The mystery of the cross

VATICAN CITY (CNS) - Following the cross without Christ and his resurrection reduces God's love to a hopeless and masochistic form of spirituality, Pope Francis said.

Christians must beware of separating Christ from his humble descent to death and viewing it as a "mystery of tragedy," the pope said.

"A Christ without a cross is not the Lord: He is a teacher, nothing more," the pope said. "The other temptation is a cross without Christ, that is, the anguish of remaining down, depressed by the weight of sin and without hope. This is a type of spiritual masochism: only the cross, without hope and without Christ."

Celebrating the feast of the Exaltation of the Cross Sept 14, the pope reflected on the day's first reading in which St. Paul says that Christ "humbled himself, becoming obedient to death, even death on a cross."

Because of Jesus' descent "to the lowest point, even to humiliation," the pope said, God "exalted him and raised him up."

Celebrate Christ set for Oct. 20-21

Registration is now open for Celebrate Christ 2017, "Called to Lead," a two-day conference to be held Oct. 20 and 21 in Lake Placid.

The theme of the program is "Leadership Lessons from Pope Francis: Doing the Laundry, Dusty Shoes and the Monastery Bell."

The Oct. 20 session is focused on school personnel while Oct. 21 is designed for pastors, parish catechetical leaders, catechists, youth ministers, RCIA Director, lay ministers, and all Catholics interested in parish ministry.

Charles is definitely in charge

Much like his grandmother, young Thomas William Kilian did not have much time to enjoy the benefits of being the one and only child in his family. A mere 15 months after the blessed arrival of first-born “me,” brother Jack became the shiny new babe in our household.

Tommy enjoyed 19 months as the center of his mommymommy/dadddy/ Tommy universe before Charles Benjamin nudged his way into the spotlight. And now, Tommy is a big brother and, like Grammy, will never remember life as an “only.” I’m willing to bet, though, that he’ll love having a little brother as much as I loved growing up with seven little brothers and sisters. And love is the operative word for everything. When another child is added to a family, the love isn’t divided but rather multiplied, exponentially.

Decades later, I can still remember wondering how I could possibly love a second child as much as I loved my first. Becoming a parent is life-changing in a thousand ways but for me, at least, it was the first time I knew I could actually lay down my life for another human being.

Of course, that feeling extended to our second baby and our third just as it had eight times for my parents, 14 times for my aunt and uncle.

Charlie has been around for just a few weeks but he’s already expanded the hearts of his parents, grandparents, aunts, uncles and cousins... and even his brother from our God. Charlie works this magic in ways that might not work for you and me. It’s not easy keeping a baby happy, especially one who hasn’t figured out that daytime is for waking and nighttime is for sleeping! These days, Charlie is definitely in charge of a home that revolves around meeting his every need.

But his parents know how privileged they are to have this baby in their lives. His grandparents know how richly blessed they are to be able to spoil this little guy as much as Anna, Patrick, Caroline and Tommy.

Welcome to the world, little Charlie.

We thank God every day for your life!

FATHER MUECH SAYS

Don’t become a hard-hearted Hannah!

Last week, I joined with some family and friends for a reunion of sorts in Vermont. One day we decided to visit that quaint town of Weston.

Since I was alone, my sister-in-law, Mary Lee, decided to keep me company on the drive.

As we were talking, I noticed on the radio screen the title of a song – an old favorite of mine – so I just had to turn it up. I don’t know if you have ever heard it “Hard Hearted Hannah, the Vamp of Savannah,” but it was too wonderful to miss.

Then, on the very next Sunday, I was surprised to see that the psalm response at Mass was, “If today you hear his word, harden not your heart.” I decide to focus my homily on that psalm as Jesus comes to our world to soften our hard hearts. I did mention Hannah, also. I found it interesting that one of the altar servers was a Hannah.

Like many song writers, the Scriptures use the heart as the image and center of love and concern. At the Last Supper, Jesus promised his apostles that his Holy Spirit will come to them and to all of us to make an abode in our hearts. I have heard holy persons mention that, in prayer, we should place in our hearts those we love and those we remember in our prayers. This is truly a beautiful image – filling our hearts with our loved ones. But what about a hard heart?

A hard heart is a heart that does not feel, in fact, cannot feel. A hard heart finds love difficult, even impossible. A hard heart is a closed heart; there is no room for those we love or are in need of our prayers. A hard heart finds it difficult to respond to others. The Holy Spirit cannot touch a hard heart.

I can guarantee you that I can recognize someone with a hard heart just by looking in their eyes, just by talking with them. I remember a person telling me that they had held a grudge against another, I think it was a sister or brother, for nearly ten years. I was overwhelmed by their hard heart. Yet, the Psalmist urges us to find the Lord – “If today you hear his word, harden not your heart.”

The Lord Jesus came to this world of ours to soften our hearts. Jesus wants us to discover the happiness and peace that comes only when we have an open and loving heart. The one who will soften our hard heart is our Savior, Jesus. Jesus suffered and died for us to help us discover the joy of a soft heart. Jesus challenges us and leads us to make our hearts open and loving.

We have a song that says “Lord, transform my heart of stone to a heart of flesh.” When you are afflicted with a hard heart I urge you to find the Lord, especially in the Blessed Eucharist. Allow Jesus to soften your heart.

One more thing – this is always a daily challenge. Each day we are challenged by the concerns of life and we can so easily become hard hearted. Many is the morning I know well when I recognize that I am hard hearted. The only solution is to find the Lord – in prayer or in the Blessed Eucharist – that Jesus may indeed soften our hard hearts.
Celebrate Christ: ‘Called to Lead’ set for Oct. 20-21

LAKE PLACID – Registration is now open for Celebrate Christ 2017, “Called to Lead,” a two-day conference to be held Oct. 20 and 21 at the Crowne Plaza.

The theme of the program is “Leadership Lessons from Pope Francis: Doing the Laundry, Dusty Shoes and the Monastery Bell.”

The Oct. 20 session is directed at pastors, Catholic school principals, teachers and school personnel while Oct. 21 is designed for pastors, parish catechetical leaders, catechists, youth ministers, RCIA Directors, adult faith formation, lay ministers and all interested in parish ministry.

Registration information
Registration information is available at www.rcdony.org/celebrate. A $30 fee covers the conference and lunch. The deadline is Sept. 29.

Sharing the Light of Faith
One of the highlights of the day will be the presentation of the Sharing the Light of Faith Award which recognizes an outstanding individual in the diocese who has had a major impact on the faith life of the Church. The individual must be one who is generous in his/her response to the call of God in giving witness to the gospel through exemplary service to a parish and, in doing so, to the diocese at large.

Priests from Philippines serve parishes in diocese

Bishop Terry R. LaValley has assigned Father Alex Guimpol, who recently arrived from the Archdiocese of Caceres, Philippines, to serve as parochial vicar at St. Bernard’s Church in Saranac Lake. The assignment is effective immediately.

Bishop LaValley and the Archbishop of Caceres have an arrangement whereas priests from the Philippines are made available to serve in our diocese for a period of five years.

Father Eduardo Pesigan, who is currently assigned to St. Peter’s in Plattsburgh, is also from Caceres.
George Shnob is honored by St. Peter's Church in Plattsburgh

‘His music touched the heart’

By Shan Moore
Staff writer

PLATTSBURGH — George Shnob isn’t one to blow his own horn. But there’s not a church, nor synagogue, in Clinton County that has not resounded with his music.

Over many years, dating back to a stint in the U.S. Army, the Mooers native has either accompanied or directed the voices of others and added his own baritone to the mix in many other locales, as well.

“His gift of music is just amazing,” said Phil Bernard of Plattsburgh.

Phyllis, her husband Lou and the late Jim and Joan Fleury worked together with George to form the Sweet Adelines Chorus in 1967, and there was no doubt that George would be director.

“He knows his craft; he’s a great musician,” Mrs. Bernard said. “He knew barbershop harmony, and he knew the structure of chords that would make that sound pop.”

And as it turned out, she said, “George would go along with anything he thought would please the chorus or please the audience.”

“He was not shy in front of the chorus” with the baton in his hand, Mrs. Bernard said. “We had so much fun.”

And imagine the laughter when the Sweet Adelines, traveling for a regional contest, arrived at a hotel to find that Phil, with her name more typically given to a male, had been paired with George to share a room.

“It was really very hilarious,” she said.

By the way, George doesn’t have a horn to blow — he plays keyboard.

Public service award

Sunday, Sept. 10, the Sweet Adelines were among a number of groups that performed a special musical tribute to George at St. Peter’s Catholic Church, held in the wake of his retirement as longtime organist and music director there.

It’s the parish’s way, according to a press release from the pastor, Msgr. Dennis Duprey, to show “grateful appreciation for his contribution to church music and his contribution to the service of people and music in the greater community.”

In 2009, the parish created the Student Assistance Endowment Fund in George’s name at Clinton Community College to help students with financial emergencies stay in school.

At the recent event, he was presented the Sen. Ronald Stafford Award for Public Service, an honor created by the late senator’s family to recognize extraordinary public service of a St. Peter’s parishioner.

Selfless devotion

Father John Yonkovig, now at St. Agnes Church in Lake Placid, was newly arrived at St. Peter’s in 1993 when he had the task of hiring a new music minister.

George Shnob was an easy pick.

“He had a great devotion to the Mass,” the priest recalled. “And the other thing that was so clear was his ease of dealing with people.”

Some musicians can be difficult in their reach for perfection, Father Yonkovig said, but not George.

“I think he could make people who couldn’t sing sound good in the choir,” he said, laughing.

A music minister shoulders many responsibilities beyond the Mass, the priest said, including music for funerals, special events...

From George, he said, “I never once heard a protest. He really was selfless in his devotion to the music, St. Peter’s and the people of St. Peter’s.”

‘Amazing Grace’

A clock marks each hour with the strains of “Amazing Grace,” a hymn inmates loved to hear Shnob play when he was organist at Clinton Correctional Facility. Shnob hasn’t attempted to play one of the pianos at the Vilas Home since moving in — he doesn’t think his fingers have recovered enough dexterity.

“If I’d try it and not be able to do it, it would be more (disappointing),” he said.

Shnob’s first instrument, besides his voice, was an old pump organ in the home where he grew up, the youngest child of Leona and Edmond Shnob.

He taught himself to play but much later took lessons to sharpen his skills.

The young man graduated from Mooers Central School in 1954. He served three years in the Army and found a job as a meat cutter at the Grand Union in Champlain once home again.

He took the position of registrar at Clinton Community College as he completed his associate degree there in 1972. Then he moved on to earn a bachelor of arts in French and Canadian studies from SUNY Plattsburgh in 1973.

He retired as registrar in 2002.

Shnob also taught French at CCC and Clinton County Senior Center and tutored groups, among them officials who work at the U.S. border with Quebec and others.

Touched hearts

And the whole time Shnob was making music.

For many years, he was the organist at Plattsburgh Air Force Base. He directed the Madrigal Singing Chorus in Franklin Centre, Que., until sidelined by a heart attack.

Along with directing the Sweet Adelines, he sang with the Cumberland Bay Barber shop Chorus and Barbershop Quartet.

He was cantor and organist at many weddings and funerals, church and community socials and other events.

And then there was his work at St. Peter’s.

“I’ve had some wonderful choir members,” he said.

George, he said, Father Yonkovig, “encouraged a lot of young people to get involved with music.

Ellis Auto of Malone made a donation to the local Catholic Charities office with funds raised during the recent celebration of its 25th anniversary. From left are Rick Ellis, the original owner of Ellis Auto; Jason Ellis, who manages the dealership and business with Randy Wood, his brother in law; Joelle Lamica, local director of Catholic Charities; and Melody Ransom, the child and family counselor at Catholic Charities. The anniversary celebration included a 50/50 drawing, a chinese auction and a dunking tank where several Ellis employees were dunked to benefit Catholic Charities. The Ellis family and employees are longtime supporters of Catholic Charities and other community organizations.

The sixth week of the Camp Guggenheim program, the 16-18-year old campers participate in a Service Day. Among this year’s activities was a car wash to benefit Rachel’s Vineyard. The campers raised $409 for the after-abortion healing retreat in the diocese. The diocesan Respect Life Office, directed by John and Colleen Miner, offered a message of gratitude to the campers. Pictured are Kelly Southwick, Lauren Laughman, Georgia Barton and Madison Gray.

Environmental Stewardship

What happening around us?

Celebrating the Season of Creation first calls us to praise and prayer. Autumn in northern New York in its incredible blaze of color is a feast for our eyes that causes us to say “Wow!” It can cause us to lift up our hearts and voices in praise of our Creator.

Secondly, the Season calls us to look around at what is happening to Creation, as Pope Francis urges every person on the planet to do in his encyclical, Laudato Si’On care for our Common Home.

As we turn our eyes to the catastrophic events of the past weeks from wildfires in the west, the floods in Texas, the hurricanes in the Islands, Florida and Louisiana, the earthquake in Mexico, and the tropical cyclone in India and Pakistan, we can see that the environment is changing.

We need to listen to what the scientists have predicted concerning the warming and rising sea levels and effects on the poor and all life.

They have discovered that the carbon emissions from fossil fuel plays an enormous part in these changes.

So what does that have to do with me?

A third way we can celebrate this Season is to become more educated in the root causes of this current reality. And then, reflect in light of our Catholic faith on how we can respond to the “cries of the earth and the cries of the poor.”

Conference in Burlington

Our neighboring diocese in Burlington is offering a conference on “Action for Ecological Justice: Celebrating a Year of Creation,” on Sept. 30 at St. Michael’s College.

The keynote speaker, Dr. Carolyn Woo, who was the former President & CEO of Catholic Relief Services (CRS), along with many other presenters on ways to develop a lifestyle that will promote ecological justice and a sustainable future for all. Bob Hurd from OCP will lead the songs.

Homily for funeral Mass for Father Patrick Mundy, Sept. 8 at St. John’s in Plattsburgh

‘You are the best of priests’

By Msgr. Dennis Duprey
Pastor, St. Peter’s, Plattsburgh

There are two things that Father Pat was terrible at: one was order, and the other memory. Why? Because when he put away dishes, and he loved to do that, it was not at all a problem for him to put a frying pan in with the crystal. And memory, well there are many stories; most of you have at least one.

Yet both order and memory are necessary to be a good priest. Father Pat was not good at them as the world sees them, but, blessings for all of us, he was superb at them as God sees order and memory - Holy Orders and “Do This in Memory of Me.”

Father Pat loved to celebrate Mass in a depth of faith that only he and God will ever fully appreciate.

As you know, different people define a good priest in different ways. But for Christ and for every priest one way only is the defining focus of our lives. That is the Holy Sacrifice of the Mass.

Father Pat saw Heaven as the direction that we should order our lives, and believed as we do that the Order of the Sacrifice of the Mass was the singular best way to wed heaven and earth. From its very beginning until its conclusion the Mass is not focused on the priest nor on the congregation. It is about God in his fullness! It helps us to know who we are and to whom we belong. It is not simply about our favorite sermon, our cherished music, our decorations, our atmosphere, our convenience or our time. It is always about God – Father, Son, and Holy Spirit. And so he commanded us to “Do this in memory of me...”

As one thinks about this, many believe it is about memory, like an intellectual exercise. Well, if defining a good priest as a question of who has a good memory, Father Pat would not be one. For that matter nor would I.

When he celebrated the Mass and did it in Memory of Him, It was about remembering him now, speaking with him now, and glorifying him now. It is more than a past event called to mind but rather a present dying and rising. You see memory is not primarily about the past, but about remembering someone now, being present to him or her, especially the least.

Father Pat was a master of the spiritual order because he knew who came first. He understood the first commandment and the commandment to love and serve others especially those most in need. He brought order to the spiritual chaos of this world. In the spiritual order, celebration of the sacrifice of the mass is central. Because from this holy table all of the order of the Paschal mystery of deaths and life flow.

And so it did for Father Pat who saw almost everything in the spirit of rising with Christ, in the spirit of Heaven. In fact he saw Heaven in places that most of us simply complain about. If you asked him how he was, he was always fine. He never lied about himself but he also rarely complained. He saw his life’s work to bring a heaven here on this good earth so that you and I could better understand the home to which we are called.

Father Pat has always known that. It is often reflected in his simple expression when we get ill focused away from God or his people: “Ah, the human condition.” He was telling us to pay attention to Heaven, to God.

God’s way, which Father Pat’s strove to follow was seen in his countless acts of kindness helping the least among us: Catholic Charities work for years, and his special work in the missions of Peru benefited greatly from his ministry.

When he was there as pastor, a powerful earthquake destroyed many of the churches where our missionaries had helped out. Even a school built by our missionaries for poor children lay in waste. Though not a builder, in his determined and kind way he got that school rebuilt. To this day there is a marker on the school where poor children are educate, honoring the work of this good priest.

He was a master of the spiritual order because he knew who came first. He understood the first commandment and the commandment to love and serve others especially those most in need.

In addition, his memory work of remembering Christ in the needy extended to his kind work in so many parishes.

On top it all in his quite listening to God and to the many who were troubled, and finally his goodness, even in monastic life, he was always there for the least of God’s people.

This is why Jesus commanded us to do this in memory of him. Whatever you do to the least you do for me. A few nights ago as Father Pat was dying, a lovely piece of music was being played.

It simply said I will remember you, will you remember me. As it was being played his kind family held his hands. I thought to myself as I was privilege to look on, who will hold my hand as I go home to God. Who will hold yours and who’s hand will you hold.

The Mundys were remembering their uncle not for his past which they honored, but for his being with them now. They were walking him to the gate of Heaven not to let go but to let him know they are coming and he is with us in the Communion of Saints.

It is of course the work of us all but especially the work of priests to prepare people for heaven, to hold their hand to the gate, to figuratively hold their hearts and souls. It was Father Pat’s life work. He did it well and always in Memory of Him.

Father Pat you showed us the best example of order, and who cares about the frying pan. You have one of the finest memories in real life. Who care if you forgot an engagement or two for lunch?

You are the best of priests. May you now hear the Words of the Master and enter into the Kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world.

Tu eres sacerdote para simper. GRACIAS

You are a priest forever. THANK YOU.
K of C Council celebrates 120 years

By Shawn Ryan
Staff writer

Plattsburgh – In 1882 in New Haven, Connecticut, a group of Catholic men led by an unassuming Irish priest formed a secretive society dedicated to bringing help to Catholic widows and orphans in that working class, immigrant city.

Plattsburgh Council was established just 15 years after the Knights of Columbus was founded by Father Michael McGivney in New Haven, Connecticut.

In an era when information and ideas passed no faster than a horse’s trot, a council of that fraternal order was founded in Plattsburgh a scant 15 years later.

In early August, the Knights of the Msgr. Morris L. Dwyer Council 255 gathered to celebrate 120 years of the charitable works the council has performed over the years, and continues to perform today.

Addressing a packed Emmanuel Room at St. Peter’s Church, which included Bishop Terry LaValley five past Grand Knights of Council 255, council chaplain Father Timothy Caanan as well as numerous Knights and their families – Advocate David Clark focused his attention not on the past but on the present works of the Plattsburgh council.

In the calendar year 2016 alone, Clark said, Council 255 donated nearly $100,000 to churches and charitable causes in and around the Plattsburgh area.

He then introduced the Knight of the Year Kevin Goddeau who, Clark said, is the lynchpin in the bingo operation, and it’s bingo which allows the Knights to do what Past Grand Knight Randy Smith described as the yeomen’s work that they do.

Obviously surprised by the honor, Goddeau said, “We’ve got a great crew that works very well together, and we’re able to achieve some great goals together.”

Bishop LaValley took the occasion to thank the men of Council 255 for continuing to represent the 120 years of service to faith, charity, unity, and fraternity that the Knights of Columbus stand for.

“I just think it’s a great day to celebrate,” the bishop said, “On the Feast of the Transfiguration, we hear ‘listen to him’. For the past 120 years the Knights have done more than just listen. They have acted on what they’ve heard. Thank you, thank you, thank you.”

Council Lecturer Steven Forgette, a stalwart of the Council for as long as those assembled can remember, took to the microphone to sum up what the Order means to him, and to those Knights who have gone before him in the past 120 years:

His message follows: Our Honored Order of The Knights of Columbus is a mystery and an enigma to many people. Some people find our exclusive membership to be kind of pompous and elitist. However, if they are honest, they cannot deny the great comfort and consolation that our order brings to those who are in need, through our heroic acts of charity. This year alone over $177 million and over 75 million volunteer hours were donated to many worthy charitable causes.

Our order, like our beloved Holy Roman Catholic Church cannot be understood from the outside. It can only be truly experienced from the inside. For those who observe through the critical lens of an outsider, is to miss the character and the true spirit of our Order’s motive and foundation.

There are some dangers in belonging to an order such as ours. We can be tempted to thoughts of ‘self-importance.’ As Knights, we must guard against these temptations by protecting our souls with ‘The Armor of Faith & Humility.’ Please, let us reflect on this for just a few moments:

As Roman Catholic Knights, our ‘nobility’ does not depend on an accident of birth – but on how we choose to live our lives every single day. It is the grace and promises of our Baptism, which makes us ‘children of God and co-heirs with Jesus Christ.’

Down through the centuries, there have always been Knights. As Knights of the 21st Century, our vocation is to serve. So, we humbly serve to bring glory and honor to our King. We also serve in order to enoble our own souls through the practice of ‘Heroic & Knightly Virtues.’

In closing, I would like to end with these two great truths’ that my mentors taught me, when I first started my ‘Quest for Knighthood,’ so many years ago. They are what I call ‘the heart and soul of Catholic Knighthood: 1. for God and neighbor – we live and serve, and 2. by our ‘deeds’ shall our Knighthood be known.

Bishop’s Fund keeps Guggenheim in good shape

Edmond Guggenheim, son of poor Swiss immigrants who later built Anaconda Copper, purchased the property in 1917. Eventually, two small older camps were removed and replaced by the Lodge and Boathouse and became Camp Rockefeller. In 1963, Edmund, a Jew, donated the property to the Diocese of Ogdensburg and helped to build the “Dorm” side of camp. After his death in 1972, the camp was renamed after his benefactor.

That same summer Camp Guggenheim hosted the first summer camp. In this 46th year, Summer Camp and nineteen staff led by Kelly Donnelly hosted 339 children ages 12 to 16 over six weeks.

Three Family camp sessions will host dozens of families including an all volunteer staff led by Dayna Leader and Steve Tartaglia. Other retreats held in the Dorm included numerous school and youth groups. Most of these groups came from within the Diocese, but one class retreat hails from the Pittsburgh area.

The Lodge will host over two dozen separate events. Some of these last a few hours, most are multiple days.

Where could the Diocese host these events without the Guggenheim Center?

The maintenance of 125 acres of Adirondack forest land, the original Lodge, boathouse and outbuildings along with the dorm, dining hall, “In” and garage provides a challenge balancing efficient and judicious use of resources while respecting the beautiful Adirondack environment and the Great Camp heritage and providing a safe space for old and young to experience the Guggenheim Center.

Edmund’s donation provides a beautiful and holy space for Summer Camp, Family Camp and the numerous retreats and gatherings.

Mr. Ralph Bennett, the Center’s director, and contracted, local companies provide the needed expertise and experience to keep the camp healthy in the face of the beautiful and harsh Adirondack environment. Major projects the past few years included new shingle roofs on the original buildings to keep them dry and authentic. Last year saw new metal roofs on the dorm, kitchen, In, and several small sheds. The winter of 2016 – 2017 created unusually high ice destroying several piers supporting the boathouse.

The long term solution requires replacing all the lake facing supports.

The fees charged to groups using the Guggenheim Center cover the day-to-day expenses of maintenance, supplies, and payroll.

Following his predecessors’ lead, Bishop LaValley continues a policy to keep fees affordable by supporting the major projects, like those listed, through an annual grant from the Bishop’s Fund.

It is only through your generous gift to the Bishop’s Fund that we can respect the history of the Lodge healthy, provide a safe and modern space for large groups in the Dorm and keep the Guggenheim Center our home on the lake.

Many wonder whether the Diocese of Ogdensburg needs facilities like Guggenheim. The calendar opens camp Memorial Day and closes Columbus Day. Before the season opens, all the requests to use the facilities provide quite a challenge to accommodate various groups.

As keeper of the calendar, I assure you the Dorm and Lodge have no openings during the summer and few in the fall. In 2017, the close of camp was extended for one late retreat.

Father Clyde Lewis oversees cleanup after parish fire... again

Recovery begins for Rouses Point church

By Shan Moore

ROUSES POINT — St. Patrick’s Church here is undergoing repair after a recent fire in its north tower.

Just a few years ago, the former St. Mary’s Academy in Champlain went up in flames.

Fire in north tower of St. Patrick’s Church causes damage from fire, smoke, water

Father Clyde Lewis is pastor of both St. Patrick’s and St. Mary’s, so it was inevitable that someone would ask the question: “Do fires follow you around, Father?”

The priest had to chuckle as he repeated that query from a parishioner.

“In all the time I’ve been a priest,” he said wryly, “yes.”

Father Lewis’s first assignment after ordainment was St. Bernard’s Parish in Saranac Lake.

He arrived there in 1965, and soon afterwards the church burned down.

“It was arson,” he said.

Churches in Watertown and Ogdensburg must have had a little more divine protection, for they remained standing during Father Lewis’s assignments there.

And while there was no fire at St. Augustine’s in Peru during his pastorate there, he led the way for the church, parish center and convent to be razed.

“The church was too small,” he said. “(Plattsburgh Air Force Base) was growing — the parish was doubling.” So new facilities rose to replace the outdated ones.

“Then I came here,” Father Lewis said from St. Mary’s Rectory in Champlain. “We all know what happened to St. Mary’s (Academy).”

The priest recalled his years at those other parishes even as he planned for St. Patrick’s repair.

He didn’t know how long the work on this latest disaster would take, but during that time, masses will be celebrated at St. Mary’s in the Village of Champlain.

So for now, the schedule is 4 and 5:30 p.m. Saturdays and 8 and 10 a.m. Sundays.

The flames, along with smoke and water, caused considerable damage in the church, Father Lewis said.

“It had been smoldering quite a while,” he said of the fire, which seemed to have started due to frayed wiring that powers the carillon.

“We’ll probably have to replace two speakers for the carillon,” he said.

He called 911, and fire crews mobilized.

“They responded quickly,” Father Lewis said.

But while the fire was knocked down fast, water from fire hoses took down a couple of ceilings in the tower; they collapsed on firefighters, who weren’t injured.

“Water was like a river coming down from the choir loft,” Father Lewis said, and so that stairway has to be replaced. Water flowed into the space above the ceiling in the church lobby, so those tiles will need replacing. And it also damaged the ceiling in the basement-level Parish Hall.

“If there’s fire up in the tower, you have to use water,” the priest said philosophically.

PM Leary Restoration is doing the cleanup and repair work. “They did it at (St. Mary’s) rectory after the flood,” the priest said.

Yes, he has dealt with flooding, too.

Warning that emergency in the rectory came from an alarm system that also alerted church leaders to excessive carbon monoxide released by the church boiler.

Had the water risen without interruption, the priest said, it might have topped off at 4 feet.

“Thank God, we had the alarm,” Father Lewis said.

Even so, the rectory needed some $30,000 in repairs.

And during that renovation, it was realized the electrical plugs and rectory were miswired, another disaster waiting to happen.

And the priest caught the signs of another pending crisis, this one in St. Mary’s Church sanctuary.

“We were blowing (light) bulbs — I knew something was wrong there.”

The man called to look at the issue discovered the wires were badly frayed.

“He said, ‘God must be in this church because it should have burned down.”
ALBANY, N.Y. (CNS) - The director of pro-life activities for the New York State Catholic Conference applauded the state’s highest court for unanimously determining that the state constitution does not include a fundamental right to physician-assisted suicide.

Kathleen M. Gallagher said the New York Court of Appeals “wisely determined that New York’s law prohibiting assisted suicide applies to everyone, including those physicians who may wish to assist their patients’ death.”

In an 81-page decision Sept. 7 in the case, Myers v. Schneiderman, the court said state law prohibiting physician-assisted suicide stems from “legitimate government interests” to protect human life.

New York Attorney General Eric Schneiderman was the principal defendant in the case.

The court ruled 5-0 - with two judges not participating in the case - that there is a distinction between a patient refusing life-sustaining treatment, which is allowed under state law, and a physician working to hasten the death of a mentally competent patient wishing to end their life because of a terminal illness.

The judges said that the plaintiffs in the case could best address their arguments to the state legislature.

Gallagher said in a statement released soon after the decision became public that the Catholic Church has long recognized a patient’s right to refuse life-sustaining treatment, but has never supported physician-assisted suicide.

“The decision is a significant victory for those who would be most at risk of abuse and most susceptible to pressure to take their own lives, including the isolated elderly, persons with disabilities, and those who are depressed and overcome with hopelessness,” Gallagher said.

“Twenty years ago, in Vacco v. Quill, the United States Supreme Court declared that physician-assisted suicide is not a constitutional right and, with this decision, the New York State Court of Appeals agrees,” she added.

The case was filed in 2015 by three terminally ill patients and doctors who care for them. It was filed to prevent state prosecutors from filing criminal charges against physicians providing mentally competent, rapidly deteriorating patients with drugs to assist in their suicides.

The plaintiffs did not claim that any New York doctor was prosecuted for assisted suicide, but they filed the case to seek a ruling to clarify that state law against the practice was not meant to apply to trained doctors providing aid in dying to terminally ill patients who had given their approval.

Since the filing, the ruling said, two of the plaintiffs have died and the third is in remission from cancer.

WASHINGTON (CNS) - The president of the U.S. Conference of Catholic Bishops in Washington has asked his fellow bishops around the country to take up an emergency collection in their dioceses during weekend Masses Sept. 23-24 to help those recovering from devastation wrought by Hurricane Irma in the Caribbean and the southeastern region of the United States.

‘While emergency outreach was immediate, we know that the road to recovery and the rebuilding of communities will be long and additional support will be needed,” said Cardinal Daniel N. DiNardo of Galveston-Houston in a statement issued late Sept. 14.

The funds collected "will be used in the affected areas to support humanitarian aid, assistance with long-term efforts to restore communities after widespread destruction, and for the pastoral and reconstruction needs of the Church in U.S. and the Caribbean," he said.

Cardinal DiNardo acknowledged that his call "comes on the heels" of the emergency collection for victims of Hurricane Harvey, which hit Texas and Louisiana and held on for days before moving inland. Harvey, too, "caused catastrophic damage and compelled us to respond," he said.

"Likewise, Hurricane Irma has been devastating and our brothers and sisters in the Caribbean, especially the Diocese of St. Thomas in the Virgin Islands, and the southern U.S. need our help," the cardinal said.

To act as God acts... to think as God thinks

“My thoughts are not your thoughts, nor are your ways my ways” God tells us.

Today's Gospel is a very good illustration of this truth. If a union boss were to hear this in Church this Sunday, he might have a stroke! “Unfair”, we cry at the first hearing.

Then, as we cool down and think, we have to admit that the landowner has a point in his defense. It’s his money, and he can do what he wants with it. Actually, the grumbling of those who had worked a full day was their problem. They were envious, and envy is a very human vice.

Since it’s a parable told by Jesus, the landowner is obviously God...and God always wins. No, God sees a lot of things differently than we do.

Now we really have to face the lesson of the day - if my ways of thinking and judging are truly far from the Lord’s way, then I must have some adjusting to do! Perhaps I need to work harder in the areas of forgiveness, mercy, and generosity, to mention a few.

St. Paul urges the Philippians today to conduct themselves in a way that is “worthy of the gospel of Christ”.

If I’m honest, I have to admit that I demand apologies more than I give them. And I don’t want to be the one to go first. That leads me to harbor grudges, to make mountains out of molehills, and so extend the hurt into months and years, when I could end the whole thing quickly by reconciling immediately.

How sad to see a son or a daughter keep their distance from a dying parent, even refusing to attend the funeral! It happens!

And how many times have I waited to reconcile until it was too late? The pain and stress on both parties is so unnecessary. Both are the losers.

To forgive is to be free, and to free the other person as well. Once we have reconciled with a friend who has offended us, or whom we have offended, we open the way to form a new and closer relationship. And that could give us joy for years...instead of prolonged stress and unhappiness.

To think as God thinks requires openness and a broad vision, free of self-pity and selfish brooding. It takes a habit of gratitude. It means sitting down and reflecting, “What does God want me to do in this situation?” It takes courage and humility and the grace to act this way. It helps if we just ask a simple question, “What would Jesus do?”

Understanding sex to be ‘in accord with reason’

An article published in 2012 in The Atlantic described the sexual practices of the Aka and Ngandu people who live in the tropical forests of central Africa. Researchers Barry and Bonnie Hewlett, anthropologists from Washington State University, found that married women view sexual intercourse as a kind of ‘work of the night.’ The purpose of this work is the production of children - a critical matter in an area with a very high infant mortality rate. Semen is understood by the Aka and Ngandu to be necessary not only to conception, but also to fetal development. A woman who is already pregnant will see having intercourse as contributing to the health of her fetus. The Aka and Ngandu speak of sex as ‘searching for children’... Said one Aka woman, ‘It is fun to have sex, but it is to look for a child.’ Meanwhile, a Ngandu woman confessed, ‘after losing so many infants I lost courage to have sex.’

Is the strong cultural focus on sex as a reproductive tool the reason masturbation and homosexual practices seem to be virtually unknown among the Aka and Ngandu? That isn’t clear. But the Hewletts did find that their informants - whom they knew well from years of field work - were not aware of these practices, did not have terms for them; and, in the case of the Aka, had a hard time even understanding about what the researchers were asking when they asked about homosexual behaviors.

Modern-day Western societies, meanwhile, have adopted an alternative understanding of sexuality, one that leans heavily on adjectives like “pleasure-seeking” or even “recreational,” quite distinct from the category of a “search for children.”

They feature practices of contraception, male and female sterilizations, abortions, and the sanctioning of homosexual, masturbatory, and other non-procreative sexual behaviors.

In earlier times, however, Western views more closely resembled those of the Aka and Ngandu, especially in recognizing the fundamental orientation of sexuality towards the good of offspring. The Catholic Church has long affirmed that married love has a twofold significance, being ordered both toward the good of the spouses and the procreation and education of offspring.

Saint Thomas Aquinas once noted that nature intends, in broad strokes, not only the generation of children, but also their “carrying forth and promotion all the way to the perfect state of man” — in other words, both the engendering and conscientious raising of children. Recognizing this natural ordering towards “mature offspring” also points to certain natural inclinations that prompt men and women to protect and care for their children: we are inclined to have sexual relations; we are inclined to be certain that the child we are going to be committed to is our own, and to care for that child continually; and we are inclined to remain with the mother/father of that child, sharing a life of mutual assistance marked by true friendship in the commitment of marriage. Nature has given us these inclinations to serve the good of the species and our personal good.

If human sexuality is properly understood as directed towards bringing forth life within marriage, this raises the possibility that other non-procreative uses of the generative power of man would constitute an inappropriate use of this human faculty, something the Christian tradition has affirmed and commonly taught.

Certain types of sexual activity have always been seen, to borrow the Latin phrase, as “contra naturam” (against nature), that is to say, performed in such a way that generation cannot follow. Among such practices would be included masturbation, sodomy, and bestiality. Certain other types of sexual activity, while not contrary to nature in that sense, are still opposed to the order of reason, because the act is done...

Moviegoers looking for nothing more than to be unsettled will likely be satisfied with the horror adaptation “It” (Warner Bros.). However, while director Andy Muschietti’s generally effective screen version of Stephen King’s 1986 novel promotes friendship and fear-conquering solidarity, it also includes some grisly sights that, taken together with other elements, make it suitable for few.

Set in a small Maine town in the late 1980s - the novel took place in the 1950s - the film finds an ensemble of middle-school kids being preyed on by a demonic clown called Pennywise (twitchy Bill Skarsgard) and by other manifestations of evil.

The youngsters, led by stutterer Bill Denbrough (Jaeden Lieberher) and Beverly Marsh (Sophia Lillis), a girl with a dark domestic secret, are bound together by their status as outsiders. Thus they christen themselves the Losers’ Club. Other members include overweight Ben (Jeremy Ray Taylor), bespectacled Richie (Finn Wolfhard) and undersized hypochondriac Eddie (Jack Dylan Grazer).

For Bill, the struggle against Pennywise has a special urgency since he suspects (as the audience knows, correctly) that the malevolent jester was behind the disappearance of his little brother, Georgie (Jackson Robert Scott).

The early scene in which Pennywise deploys rows of fangs to bite Georgie’s arm off marks a notable departure from the movie’s generally restrained approach to mayhem.

Screenwriters Chase Palmer, Cary Fukunaga and Gary Dauberman emphasize the camaraderie uniting the youthful crusaders as they battle their occult opponents.

By unwelcome contrast, though, the script ranges virtually all adults on the side of darkness - Beverly’s unnamed father (Stephen Bogart) is particularly villainous.

Matching Georgie’s dismemberment is a sequence in which Muschietti does to Beverly’s bathroom what Stanley Kubrick did to the elevators of the Overlook Hotel in another Stephen King property, 1980’s “The Shining” - flooding the place in gallons of gore.

Though such moments are rare, they are sufficiently excessive to deter even a large swath of grownups.

Additionally, there’s a nasty undertone to some of the dialogue since the lads of the Losers’ Club revel in exchanging sexual insults, including jibes aimed at one another’s female relatives. An underwear-clad dip in the local quarry also affords the boys a chance to ogle the contents of Beverly’s bra.

Though their fascination is played for laughs, it registers as something more than innocent curiosity.

The film contains mature themes, including implied incestuous child sexual abuse, occasional bloody violence and disturbing images, intermittent sexual humor, a few uses of profanity, pervasive rough and frequent crude language and obscene gestures.

in a way that the due care and education of children is not provided for. This is implied, for example, when men and women who are not married to each other engage in sexual relations, as in situations of adultery, fornication, incest or sexual assault.

St. Thomas noted that the sexual act is one to which we humans, like all animals, are naturally inclined, and as such it would be a grave error to assert that the act could be evil in itself. Nevertheless, the manner in which the act takes place and the details surrounding it are essential to determining whether the act occurs in an authentically human way, that is to say, in a way that is “secundum naturam” (in accord with nature) and in accord with the dictates of reason.

Thoughts on the Missionary Cooperation plan

As the Summer of 2017 draws to an end, I would like to take the opportunity to express my gratitude to the Parishes and Pastors on West side of the Diocese of Ogdensburg for their participation in another successful Missionary Cooperation Plan. This past Summer brought fifteen Mission Aid Societies to the West side of the Diocese.

The Missionary Cooperation Plan (MCP) introduces each parish to a real-life missionary who represents a mission cause from a faraway place.

In so doing, it serves as a preview and helps to prepare your parish for the celebration of World Mission Sunday in October.

It also makes the needs of the Missions more real and more personal, as the faithful of the parish have an opportunity to relate to this visiting missionary in a way that might otherwise be relegated to a bulletin or pulpit announcement.

Most diocesan mission directors agree that where there has been a successful and satisfying parish experience of participating in the MCP, the enthusiasm and response to Mission Appeals also improves.

The MCP offered an opportunity for the faithful in a parish to meet face to face a missionary or mission representative and to be educated about our mission vocation.

Hopefully parishioners were animated about the needs of the mission Church as they respond with prayers and material help. The invitation from the Holy Spirit to participate in the ongoing Pentecost.

The personal introduction of the missionary visitor by the pastor to parishioners goes a long way in relating the importance of the mission message to be given.

The faithful were encouraged to meet and greet the MCP visitor and extended personal words of welcome, as part of the mission experience.

The success of the program, both in terms of animation and cooperation, depends heavily on the work of the pastor. Without their assistance and thoughtfulness, the Missionary Cooperation Plan (MCP) would not be the success that it is today. It is a program well worth cultivating and nourishing in every parish to help spread the good news of Jesus Love.

Again, my heart-felt thanks to all involved with making another Summer Mission Coop a great success.

This program is not perfect by any means. There are many moving parts and things to communicate and coordinate, but at the end of the day, it’s mission accomplished.

The Spirit of the Mission lives on!

Please remember “The Society for the Propagation of the Faith” when writing or changing your Will.
