

We give when we discipline ourselves to answer the pastor’s call for help in a parish activity, or when we are patient with our children (even if we have to force a smile and a kind word of correction), or we decide to make time each day for deep prayer with the Lord.

What a tremendous gift God has given us - His very self. He should be our joy, our courage, and our life!
Close to eight decades ago, William Moulton Marston created Wonder Woman. In the years since, the character has, of course, become a staple for DC Comics.

She has also had a successful and varied career in other media, including a late 1970s live-action television series.

Now, embodied by Israeli-born actress Gal Gadot, who also played her in 2016’s “Batman v Superman: Dawn of Justice,” the familiar superhero holds the spotlight in the enjoyable adventure “Wonder Woman” (Warner Bros.).

Director Patty Jenkins keeps the mayhem through which Gadot passes mostly free of gore. And the dialogue in Allan Heinberg’s script is unspotted by vulgarity. Yet hints of sexualitv make the film safest for adults, though some parents may deem it acceptable for older teens.

Opening scenes take us to Wonder Woman’s native environment, the picturesque, Aegean-style island of Themyscira. Populated entirely by Amazons, Themyscira is isolated from the rest of the world by an invisible, protective but not impassable shield thoughtfully provided by Zeus.

After chronicling some of Wonder Woman’s childhood (during which she’s played by Lilly Aspeln and known as Princess Diana), including her military training under the isle’s chief warrior, Antiope (Robin Wright), the screenplay introduces an outsider in the person of Capt. Steve Trevor (Chris Pine).

An American who’s spying for the British during World War I (an event of which the Amazons know nothing), dashing Steve drops from the sky when the German aircraft he purloined in an emergency is shot down. Diana takes his startling arrival as a signal that her race is being called to restore peace to humanity.

Since her mother, Queen Hippolyta (Connie Nielsen), the ruler of Themyscira, disagrees, Diana undertakes the mission on her own. Guided by Steve, and with the support of Sir Patrick (David Thewlis), a high-ranking government official in London, Diana uses her battle skills to take on real-life German commander Gen. Ludendorff (Danny Huston) and Dr. Maru (Elena Anaya), the fictional, sinister scientist who runs Ludendorff’s chemical weapons program.

Steve recruits three additional allies for Diana from among his old pals. This gallant but shady trio is made up of Moroccan veteran Sameer (Said Taghmaoui), Scottish sniper Charlie (Ewen Bremner) and a Native American black marketer known only as The Chief (Eugene Brave Rock).

The movie’s fundamental values are sound, if not always clearly expressed. Wonder Woman chooses to see the underlying goodness in human nature that the slaughter of the trenches masks.

And she consistently strives for concord, though she short-sightedly imagines that this can be achieved by killing the last surviving Olympian, Ares, the god of war.

Believing that Ares has incarnated himself in Ludendorff, Diana is convinced that assassinating him will end the current conflict and prevent any future ones. This sets her at odds with both Steve and Sir Patrick since they believe an armistice is imminent, and fear that the prospect of peace would be ruined by Ludendorff’s death. Despite the tension, however, everyone on Diana’s side seems to be striving to do good.

On a more personal level, Steve and Diana — who have, of course, come to be more than mere comrades to each other — are discreetly portrayed as spending a night together, though the camera cuts away shortly after Steve locks the bedroom door behind them.

It was probably inevitable that “Wonder Woman” would play on the humorous potential of the fact that its heroine has never set eyes on a man before, though a subtler approach could certainly have been adopted in doing so. Along the same lines, the situation described above is followed up by some comically awkward wordplay that would not be appropriate for kids.

Together with the pagan details incorporated into the movie’s milieu and backstory, these incidents suggest a cautious attitude on Mom and Dad’s part.

Congratulations, Father Jablonski

The Pontifical Mission Societies in the Diocese of Ogdensburg wishes to bestow God's blessings and our heart-felt congratulations to our newly ordained, Father Michael Jablonski.

On your ordination to the priesthood

The Mission office is incredibly proud of him for fulfilling his call to become a priest of the Diocese of Ogdensburg. We are looking forward to watching Father Michael take on the challenges that are ahead of him with grace and knowledge. It is always inspiring to see an ordination and feel the commitment one makes with the Lord. As a community, we are to come together now and support Father Michael through both prayers and encouragement as he furthers his journey of life with Jesus and His people.

Deacon Jablonski was ordained a Priest on Saturday, May 27th at St. Mary’s Cathedral in Ogdensburg by Bishop Terry R. LaValley. What a wonderful way to share a holiday weekend, filled with joy and hope for Vocations in the Diocese of Ogdensburg. My thoughts and prayers are with Fr. Jablonski, his family, friends and fellow seminarians as they experience these joyous days.

Through the sacrament of ordination, Fr. Michael will draw strength from the Holy Spirit. He, too, will draw strength from the prayers of all of us in the diocese and beyond who are grateful for his response to priesthood. May Fr. Michael also be a “missionary” who will promote prayers and sacrifices for the people in developing countries. We wish him and his family all the best from the Mission Office.

"Embrace with tender affection the whole of humanity, Especially the poorest, the weakest, the least important...
