Gospel gives strength in trying times, Pope says

VATICAN CITY (CNS) – During times of freedom or persecution, the Gospel is needed to bring meaning, fullness and hope to life, Pope Francis said.

Speaking about his visit to Lithuania, Latvia and Estonia, the pope said he visited these Baltic nations as they celebrated the 100th anniversary of their declarations of independence.

During his visit, the pope visited a former Soviet KGB headquarters that is now a museum dedicated to victims of genocide, foreign occupations and political resistance.

"I stopped in prayer in the rooms where opponents of the regime were detained, tortured and killed. They killed 40 people, more or less, a night," he said, noting how upsetting it was to see how cruel humans could be.

"Let us think about that."

During difficult, trying times, he said, the Gospel "gives strength and enlivens the struggle for freedom."

During times of freedom, he added, the Gospel "is the light" showing the way for people's daily journey.

A sign of the Gospel being alive is seeing works of charity, he said.

Even where secularization has hit hardest, the pope said, "God speaks with the language of love, of care, of selfless service."

Ursulines leave historic Quebec monastery

Daylight illuminates the monastery's long corridors, seeping through the old windows dotting its thick walls. The floor responds to the slightest step with an enveloping rustle, as today's Ursulines follow the footsteps of their predecessors. But this uninterrupted cycle that dates back to 17th-century New France is coming to an end.

In October, the majority of the 50 sisters who live in the monastery founded by St. Mary of the Incarnation will head to the Quebec borough of Beauport, where a new home for the elderly awaits them. For the first time in their lives, they will live with laypeople and members of another community, the Servants of the Holy Heart of Mary.

CELEBRATING JUBILEES

Religious and married couples from around the Diocese of Ogdensburg gathered Sept. 23 at St. Mary's Cathedral in Ogdensburg to celebrating Jubilees. A full story is on Page 3. Biographies of the Jubilarians are on pages 4-7.

FAMILY CONNECTIONS

Johnnette Benkovic Williams is the keynote speaker to "The Catholic Family: God's Answer for Our Time," an event planned for Oct. 13. Family Life Director Stephen Tartaglia says the event is an opportunity for families to develop connections and grow in faith.

My vocation and ‘St. Adam of Moira’

Let love and faithfulness never leave you; bind them around your neck, write them on the tablet of your heart. – Proverbs 3:3

As I reflect on the religious sisters and couples celebrating jubilees, I’ve been thinking about my own vocation – my marriage. I’ve written about my son several times, but I’ve written about my husband much less.

My family calls him “St. Adam of Moira.” While I’d like to say it’s because he’s a holy and saintly person, it’s really more of a comment on how trying it can be to live with me. My family is convinced Adam is the most patient man on the planet.

While I think my family slightly exaggerates the more challenging parts of my personality, I also agree that I married an amazing man. He works hard to provide for our family. He keeps our home running. He’s a loving and caring father. He’s a talented artist. He loves God and loves his family. On top of all that, he’s possibly one of the funniest and most intelligent people I know.

Over the past month, as I dealt with ongoing health issues, Adam had a lot added to his demands. All the household tasks – cooking, cleaning, running errands – fell on him. On top of that, he had to help me with even the most basic life tasks – dressing, bathing and using the bathroom. And he dealt with oh so much crying. He did it all with grace, kindness and compassion.

Like any vocation, marriage isn’t always easy. There are occasionally times when, despite our love for one another, we don’t particularly like each other. But we’ll celebrate our 14th anniversary next week, and I can’t imagine going through life with anyone else. I firmly believe God made us to be together, and we make each other better, holier people.

I won the husband lottery. May God grace us all with the ability to know our vocations and to live them out according to His will.

Congratulations to the sisters and married couples celebrating years of dedication to their vocations.

As Christians, we believe that Jesus’ crucifixion led to resurrection. Jesus died on the cross. Three days later, he rose from the dead to new life. In faith, we believe that Good Friday leads to Easter. Our liturgical year climaxes during Holy Week each year, as we celebrate the very heart of our Catholic faith – Good Friday and Easter, the death and resurrection of our Savior.

Today, let us remember together all that the resurrection means. Usually, we concentrate on Easter during the spring time. However, I know this would be a good time for us to talk about death and resurrection. The Gospels tell us that after his Resurrection, Jesus appeared to his apostles often.

Jesus used this opportunity to challenge his apostles to bring his message and his story to the world. He called upon them to change the world in his name. He told them to prepare for the coming of the Holy Spirit – the Spirit would change them and lead them. Jesus chose to leave them and all of us as he ascended to Heaven.

Jesus continues to send the Holy Spirit to each one of us. Through this Holy Spirit, he gives us the life, the love and enthusiasm to live well and to demonstrate to others God’s great love for us all. The Spirit teaches us the very heart of our spirituality as Catholics – death to resurrection through and with Jesus.

Each of us have our crosses, our sufferings and our failing and our sins – these are all our deaths. With Jesus, we can change and be converted so that we can pass through death and come alive in resurrection.

We need Jesus. Jesus has taught us the love and forgiveness of our God. Jesus demonstrated God’s love by the way he lived among us, by his crucifixion, and by his resurrection.

Jesus knows how we need resurrection and new life. Through that new life, Jesus leads us to conversion, so we must open ourselves to the Lord to lead us through our deaths to our resurrection.

I believe this is all about our Catholic sacraments. Each Sunday, we, Catholics, gather with our parish for Mass to celebrate the Holy Eucharist. We gather as a family. The Holy Eucharist is our celebration of the death and resurrection of Jesus.

As we celebrate this Eucharist, we unite ourselves with Our Lord. Through Jesus we find new life as we receive Holy Communion, uniting us in a special way with the Lord’s resurrection. Jesus shows us the way to our resurrection and makes us aware of who we are and all that we can accomplish.

There is also the miraculous sacrament of Penance. There is something of a miracle every time we celebrate Penance. God forgives our sins.

Can you imagine how profound this is? Our sins are forgiven. God forgives us. God forgives us because God loves us. Jesus demonstrated God’s great love for us by coming down to teach us, to die for us and to rise to new life. Jesus taught us how forgiving God is. Our sins are truly deaths. Because of our sins our life is dead. God’s forgiveness brings us new life. This is truly a resurrection moment – a source of new life.

One more thing: I believe our Catholic Church has been going through a death experience in our days. With the Lord’s help and wise decisions that must be made, our Church will recover, and we will find a resurrection. I have total faith in God that good things will come. We are the Church – each one of us is Church – as our Church finds new life, each one of us are challenged to bring that new life into all that we are and all we do.

So, let us pray: Lord, help us to live the new life of Easter, now, so that all people may know through us the power of your love. Lord Jesus, we want to be your brothers and sisters.

At a Mass celebrated by Bishop Terry R. LaValley, the jubilarians gathered to celebrate renewed their commitment to the vocations to which God called them.

“We desire to give public witness of our gratitude to God, to our families, our parishes and our communities,” they said, as a group. “We wish to reaffirm our desire to follow Christ in our chosen vocation, begun at Baptism. We hope through His grace to come to a never-ending Jubilee in the kingdom of God.”

Then, separately, the religious celebrating jubilees renewed their commitment to their vows.

“In a spirit of gratitude, for the glory of God, and in the name of the Trinity, I renew today my vows of poverty, chastity and obedience according to the rules and Constitutions of my Community,” the sisters said. “In renewing my vowed life in Community, I wish to realize more profoundly my Baptismal commitment to live according to the Gospel and to follow Christ generously. I desire to continue to live a life of prayer and service to God and to the Church, by the grace of the Holy Spirit and the prayer of Mary, Mother of God.”

Those celebrating their vocations to marriage also renewed their vows.

“Blessed are you, Lord, for in the good and bad times of our life you have stood lovingly by our side,” they said. “Help us, we pray, to remain faithful in our love for one another, so that we may be true witnesses to the covenant you have made with humankind.”

Sister Mary Louise Fielder celebrates 60th Jubilee

Sister Mary Louise Fielder, a Sister of St. Joseph, was originally from Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. Her parents, Edna and Donald Fielder were solid role models for her by their strong faith, Christian values, and their example of generosity, kindness, consideration for others and hospitality.

She was encouraged by them, as well as by others, to explore religious life. For a period of time following graduation from high school, Sister was employed at the telephone company in Philadelphia.

Sister entered the Sisters of St. Joseph in Watertown in 1957 and received the habit in June of 1958. Since then, Sister Mary Louise has earned a bachelor’s degree from SUNY Potsdam, and participated in summer workshops at St. Lawrence University.

Sister taught throughout the diocese for several years before being assigned to Mater Dei College, in Ogdensburg. While there, Sister functioned in various capacities, such as student services, including that of registrar for 20 years. Sister was instrumental in helping to initiate the extension program for Mater Dei at the St. Regis Mohawk Reservation around 1972.

Later, it became necessary for her to care for her parents, who were then living in Wisconsin. Upon her return to Watertown, Sister Mary Louise was a volunteer clerical aid for the Jefferson County Office for the Aging.

She remained there for 10 years. While there, Sister received an award for “Senior of the Year” in 2007. Sister Mary Louise now serves on the agency’s advisory board.

Currently, Sister resides at the Motherhouse in Watertown, where she continues to serve the “dear neighbor” (a term used by Father Pierre Medalie, the Congregation’s founder) in many ways.

As Sister looks back over the past sixty years, she continues to give thanks for all that God has given her and looks forward with a spirit of hope and openness to a future within the Community of the Sisters of St. Joseph.
Sister Elizabeth Washburn celebrates 40 years

Sister Elizabeth Washburn, of the Sisters Adorers of the Precious Blood, as raised by her mother, who was an Irish Catholic, raised in a catholic orphanage. Her father was Baptist.

Her early schooling began in a Catholic school, but by the time she finished first grade, her mother removed her, as well as her sisters and brothers from the school because of a dispute with the pastor.

Her Godmother lived across the street from the church, and she would stop to visit her.

Sister Elizabeth learned from her Godmother about her catholic heritage.

Since her mother wouldn’t let her and her siblings go to Mass, her father took the children to the Baptist Church, so that they would have some Christian teaching.

After high school, she decided to join the Navy Nurse Corps, and was stationed overseas. During this time, Sister Elizabeth doubted that God existed. However, as Sister Elizabeth made visits to the Blessed Sacrament, which she had done, during her childhood, Sister Elizabeth began to believe in God’s existence.

It was at this time in her life, that several other things occurred, which greatly impacted her life. The first occurred when Sister Elizabeth was invited to attend a wedding rehearsal for a Catholic friend.

As she sat in the back of the chapel, Sister Elizabeth heard very distinctly a voice which said, “You will go tomorrow and ask to take Catholic instructions.”

The very next day, she went to the Catholic Chapel, and asked to receive instructions to return to the Church. On Easter Sunday, Sister Elizabeth received her First Holy Communion at the base chapel. Later, she made her Confirmation in Holyoke, Massachusetts.

Sometime later in the year, one of the students in her squadron stopped her.

“I hardly knew her, but she gave me a Miraculous Medal and told me that I should always have it with me,” Sister Elizabeth said. “To this day, I don’t know her name, and I never saw her again.”

Not long after that, Sister Elizabeth had a very “real” dream, in which she was wandering around in the darkness, frightened and looking for a way out. She found a hill, which she struggled to climb.

“I looked up, and saw Our Lady standing on a grassy plateau,” she said. “As I approached her, I fell to my knees, crying at her feet. Mary put her hand on my head, and in a gentle voice, told me that everything would be all right.”

Ever since that dream, Sister Elizabeth has called her Mother Mary, and look upon her as her mother.

While she was living on the West Coast, she first met the Sisters of the Precious Blood. Her friend, Carol, wanted to visit them, at their Vancouver monastery.

While there, for the first time, she felt called to religious life, though feeling very unworthy. The time came, when the Navy was going to transfer her to Portsmouth, New Hampshire.

“Should I instead go to Manchester,” she asked herself.

Sister Elizabeth went to deliver a letter from Carol to Sister St. Francis, at the monastery, and Sister St. Francis asked if she thought that she had a vocation. She went back to visit, and the rest is history!

“Today, I view my religious vocation as a privileged gift from God, and I am grateful beyond words,” she said. “Not only that, my mother, brother and sister returned to the church.”

Sister Mary McGillan reaches 60-year milestone

Sister Mary McGillan, of the Sisters Adorers of the Precious Blood, got her first introduction to school, along with her first introduction to the Sisters of Mercy. They intrigued me! I recall thinking that they didn’t have much fun, teaching all day, and praying all night, so I assumed.

I remember my ninth birthday gift of a ruby rosary. I took the rosary to Holy Hour with me. By eighth grade, I had begun to attend daily Mass.

High school was full of excitement. I met new friends, basketball and football games, boys, proms, important sounding organizations like “The Bio-Chemistry Club” and “Quill and Scroll.” I wanted those four years to last forever.

During my junior year, I attended a class retreat. It was at that retreat that I talked with the priest-director. I told him that I thought that I might be called to religious life, but that I didn’t want to think about it “right now.” Father told me to spend some quiet time talking it over with God. I did, and very gradually I began to take a more serious interest in what I would do after graduation.

One day at the library, I came across Thomas Merton’s book, Seeds of Contemplation. Although most of it was far too deep for me, something about the word “contemplation” fascinated me, and I wanted to learn more about it. My Latin teacher pointed me in the direction of the monastery across the street from our high school and suggested I stop by to speak with some of the Sisters of the Precious Blood.

Sister began sending me on errands to the monastery. It was all very mysterious. When sister would open the grate at the front door, to speak to me, I tried my best to see beyond into the dark background. Intriguing though it was, the fun of dances and dates made it difficult to think of leaving “the world” forever. There was still a mighty strong “pull” in the opposite direction.

During hours of adoration at our parish church, I had discovered a relationship with someone very real. Prayer was no longer “saying prayers,” but had become a conversation with Jesus.

My parents gave me two choices. I could continue my education or work for at least a year. If I still wanted to enter the monastery after a year, I would have their blessing.

My Dad and I often took walks together. More than once, I heard him quote, “All things are passing, Marilyn, and we along with them.” Those words began to take on a special meaning for me. The presence of God had become real. Prayer could take me all over the world to do God’s work.

I went to work for the telephone company and enjoyed an enriching year of new relationships. True to their promise, my parents agreed that I could enter the monastery at the end of that year.

The day that I left the company, the chief engineer presented me with a parting gift and said: “We couldn’t lose you to a better fellow.”

Only God’s grace could have carried me through to that memorable day when the enclosure door closed quietly behind me. God called me to the most rewarding life that I could ever have imagined.
Sister Elizabeth Menard celebrates 60th Jubilee

“As I take some time to reflect on my life, I am especially grateful for my parents, Bernard and Adele Menard of Mooers, NY,” said Sister Elizabeth Menard, a Dominican Sister of Hope. “Not only did they give me life, but they gifted me with a large family of brothers and sisters that I have grown to appreciate more and more through the years.”

Because her parents were faith-filled people, Church was often the center of the family members’ lives.

“I am sure that their desire for each one of us was that we would be happy,” she said. “Because of that, I followed three brothers who became priests.”

Sister Elizabeth left home to discern her vocation as she was becoming a junior in high school. She attended Dominican Academy in Fall River, Massachusetts, an all girls’ high school.

The Dominican Sisters had been in Mooers Forks and taught her and her siblings religion each week at the public school.

“I was asked several times if I had thought of being a sister,” she said. “At first, I answered no, but when I realized sisters could also be full time teachers in school, I became interested. However, I did not know if God was calling me.”

As a junior, she would go to the chapel in evening. It was there she experienced God’s call.

“I knew I would enter right after high school, even though I did not know if I would stay,” she said. “I just knew I had to give it a good try.”

Very soon, Sister Elizabeth’s formation years were complete, and she was teaching at Dominican Academy and then in New Haven, Connecticut and in Plattsburgh.

“I taught from grade one to grade eight and absolutely loved teaching,” she said. “Each year brought new learnings, new challenges and success. I would have loved to teach for the rest of my life!”

After 14 years of teaching, Sister Elizabeth was asked to become the vocation and formation director for her congregation.

This new position required her to focus more in spirituality, theology, scripture and prayer than education.

“This new challenge became one of my greatest sources of growth,” she said. “It also offered many new opportunities for me to travel, attend conferences and take further studies.”

After eight years in formation, she accepted a position as a co-director of a Christian Life Center in Salem, New Hampshire.

“Although I became very close to the Sisters of Charity and loved them dearly, I never really felt called to their community,” Sister Mary Patrick said. “At the request of my parish priest, from whom I was receiving spiritual direction, I contacted the Sisters of St. Joseph in Watertown. I am so grateful to Mother Immaculata, major superior at that time, who invited me to visit the Motherhouse in Watertown. Upon spending an afternoon there, I knew that was where I belonged.”

She entered the Novitiate in September 1957 and made perpetual vows on August 28, 1963.

She attended SUNY Potsdam, where she received a bachelor’s degree in education and a master’s degree in secondary education with a concentration in French. She also did graduate work in Educational Administration and Supervision at St. Lawrence University and at Plattsburgh State, earning New York State certification as a school administrator in September 1975.

“My 20-year teaching career began at Holy Name School in AuSable Forks and continued at Augustinian Academy in Carthage and at Immaculate Heart Central High School in Watertown,” Sister Mary Patrick said. “I served as principal of Augustinian Academy High School and as vice-principal at Immaculate Heart Central until I was appointed vice-president of Mater Dei College in 1980. In September 1990, I became secretary to the diocesan Marriage Tribunal, a position I held until my retirement in 2010.”

The past 60 years have not been all work, Sister noted.

“I love to read, to listen to music, to travel, and spend time with friends,” she said. “Sixty years have passed quickly and have been filled with challenges and accomplishments for which I thank God. I rejoice, celebrate and give thanks to God for this Jubilee Year! I pray that more young women will answer God’s call to enter religious life. It is a life of love, joy, and peace which the world cannot give.”

Sixtieth Jubilee for Sister Mary Patrick Murphy

Sister Mary Patrick Murphy, a Sister of St. Joseph, was born in Potsdam, the daughter of Paul and Mildred Murphy. She has two brothers, Francis and Robert.

She first felt God’s call to religious life when she received the Sacrament of Confirmation at St. Mary’s Church in Potsdam. She was prepared for First Communion and Confirmation by the Franciscan Sisters of the Atonement, who were in Potsdam then.

Her family moved to Canton when she was a freshman in high school. There, she met the Sisters of Charity of Halifax, who administered St. Mary’s School in Canton. Since the school went only to the eighth grade, she was not able to attend.

“However, I did come to know the Sisters very well,” she said. “I even visited their Motherhouse and Novitiate in Halifax, Nova Scotia!”

From Confirmation to high school graduation, she felt God might be calling her to religious life.

“But I would not believe it and would try to put it out of my mind,” she said. “He couldn’t possibly be calling me!”

After graduation, she attended St. Lawrence University for a year and then worked in the county offices for a time.

The call pursued her. She finally realized she would not have peace until she tried religious life.

“Although I became very close to the Sisters of Charity and loved them dearly, I never really felt called to their community,” Sister Mary Patrick said. “At the request of my parish priest, from whom I was receiving spiritual direction, I contacted the Sisters of St. Joseph in Watertown. Upon spending an afternoon there, I knew that was where I belonged.”

She entered the Novitiate in September 1957 and made perpetual vows on August 28, 1963.

Event to help foster connections for families

By Kristina Dean
Staff Writer

OGDENSBURG - Calling “The Catholic Family: God’s Answer for Our Time,” a great opportunity for families to strengthen daily practices and to connect with other faithful families, Diocesan Family Life Director Stephen Tartaglia encouraged men, women and teens to attend the Oct. 13 event.

Held at St. Mary’s Cathedral, the 12-hour event includes guest speakers, Mass with Bishop Terry R. LaValley, specially created “break-out” sessions for teens, a healing Rosary, morning prayer, and a box lunch.

All families face tough times, Tartaglia said. These include paying bills, educating children, marital challenges, illness and employment struggles. What is distinctive about Catholic families is that they strive to cope with problems while keeping Christ at the center of the family. The long-term challenge in keeping Christ at the center is the isolation and backlash they experience, he said.

“They are swimming against the tide,” Tartaglia said. “As our culture and the institutions of our society slip further into godlessness, faithful Catholics find themselves more and more at odds with those around them. As Catholic teaching and practices are ridiculed and called antiquated, over the long haul, Catholic families can grow weary of ‘fighting the good fight’ and there can be a temptation to gradually move Christ out of the center.”

Besides developing practices like daily prayer, spending time together, attending Mass, and partaking in the sacraments, families also need to develop support systems, Tartaglia said.

“This means reaching out to other faithful Catholic families and spending time with them. Connecting with other like-minded people reduces the sense of anxiety, loneliness and isolation, and builds networks of people who help each other,” he said.

The day’s keynote speaker is Johnnette Benkovic Williams, founder and president of the Women of Grace (WOG) ministry as well as television host of EWTN’s WOG television and radio program. Benkovic Williams will speak on how the Catholic family is a beacon of hope in an age of confusion.

“I’m thrilled to be invited to the Diocese of Ogdensburg and the beautiful St. Mary’s Cathedral for the upcoming conference on the Catholic family,” she said. “St. John Paul II stated that the future of humanity passes by way of the family. During this time of challenge, I truly believe that families transformed by the truths of the faith and the grace of the sacraments can do much to bring healing to our world and to the Church.”

Speaker Susan Brinkmann, author, journalist and director of communications and New Age Research at WOG will center on how Catholics can understand where the attacks on the family are coming from and how the Catholic faith can empower them. She will also address teen girls who are preparing for the Sacrament of Confirmation. Her presentation, “Unleashing the Genius Within You,” will introduce girls to St. John Paul II’s concept of the feminine genius.

Author Thomas K. Sullivan will speak about “The Rosary: Your Weapon for Spiritual Warfare.” The military veteran will explain how to protect our families and arm ourselves and our children on the battlefield of life by relying on the Rosary. His presentation to teen boys is entitled, “Knights of Christ: Ignited by the Holy Spirit” where he will discuss being a knight in the Kingdom of God.

Environmental Stewardship

We are all connected

As we approach the feast of our great ecologist, St. Francis of Assisi, I have been pondering and trying to understand what that connectedness means.

A few years ago, many of us signed a “St. Francis Pledge.” This called us to pray; to learn all we could about the causes of climate change; to find ways to change our behavior and our ways of acting; and to be active in our communities to encourage change.

St. Francis saw God’s creative hand in all of creation, from the smallest creature to humans, made in God’s image. Because of this, he leads us to grow in love and respect for all life.

What does this mean in my life?
I know God made us in His own image and that, according to Genesis 2:15, we are called to cultivate and care for all of what was created. It was for our use but also for our care…a pretty tall order and a privileged task!

As long as we keep use and care in balance, using only what was needed to feed, clothe and house us, and used our growing knowledge to take care of and nourish the plants, animals and resources, so that those lives were also enriched, all went well.

Then ‘original sin’ popped up, and we began to see that enough was not enough and found many ways to live richer lives.

Let the Prayer of St. Francis be our prayer this week.

“Make me an instrument of your peace, where there is hatred let me bring your love.”

Let us ask God to help us be attuned to ‘cries of the earth and of the poor’ and to find one way to bring His loving care to alleviate their pain.

Former Cardinal McCarrick living in rural Kansas friary

WASHINGTON (CNS) — The Archdiocese of Washington announced Sept. 28 that former Cardinal Theodore E. McCarrick, who was removed from ministry earlier this year after abuse allegations came to light, is now living in Kansas in a friary for Capuchin Franciscan friars. Archbishop McCarrick resides at St. Fidelis Friary in the city of Victoria, the archdiocese said in a statement, adding that “there is no question that the privacy of this arrangement is requested” out of consideration for the peace of the community of the friars who live there. Victoria is in a rural area of Kansas and has a population of about 1,200. The website for the friary, which is in the Diocese of Salina, lists its residents as five priests and one religious brother. Salina Bishop Gerald V. Vincke issued a statement Sept. 28 saying Washington Archbishop Donald W. Vuerl called him on Sept. 13 to ask for his permission to allow Archbishop McCarrick to live there after the provincial, or superior, of the Capuchin religious community in Denver consented to the arrangement. “Please know that I agreed to this arrangement with the understanding that Archbishop McCarrick is excluded from any public appearances and ministry,” Bishop Vincke said in the statement.

Chinese Catholics outside mainland divided over agreement

HONG KONG (CNS) — Catholics in Macau, Taiwan and Hong Kong are divided over the provisional agreement between China and the Vatican on the appointment of bishops. Some believe it will lead to better diplomatic relations, but others question how Beijing’s clampdown on religious freedom is compatible with a fruitful relationship with the Catholic Church, reported ucanews.com. Bishop Stephen Lee Bun-sang of Macau said the agreement signed Sept. 22 offers Catholics in mainland China the chance to be in communion with the universal church. He said the agreement was achieved through sustained study and dialogue, and he encouraged Catholics in Macau to continue their prayers for the progress of China-Vatican relations. He said he hoped “the provisional agreement could truly be implemented,” contributing to Chinese society, and that the charity, pastoral work, social services and education provided by the church would help the spread of the Gospel of Jesus Christ. Father Otfrid Chen, secretary-general of the Taiwan bishops’ conference, told Radio Veritas the agreement “is purely pastoral and is about the appointment of bishops, and is, therefore, a very internal matter of the church but of a provisional nature.”

U.S. urged to end funding of research using tissue from aborted babies

WASHINGTON (CNS) — The chairman of the U.S. bishops’ Committee on Pro-Life Activities praised a decision by the U.S. secretary of the Department of Health and Human Services to end a Food and Drug Administration contract with Advanced Bioscience Resources in California to provide human fetal tissue to develop testing protocols. HHS also said it will do an audit of “all acquisitions involving human fetal tissue” and “all research involving fetal tissue” to make sure the statutes and regulations governing such research are being followed. Such oversight, it said, also is necessary “in light of the serious regulatory, moral and ethical considerations involved.”

Amid drama, Supreme Court gears up for session

WASHINGTON (CNS) — After weeks of intense drama focused on Supreme Court nominee Judge Brett Kavanaugh, the nation’s highest court was ready to get back to business, full bench or not.

The expression “the show must go on” certainly applies because the Supreme Court always starts on the first Monday in October, which this year is Oct. 1.

Over the summer and into September no one was talking about the court’s upcoming cases. Instead, all attention has been on who would fill the seat of Justice Anthony Kennedy, who announced his retirement at the end of June and officially retired July 31.

When President Donald Trump announced July 9 that Kavanaugh, a federal judge, was his nominee, the divided nation responded accordingly.

Many praised the judge’s qualifications and were pleased the president had fulfilled his promise to nominate a pro-life judge to the Supreme Court, but the choice angered many Americans displeased Kavanaugh’s vote could reverse the court’s 1973 Roe v. Wade decision legalizing abortion.

Crowds on both sides assembled on the steps of the Supreme Court the night Kavanaugh’s nomination was announced and they continued to protest during Senate confirmation hearings and the most recent Sept. 27 hearing concerning Christine Blasey Ford’s allegation of sexual assault against him for an incident she said occurred when she was 15 and he was 17.

After that daylong hearing, the Senate Judiciary Committee voted 11-10 Sept. 28 to advance Kavanaugh’s nomination to the Senate floor. Republicans then approved a proposal by Sen. Jeff Flake, R-Arizona, that the FBI be given one week to investigate Ford’s allegation, which the Republicans agreed to do.

But with or without closure on Kavanaugh, the court is set to resume what it does: listening to oral arguments and making decisions.

As the court gets back into action, it will not be facing the drama of high-profile cases on hot-button issues. Instead, it will have more basic cases: critical habitats under the Endangered Species Act, if states are bound by the Eighth Amendment’s ban on excessive fines and how property owners can challenge government land acquisitions.

The court usually hears about 70 cases of the nearly 7,000 that petition for review each year. To date, it has agreed to hear 38 cases. More will be announced in coming weeks.

So far, there is not much on the docket where Catholic leaders are likely to weigh in, but there are a few cases the court might take up that would be of interest.

One case of interest that the court has not decided yet if it will take involves a 40-foot-tall cross memorializing soldiers who died in World War I that sits at a busy intersection in Bladensburg, Maryland.

Last year, the 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals based in Richmond, Virginia, ruled 2-1 that the 93-year-old monument is unconstitutional and must be removed or destroyed. “(It) has the primary effect of endorsing religion and excessively entangles the government in religion.”

Known as the Bladensburg Cross or the Peace Cross, the memorial was erected by the Snyder-Farmer Post of the American Legion of Hyattsville, Maryland, to recall the 49 men of Prince George’s County who died in World War I.

The American Humanist Association, a Washington-based group that represents atheists and others, filed suit against the memorial because it is “in the shape of a cross.” It argued that having a religious symbol on government property violates the establishment clause of the First Amendment.

Another case the court could take up that will be of interest involves two state petitions from Louisiana and Kansas asking the court to uphold the termination of Planned Parenthood’s participation in the state Medicaid program.

During an American Bar Association preview of the court’s upcoming term Sept. 25 at American University, the panelists acknowledged that one big slice of the picture, the new justice, was still unclear.

Beth Brinkmann, an attorney and partner at Covington & Burling, who has argued 24 cases before the court, said: “It’s probably good they don’t have a lot of blockbusters and I think they would prefer it that way to get back to a natural state of affairs.”
QUEBEC CITY (CNS) — Daylight illuminates the monastery’s long corridors, seeping through the old windows dotting its thick walls. The floor responds to the slightest step with an enveloping rustle, as today’s Ursulines follow the footsteps of their predecessors. But this uninterrupted cycle that dates back to 17th-century New France is coming to an end.

In October, the majority of the 50 sisters who live in the monastery founded by St. Mary of the Incarnation will head to the Quebec borough of Beauport, a new home for the elderly awaits them. For the first time in their lives, they will live with laypeople and members of another community, the Servants of the Holy Heart of Mary.

"If we want health care until the end, if we want to be safe, if we want to be freed from administration and management, it was necessary to think about leaving the house," said Sister Cecile Dionne, superior general of the Ursulines of the Canadian Union.

For many Ursulines, it is an opportunity to make an introspective journey on their lives as nuns, on the gift of their lives to God. Contemplating the vast chapel of the monastery, Sister Dionne and two sisters recall the joy they felt during religious celebrations and the beauty of the songs they sang together. Their lives have been marked by Ursulines since their youth.

Sister Pauline Duchesne, chair of the board, became a boarder at the Ursulines when she was a teenager. "It was like a new birth. This is the first time I say it like that, but it’s really what I live. These sisters gave me love, confidence in me, made me see that I had abilities," she said, adding that she was fascinated by the joy that emanated from the sisters.

Sister Celine Bergeron, superior of a local community inside the monastery, said the Ursulines have always formed a big family, an experience they worked to perpetuate through the centuries.

The high ceilings of the chapel give way to a more intimate space, site of the tomb of St. Mary of the Incarnation, who established the Ursulines in Quebec nearly four centuries ago.

The three sisters say they thought a lot about her and prayed to the saint who left everything in France, including a son, to go on a mission in the New World.

"We’re leaving to go die elsewhere: We go to meet a new way of living our mission, which has always been to be with people," said Sister Dionne. "Maybe today, we are called to join our brothers and sisters who, like us, are facing the challenges of old age.

Sister Bergeron stressed that leaving their monastery is "a new crossing in our Ursuline life."

"We do it together. We will lean on each other. We do not know the mission that lies ahead," she said. "We will have to discover that it will be our new community life in a new world."

Many maxims painted on wooden panels adorn the walls of the monastery. The three nuns, who have been walking these places for decades, know them by heart. Here and there, some older sisters walk slowly and greet each other with a broad smile.

The place has no luxury, yet it has always been full of life.

Sister Dionne thought their monastery would be the last of the few Ursuline houses in the province that they would leave. It’s rather the first.

This departure is the consequence of a lack of religious vocations. The oldest of the Ursulines in the monastery is 102 years old. Their average age is 88.

The three sisters, however, believe that their values will be carried on.

The monastery will be used as a museum, cultural center, the Marie-de-l’Incarnation Center — all places and initiatives that will keep alive this memory, this ideal.

But it is difficult to predict how their presence will be felt in a generation or two.

VATICAN CITY (CNS) — Pope Francis asked Catholics to pray for the protection of the church from attacks by the devil, but also that the church would be more aware of its sins and stronger in its efforts to combat abuse.

Pope Francis asked Catholics to pray the rosary each day in October, seeking Mary’s intercession in protecting the church, and “at the same time, making her (the church) more aware of her sins, errors and the abuses committed in the present and the past, and committed to fighting without hesitation so that evil would not prevail,” the Vatican said in a statement released Sept. 29, the feast of the Archangels.

United “in communion and penitence as the people of God,” the statement said, Catholics should plead for protection against “the devil, who always seeks to divide us from God and from one another.”

Pope Francis met earlier in September with Jesuit Father Federico Fornos, international director of the Pope’s Worldwide Prayer Network, formerly known as the Apostleship of Prayer, to ask that the recitation of the rosary in October conclude with “the ancient invocation ‘Sub Tuum Praesidium’ (‘Under your protection’) and with the prayer to St. Michael the Archangel, who protects us in the battle against evil.”

The first prayer, to Mary, has a variety of translations. One reads: "We turn to you for protection, Holy Mother of God. Listen to our prayers and help us in our needs. Save us from every danger, glorious and blessed Virgin."

The prayer to St. Michael reads: "St. Michael the Archangel, defend us in battle. Be our defense against the wickedness and snares of the devil. May God rebuke him, we humbly pray, and do thou, O Prince of heavenly hosts, by the power of God, thrust into hell Satan, and all evil spirits, who prowl about the world seeking the ruin of souls."

The Vatican, announcing Pope Francis’ prayer request, cited his homily Sept. 11 at morning Mass where he spoke about the devil as the “Great Accuser” who “roams the world looking how to blame” and spread scandal.

Archbishop Carlo Maria Vigano, former nuncio of the United States, has called on Pope Francis to resign, claiming the pope knew about and ignored the sexual misconduct of former Cardinal Theodore E. McCarrick. He issued another statement Sept. 27 accusing the pope of “subtle slander” with that homily.

As of Sept. 30, neither Pope Francis nor the Vatican had responded to Archbishop Vigano’s original allegations.

In addition to the case of Archbishop McCarrick, the Catholic Church in the United States is still coming to grips with the mid-August release of the Pennsylvania grand jury report covering decades of alleged abuse by more than 300 priests; the report identified more than 1,000 victims.

A widespread abuse scandal and broad police investigation is ongoing in Chile; Cardinal George Pell, Vatican secretary for the economy, is on trial for abuse in Australia; and the bishops of German in late September released a report on thousands of cases of abuse in their country, some going back to 1946, but some as recent as 2000.
Respect Life Sunday readings focus on marriage

On this Respect Life Sunday, the readings are so appropriate, since they show us the reason why God made marriage, the source of new life.

In the Book of Genesis, we find that, after creating this beautiful world and allowing Adam to name all the creatures, God decided that it was not good for a man to be alone. He needed a helper that would be his equal, so God created woman. Far from being an afterthought, woman became the crown jewel of all creation. God established marriage as a union of a man and woman in one flesh, to love and support each other as equals in fidelity and faith. New life that comes from such a union can flourish in every way. It can be protected and cherished, educated through the example of loving parents, and formed in the knowledge and love of its Creator.

In the second reading from the Book of Hebrews, the Christian nature of marriage is spelled out. We find that, after God made a suitable partner for the man, the two of them are meant to mirror in their lives the teaching of Jesus through mutual and sacrificing love.

In the Gospel, Jesus is under attack from the Pharisees who try to trap Him by asking if it were licit for a man to divorce his wife. When the religious leaders quote Moses as allowing divorce, Jesus tells them God allowed it because of the hardness of your hearts. He insists that it was not so from the beginning, and quotes what we have just read in the first reading, “...what God has joined together, no human being must separate.”

Why then, we must ask, has the Catholic Church always allowed annulments from certain unions? Always true to the teaching of Scripture and of their founder, Jesus Christ, the Church examines whether God intended this union or not. Was each a suitable partner to the other, capable and willing to live the marriage in sacrificing love, building a true community of life?

Pope Francis has recently simplified the annulment process without in any way weakening the teaching of the Church on the nature of marriage.

October is also the Month of the Most Holy Rosary. Pray it daily that Mary will strengthen respect of all life, especially for the elderly, the handicapped, and those precious persons not yet unborn.

We all have the rights and dignity of being children of God.

Church is path to salvation, even in trying times

Dear Editor:

There are no words adequate to convey the feelings of millions of Catholics in response to recent revelations regarding the crimes committed against God’s people by Catholic clergy.

We pray that those who are proven guilty will be tried to the full extent of the law.

Bishop Robert Barron of California has addressed this tragedy several times to encourage people to keep the right perspective. He said he can fully understand how one might cut and run in such situations but he urges us not to do so.

Citing another incidence in history of man’s inhumanity to man he addressed the horror of slavery which President Lincoln dealt with in his time. He did not run but fought the good fight and ultimately wrote the Gettysburg Address proclaiming that all men are created equal.

He urges us to fight until our church is restored to its innate beauty.

Personally, I have been a Catholic since my Baptism some 85 years ago. It is the essence of my existence.

The Catholic faith is a beautiful sacramental faith and part of its’ beauty is that you can go anywhere in the world and feel at home.

The Mass, which I am able to attend every day of the week, the privilege to receive Christ in the Eucharist daily, the sacraments instituted by Christ to give grace, honoring God’s Mother Mary as the one who perfectly fulfilled His Will, these are what give meaning to my life.

The Catholic Church has built schools and hospitals the world over to render care to God’s people regardless of their faith or lack thereof.

I have met so many wonderful priests over the years who now come to mind – those who taught me ethics as it relates to health care when I studied nursing. The priest who visited my husband just before his death.

The Saviour has welcomed me home and blessed my husband just before his death.

More recently, I received a call from a distressed friend saying her husband was critically ill. I immediately called her Pastor and had to leave a message. By the time I reached the hospital, he was there comforting her. Leave the Catholic Church! I personally feel that would dishonor all the wonderful and dedicated clergy who have been a part of my spiritual journey.

Why would I ever give anyone that power over my relationship with my Saviour?

NEW YORK (CNS) — Turning the legend of Bigfoot on its head with plenty of laughs along the way comes the animated musical comedy "Smallfoot" (Warner Bros.).

While definitely entertaining on the surface, the film — co-written by Karey Kirkpatrick and Clare Sera, and directed by Kirkpatrick ("Over the Hedge") — involves underlying themes that Catholic parents will want to address with their kids.

The movie opens in a village high in the mountains where yetis live. They’re a happy community, satisfied with the simple tasks of their day-to-day lives.

Led by Stonekeeper (voice of Common), they have a strict code of conduct: They must live according to the stones, which have come via inspiration to generations of Stonekeepers’ predecessors. As far as the yetis are concerned, the stones are the truth and questioning them is not allowed.

Migo (voice of Channing Tatum) dreams of succeeding his father, Dorgle (voice of Danny DeVito), as the village’s gong-ringer, a very important post since the daily sounding of the gong serves as a communal reveille.

Frustrated that his training isn’t going as well as he’d hoped, Migo takes a walk on the mountain to ease his disappointment. While there, he witnesses a plane crash and beholds something he didn’t believe existed: a smallfoot, that is, a human.

Rushing back to the village, Migo tells his story but when the yetis investigate, the plane and survivor are gone. Migo’s revelation has everyone worried because the stones tell them there is no such thing as a smallfoot. But Migo knows what he saw and for his insistence that the stones are wrong, Stonekeeper banishes him from the village.

Wandering the mountain, he comes upon Meechee (voice of Zendaya), Stonekeeper’s daughter, who secretly heads a group of village oddballs calling themselves the SES, for Smallfoot Evidentiary Society. Meechee believes with all her heart that humans exist, and has been collecting evidence.

Migo decides to risk it all and go below the clouds to look for proof.

In the human world below, Percy (voice of James Corden) has been struggling to make the nature-themed television show he hosts a success. The ratings have dropped recently and his producer, Brenda (voice of Yara Shahidi), is ready to call it quits.

Percy is willing to do whatever it takes to make his program a hit, even if that means getting someone to dress up in a yeti costume so he can capture the resulting "discovery" on film.

When Migo wanders into the town, Percy thinks it’s Brenda in disguise. Realizing his mistake, terrified Percy passes out, enabling Migo to wrap him in a sleeping bag and carry him back up the mountain.

When Migo presents Percy to the village, their whole way of thinking is thrown into doubt. If a smallfoot does exist, does that mean the stones could be wrong? As Migo and Percy become friends, Percy’s presence among the yetis brings to light some dark truths as they begin to ask questions for the first time.

Youngsters are not equipped to navigate the subtleties at work here. But teens will be able to enter into a discussion in which the importance of asking questions as an essential part of learning — very much celebrated in "Smallfoot" — is balanced by an understanding of revelation as the basis for our experience of faith.

Why, for example, do we put our trust in what God has revealed? Is there an inevitable conflict between science and religion — or can these two channels of truth coexist in harmony?
