God gives abundantly

VATICAN CITY (CNS)—God asks so little of people and yet, he gives so much in return, Pope Francis said. "He asks for our goodwill in daily life, he asks us for an open heart, he asks us to be willing to be better," the pope said at his weekly general audience at the Vatican Feb. 28.

Because of ice and unusual freezing temperatures in Rome, Pope Francis held the audience in the Vatican’s Paul VI hall. But the Vatican also opened St. Peter’s Basilica to accommodate the overflow.

Giant screens were set up in the basilica so the people could follow the audience, and later the pope went to the basilica to greet and bless those inside.

In his main talk, the pope continued his series on the Mass, focusing on the Liturgy of the Eucharist, which begins with the preparation of the gifts of bread and wine that are then consecrated and distributed to the faithful at Communion.

New program to aid victims of sex abuse

The Diocese of Ogdensburg has established a voluntary Independent Reconciliation and Compensation Program (the "IRCP") in an effort to assist victims of clergy sex abuse in their healing process.

Introducing the IRCP, Bishop Terry R. LaValley explained, "The IRCP further expresses our contrition to the victims who have reported clergy sexual abuse to the Diocese and is intended to assist in their desire to find healing and peace."

EDITOR’S NOTE

The chance to help Jesus in disguise

One of the attributes of the Diocese of Ogdensburg about which we can take great pride is our concern for people who don’t live anywhere near us.

For 40 years, we provided spiritual and material support to St. Martin de Porras parish in Molendio, Peru, through the Ogdensburg Peruvian Apostolate. During the past year, we have been active in a “solidarity of faith” through our twinning initiative with the Diocese of Latakia, Syria.

The North Country Mission of Hope has just completed yet another service trip to Nicaragua.

While we see plenty of poverty in our North Country communities, we Catholics know that efforts to help the poor must extend beyond our local efforts.

This coming weekend we have another opportunity to assist the poorest of the poor in all parts of the world.

The annual Catholic Relief Services collection, to be held in all parishes of our diocese, will give us the chance to “help Jesus in disguise.”

The archbishop in charge of national collections, Archbishop Thomas J. Rodi of Mobile, Alabama, explains it eloquently: Christ is standing at the door of our hearts, knocking, seeking relief from pain and suffering around the world. He comes to us bearing the disgrace of vulnerable immigrants and refugees, the poor and marginalized, the sick and lonely.

“The Catholic Relief Services Collection is an opportunity to respond and comfort Christ as we see him in our brothers and sisters,” the archbishop continued. “His collection represents our community of faith at work in the world, saving souls and improving lives.”

The Catholic Relief Services Collection supports Catholic organizations that carry out international relief and solidarity efforts.

FATHER MUECH SAYS

The Stations: perfect prayer of gratitude

These past few weeks, the spirit of gratitude has been at the top of my thoughts.

As the days of Lent pass by so quickly, the importance of gratitude has come to mind. Lent always leads to Holy Week, even in the first weeks of the season. Already Lent reminds me of the importance of walking with Jesus in his sufferings – and to stand at his cross – as he dies for us. This certainly causes me to be intensely grateful.

Personally, thoughts of Jesus’ terrible sufferings actually saddens me a great deal. I find it very difficult to accept Jesus’ sufferings and his crucifixion. I wish he didn’t have to suffer. I know that it is important to our faith that Jesus suffered and died for us. I just find it so difficult to have happened.

So, each Lent, I pray to help me learn gratitude that Jesus was crucified. His crucifixion did lead to the miracle of the resurrection. Our salvation demands that Jesus would suffer and die for us.

Obviously, I should be grateful that Jesus suffered for me and my salvation. I still feel so sad that his sufferings were so intense. However, I do pray in thanks to the Lord: “Thank you, Jesus – you suffered so much for me.”

Among my Lenten prayers I continue to pray that the Lord helps me to recognize that the Lord has loved me so much. Jesus loves us all as demonstrated by his suffering and crucifixion. I want to learn to accept, I want to learn to love, this suffering Jesus.

In this regard, the best way to lead me to the proper spirit in accepting the suffering of Jesus is through the Stations of the Cross – a prayer of gratitude to the sufferings of Jesus.

The Stations are a journey with Jesus from Pilate to Calvary. In some places, like among Latinos, instead of walking around the Stations in Church, the people walk in procession around the parish streets, stopping before fourteen homes for the prayers and remembrance of each station.

Basically, the Stations of the Cross are primarily a personal prayer. Doing the Stations means walking alone around the Church, visiting each station. One possibility would be to read the prayers in one of the little books or simply quietly, to stand before each station looking at the image and remembering the incident in Christ’s Passion.

This prayer, this visiting of the Stations of the Cross provides moments of gratitude as we remember these sufferings of Jesus and his crucifixion. The Stations become a time of realizing how much Jesus accepted for us. I must admit that I still feel very upset that Jesus suffered so much, that my sins cost such suffering for Jesus. My Lenten suffering should cost me some suffering also.

However, praying the Stations of the Cross reminds me – even just once a year – of all that Jesus went through in his Passion.

One more thing. Each time we complete the Stations of the Cross, we should continue our prayer in remembrance of the Resurrection of Jesus. We believe with complete trust that the crucifixion of Jesus leads to his resurrection; the death of Jesus leads to new life in the Lord. For as we recognize that we must be ready to suffer with Jesus and will die with the Lord, all of this leads us to new life. We will find resurrection with Our Lord.
OGDENSBURG — The Diocese of Ogdensburg has established a voluntary Independent Reconciliation and Compensation Program (the “IRCP”) in an effort to assist victims of clergy sex abuse in their healing process.

Introducing the IRCP, Bishop Terry R. LaValley explained, “The IRCP further expresses our contrition to the victims who have reported clergy sexual abuse to the Diocese and is intended to assist in their desire to find healing and peace. We can never make them whole or give them back what has been taken from them, but we hope that this will help bring healing to the deep wounds suffered by these innocent victims.

The Diocese has longstanding programs that offer professional counseling and other assistance to victims of abuse. The IRCP moves beyond this pastoral outreach and offers compensation in response to what these victims have suffered.

Bishop LaValley explained, “I have spent time with and listened to many victims of clerical abuse. They often tell me they are asking the Church to assist them in finding peace and healing for the deep wounds of abuse. This is an opportunity for victims to find that healing.

“We cannot give them back what has been taken from them,” the bishop said. “Vic­tims have told me they want some tangible sign of the Church’s desire for healing and reconciliation. It is my prayer that this program will give us the opportunity to truly hear their story and offer compensation in way that brings a sense of healing to them.”

Mr. Kenneth Feinberg and Ms. Camille Biros will serve as the independent adminis­trators of this program. Mr. Feinberg and Ms. Biros have vast experience in administering voluntary compensation programs. They were the independent adminis­trators of the World Trade Center compensation program, as well as similar IRCP pro­grams that have been undertaken by other dioceses in New York State.

Bishop LaValley commented, “Mr. Feinberg and Ms. Biros were selected to serve as independent admin­istrators because of their skills, competence and reputa­tion for treating claimants with fairness, respect and dignity.”

Mr. Feinberg and Ms. Biros have full discretion determining compensation for victim-survivors, and the Diocese will abide by their decisions. “As we begin this assignment, we are pleased to work with Bishop LaValley and the Diocese of Ogdens­burg,” said Mr. Feinberg.

The independent adminis­trators will evaluate the claims of those who have previously reported inci­dents of clergy sex abuse to the Diocese and determine what compensation will be awarded.

The Diocese of Ogdens­burg will take a long-term loan to cover all costs of compensating victim-survivors. The Diocese will not use money contributed by parishioners to support parishes, schools or charitable works to fund the IRCP, nor will it use funds from the annual Bishop’s Fund Appeal, any capital campaign dona­tions or gifts to a specific ministry or apostolate.

Individuals who wish to learn more about the Independent Reconciliation Pro­gram of the Diocese of Ogdensburg can visit www.OgdensburgDioceseIRCP.com. Inquiries about eligibility for the IRCP should be directed via email to claimant services@Ogdens­burgDioceseIRCP.com or by calling the IRCP’s toll-free line at 833 718-2719.

IRCP is ‘a sign of our need for God’s mercy’

Today (March 1) I announced the establish­ment of an Independent Reconciliation and Com­pensation Program ("IRCP") for the Diocese of Ogdensburg. The IRCP is designed to offer repara­tion, promote reconcilia­tion, and fur­ther the healing of individuals who have been sexually abused by members of our clergy.

The clergy sexual abuse crisis in the Catholic Church is a sad chapter in our history. It has dramatically impacted the faith of so many. As a diocese we have taken important steps to address this problem by reporting all allegations of abuse to the proper District Attorney, removing from ministry all clergy with credible allegations of abuse, and preventing future acts of abuse through our prudent safe environment programs and policies.

As your Bishop, I again apologize for the pain and suffering caused by some priests of our diocese. We have consistently provided sur­vivors of abuse with counseling, spiritual sup­port and other support to help them find ways to heal and move forward. We have continuously looked for ways to reach out to victims.

The Year of Mercy, with its focus on healing and reconciliation, stimulated renewed discus­sion among the bishops of New York State about how to reach out to these victims. These discus­sions led to the establishment of IRCPs in the Archdiocese of New York, the Diocese of Brook­lyn, the Diocese of Rockville Center, and the Dio­cese of Syracuse. Noting the good will and healing fostered by these IRCP, I decided to establish this IRCP for our diocese. It is simply the right thing to do.

The IRCP will be administered by Mr. Kenneth Feinberg and Ms. Camille Biros, both of whom have vast experience in administering voluntary compensation programs. They administered the World Trade Center compensation program as well as the similar IRCPs established by other dioceses in New York State. Mr. Feinberg and Ms. Biros were selected for this role because of their skills, competence and reputation for treating claimants with fairness, respect and dignity.

The independent administrators will work with those who have reported credible instances of clergy abuse and determine what compensation will be paid to them. These individuals will be invited by letter to participate in this volun­tary program. Mr. Feinberg and Ms. Biros have complete discretion in determining who is eligible for compensation and the amount of that compensation.

There are 38 individuals who will be invited to participate in this program. These claims repre­sent 21 priests who have been credibly accused of sexual abuse. These claims date back to the 1940s. Most of the accused priests are dead, and all of them are no longer in ministry.

The diocese will bear the cost of this program and will borrow the funds needed to compensate survivors. Repayment of that loan will be made from the sale of diocesan assets over the next several years. Please be assured that we will not use money collected from parishioners to support parishes, schools or charitable works to fund the IRCP. Additionally, monies donated to the annual Bishop’s Fund Appeal, any capital campaign, or gifts to any specific ministry or apostolate will not be used for the IRCP.

My decision to establish this IRCP comes after much prayer and reflection. I have consulted with my brother bishops, the College of Consul­tors, diocesan staff, and the Diocesan Finance Council, all of whom are supportive of the pro­gram. This IRCP is a sign of our need for God’s mercy, reconciliation with survivors, and our desire to reach out with compassion to those who suffer as a result of abuse.

Please join me in praying that this effort will bring peace and healing to survivors, and for­giveness and reconciliation to all affected. May we continue our efforts to provide the safest en­vironment possible for our children and young people, and to reach out to our hurting brothers and sisters.
Listening to the voice of God

Bishop LaValley’s homily at the 2018 Rite of Election, Feb. 25 at St. Mary’s Cathedral

I was recently reading a commentary that reminded me of a familiar TV reality series, The Voice. While there are various stages of the competition, a unique selling point is the “blind audition” in the opening round where the judges have their backs to the contestants.

God’s voice is creative... God’s voice is transformative

If the judges are impressed by the quality of a contestant’s singing voice, they press a button and turn around in their swivel chairs to see who it is they have voted for.

Once committed, the judge becomes the contestant’s coach, collaborating with the singer to win the competition and, of course, win a lucrative deal with a music company.

What counts is not the contestant’s beauty or their ability to dance or look good, but simply the quality of their singing voice. Of course, the judge’s ability to really listen is important.

The Voice figures prominently in today’s readings. In the first reading, the voice of God seems to be asking if not the impossible, then the inhuman. Isaac -

Abraham and Sarah’s only son - was the child God promised so that Abraham could become the founding father of a ‘great nation.’

Not only did God seem to be asking him to do something unimaginable, but He also seemed to be going back on that sacred promise. With relief, we discover that in fact the point of the story is the very opposite to what it appears to be on the surface. Whereas perhaps human sacrifice was commonplace in the ancient Near East, what is revealed is that God does not want human sacrifice.

By careful listening, Abraham’s understanding of God develops and grows, and his relationship of trust and faith in God deepens.

The voice of God takes center stage at the Transfiguration in our Gospel, affirming a truth that up to this point in Mark’s Gospel God had revealed only to Jesus Himself at His baptism: His identity as God’s own beloved Son - a truth that literally transfigures Jesus.

Finally, His disciples have come to the point where they are ready to hear this truth. But their listening is only partial. As Jesus goes down the mountain, He starts to help His disciples to understand the meaning of His Sonship: that He will be faithful and obedient to His Father, even to the point of having to give up His life.

Jesus trusts God’s faithfulness and ability to raise Him from the dead. We know it is only after the resurrection that the disciples begin to really hear and appreciate what Jesus has been telling them.

As Christians, we believe that the Transfiguration is not merely a past event but an ongoing reality. God’s voice is creative - God spoke and creation came into being.

God’s voice is transformative: Jesus literally glowed as God affirmed Him as the Son.

God’s voice continues to be at work in our world today, and in our lives. But, like Abraham and the disciples, we need to learn how to listen and perceive at more than just a superficial level.

That takes time and practice and commitment. I pray that’s been part of your Lenten discipline: setting time aside every day in prayer with Jesus.

So much in our world today works against anything that takes time. We want, we demand things instantly - from God or anyone else - it’s all about instant gratification.

Persevere in your prayer, even when it seems unproductive. Don’t lose patience.

When we listen in prayer - when we are able to step outside our own expectations and preconceptions and focus simply on God’s Voice, sort of like those judges on the TV show, we find that God’s voice continues to be creative and transformative. By making time, each and every day, to quietly open ourselves to the presence of God, we make room for God to affirm our dignity as God’s beloved daughters and sons.

And as that reality gradually seeps into our minds and hearts, we increasingly learn how to live out of that sacred space - to live as daughters and sons of God, not out of a sense of legal obedience to a command, but because that is who we know we really are at the core of our being.

Being children of the loving Father is something that shines out from our lives - because we have learned to listen to the Voice. Others experience the light, the joy of the Gospel through us.

With the help of your pastors and the parish RCIA team and staff, continue to make these forty days of Lent a privileged time of reflection and prayer with the God who has loved you into existence and Whose voice continues to call us, every day, to follow Him.

On the day of our baptism, God smiled and calls us His “beloved.” I’m sure this day, the Lord is smiling as He sees your joy-filled faces here this afternoon. He is well-pleased!

As I thank you for coming to our St. Mary’s Cathedral to be counted among the elect, I want to thank your pastors and RCIA teams for their continuing prayers and support.

Know of my continued prayers for each one of you as you continue your journey of faith. May God be praised...forever may God be praised!

Mercy Care to offer parish nursing course

LAKE PLACID - Mercy Care for the Adirondacks, a mission sponsored by the Sisters of Mercy, will offer the Foundations Course for Faith Community Nursing / Parish Nursing on April 6, April 7, April 14, April 21, and April 28. The course is offered to registered nurses of all faiths. Mercy Care provides the training at no cost to participants but pre-registration is required.

The parish nurse offers assistance in obtaining community services, helps with understanding diagnoses, medications and diagnostic tests, provides blood pressure screening, health education programs and much more.

The parish nurse does not do hands-on nursing or duplicate what is available through the public health nurse, but does bring his or her nursing experience and faith to the service of others. Mercy Sister Catherine Cummings, Ed.D., R.N. is qualified as a Parish Nurse Educator and will lead the training course. The course entitled “Foundations of Faith Community Nursing” requires 38 contact hours.

If you are a registered nurse with a desire to help people live a healthy, faith-filled life, you may wish to serve your own faith community or others in the Tri-Lakes area as a volunteer parish nurse.

The program offers the nurse an opportunity to choose the number of hours she/he is able to give to providing care that is holistic and wellness-focused in the community.

Protecting God’s Children

The Diocese of Ogdensburg has scheduled sessions for Protecting God’s Children for Adults. Pre-registration online is required in order to participate. Participants may pre-register at www.virtus.org by selecting the registration button and following the directions. Further information is available from Jill Lawrence, 315-393-2920, ext 1440.

Upcoming sessions:
- March 10 - 10 a.m., St. Mary’s Church, Evans Mills
- March 14 - 6 p.m., Trinity Catholic School, Massena
- March 23 - 6:30 p.m., Sacred Heart Church, Massena

Lent… a time “to hear the cries of the poor and the cries of the earth”

We hear in the Scriptures during Lent that the kind of fasting that God asks of us is to break the unjust fetters and let the oppressed go free, share your bread with the hungry… Isaiah 58:6.

Pope Francis sees this call to fast from injustices intricately connected with those affected by poverty and with the earth upon which we all depend for life.

One courageous woman, Sister Dorothy Stang, SND, saw this integral connection and gave her life to respond to these ‘cries’. A native of Dayton, Ohio, she entered the convent at age 17. Her first assignment was to Coroata in Brazil where she was sent to educate local farmers who had no formal education. The main thrust at that time came from large-scale ranchers who ruthlessly drove farmers from their lands. Very often the powerful ranchers paid the police to look the other way.

Sister became a champion of farmers, indigenous groups, and the forest itself. With a bounty of $50,000 on her head placed there by ranchers, she was shot and killed on her way home from a particularly disagreeable meeting with them.

Sister Dorothy’s life is a testimony to the Beatitude “Blessed are those who are persecuted.” While you and I may not have to give up our lives physically to respond to these ‘cries’, we may find ourselves asking: how can I respond to the needs of the poor and of the earth?

Some suggestions for prayer and action this week:
- #1. Support the Rice Bowl Project sponsored by the Catholic Relief Services, Pontifical Mission Societies of the Diocese of Ogdensburg, or other missionary group, i.e. Maryknoll Missionaries;
- #2. Examine your daily routine to see if there is one more practice to ‘reduce, reuse or recycle’ that will protect the future of our beautiful earth. Do it.

When Dr. Greg and Lisa Popcak keynote the April 14 Family Life conference in Massena, they will speak about marriage from long personal and professional experience. Married 27 years and the parents of three children, the couple has authored 20 books, co-founded the Pastoral Solutions Institute, and been widely featured on radio, TV, and in newspapers and magazines. Sought-after speakers on marriage and family life, the Popcaks regularly address audiences across the country and around the world.

In a recent NCC interview, Dr. Popcak discussed the beauty and power of Catholic marriage.

NCC: The title for the conference is "Marriage: God Calls, We Respond," in what sense is marriage a vocation?

DR. POPCAK: Marriage is, obviously, a sacrament - and a call from God, a vocation, to love and serve him, and one another, in a particular way. Here's the thing nobody gets: marriage is a ministry.

We tend to think of ministry as the “churchy” stuff we do in the church building, like being a lector or Eucharistic minister. But ministry is any activity we do that conveys God's love to another person.

Marriage is a primary ministry. It's my job to discover the way God wants me to love my spouse and kids. From that, God also wants to use my marriage to change the world.

NCC: Could you expand on that concept?

DR. POPCAK: There are two ways God wants to use marriage to change the world. First, he wants to show the world that the free, total, faithful love that everybody aches for is actually real. I can see this in Bob and Mary Smith over there. I grew up with them and I know they're not perfect - but if they can do this kind of love, then maybe I can have it too.

Second, the world needs loving, responsible, kind, godly people - so God gives married couples the ability to give the world what it needs by having children and raising them to be loving, responsible, kind, godly people. Through this, God allows our love to change the world for generations to come.

So, marriage is a very important ministry. When we start to think about it that way and live it that way, it changes everything.

NCC: What makes the Catholic understanding of marriage unique?

DR. POPCAK: Unlike all other versions of marriage, Catholic marriage doesn't let you define the terms of your relationship; you do not write your own vows. This is not because the Church wants to control you, but because the Catholic vision of marriage is that it is a discipleship relationship.

As disciples, we say to the Church: 'Teach me to love this person. Teach me to take the feelings I have for this person and apply them in a way that glorifies God and helps us to become everything we were created to be.' That is a very different model of marriage than what most people have in mind when they say, 'I do.' There's a lot more going on in Catholic marriage than other marriage types, and we need to do a better job articulating that to people. We tend to assume that everyone means the same thing by 'marriage,' but today that is less true than ever.

NCC: How can the Church effectively communicate God's plan for marriage?

DR. POPCAK: I think that the Church really needs to take seriously the Second Vatican Council's emphasis on the universal call to holiness. In looking at pastoral theology over 2000 years, it is shocking to see just how little of it concerns lay spirituality.

In fact, St. Pope John Paul II literally did write two-thirds of everything the Church has taught on marriage. That is not by accident, as he wrote in the wake of Vatican II with its stress on the universal call to holiness. I would suggest that St. John Paul II's Theology of the Body and his other writings on marriage and family are an effort to 'operationalize' the universal call to holiness. What does the universal call to holiness mean for a lay person?

What does it mean to have a spirituality that incorporates sexuality?

NCC: What does it mean to have a 'spirituality that incorporates sexuality'?

DR. POPCAK: Lay people, like those vowed to celibacy, must make an embodied response to discipleship. Jesus gave us his body at the Incarnation, and now through the Eucharist: our bodies are part of discipleship. I have to give God lordship over my whole self, which includes my body.

Yet even now a lot of well-meaning pastors, themselves celibate, are quick to excuse married people from the demands this involves. As a Church, we are too quick to pat lay people on the head: 'It's just too hard for them.' We are trying to be merciful, but this is de-meaning, and we are infantilizing the laity.

NCC: What message will you bring to the conference?

DR. POPCAK: We would like couples to know: you do not have to settle. God wants great things for your marriage. He wants to fill that ache in your heart for love that lasts. He wants you to have an intimate and passionate marriage, and he wants you to use your marriage to change the world!
Rights and responsibilities

By John Miner
Director, Respect Life Ministry

Fourth in a series

In human society one man's natural right gives rise to a corresponding duty in other men; the duty, that is, of recognizing and respecting that right. Every basic human right draws its authoritative force from the natural law, which confers it and attaches to it its respective duty. Hence, to claim one's rights and ignore one's duties, or only half fulfill them, is like building a house with one hand and tearing it down with the other.

-Pope St. John XXIII
Encyclical: Pacem in Terris, Peace on Earth

As citizens and residents of the United States, we often regard our rights as those which are enumerated in the Bill of Rights of our Constitution, such as: freedom of religion, speech, and of the press, freedom to peaceably assemble, freedom to petition the government, the right to keep and bear arms, the right to due process and a fair trial, etc. And the Ninth Amendment even reminds us that the people retain rights that are not explicitly stated in the Constitution.

But the Church is not limited to that which is recognized by governments. We do hope that governments reflect Christian values, and we should strive to hold our governments accountable to that end, but we have the individual responsibility to recognize and respect rights, even if our government fails to do so.

The statement above from Pope John illustrates how the Church recognizes responsibilities and rights - as a twofold dynamic that must remain in balance. Our responsibilities in response to the rights of others is based on the concept of solidarity; which will be explained later in this series, “Make Me An Instrument of Your Peace.” Subsidiarity is employed to work in conjunction with solidarity.

As Pope Benedict XVI explained in his encyclical Caritas in Veritate (Charity in Truth), when people are unable to accomplish something on their own, subsidiarity describes the assistance given to them that is “designed to achieve their emancipation, because it fosters freedom and participation through assumption of responsibility” (no. 57). With this description, Habitat for Humanity comes to mind. The organization builds homes for people who would otherwise be unable to afford them.

In addition to repaying the affordable mortgage, the homeowner invests hundreds of hours of labor alongside volunteers and other Habitat homeowners. This is not a “handout” but an investment in the community and in the individual, and it is done on a very local level.

That is another characteristic of subsidiarity - keeping the authority and decision-making at the lowest level to achieve a goal. It avoids what Pope Benedict called, “paternalist social assistance that is demeaning to those in need.” (no. 58)

Pope St. John Paul II wrote in his apostolic exhortation, Christifideles Laici, “The inviolability of the person which is a reflection of the absolute inviolability of God, finds its primary and fundamental expression in the inviolability of human life. Above all, the common outcry, which is justly made on behalf of human rights - for example, the right to health, to home, to work, to family, to culture - is false and illusory if the right to life, the most basic and fundamental right and the condition for all other personal rights, is not defended with maximum determination.” (no. 38)

So, the right to life is first. This does not absolve us of our duties to the other rights he mentioned. When the right to life is respected, the demand for these other rights is, in his words, “justly made.”

The “duty” to which Pope John refers, is to our neighbor, and respecting that right means directly responding to it when we have the ability. How could we be aware of a hungry or homeless member of our community and not respond as Jesus commanded us? The rights that our faith recognizes all stem from our human dignity: the right to life, the right to bodily integrity, the right to nourishment, the right to medical care. All require, to one degree or another, the cooperation of others. Christ’s teaching about love of neighbor is the very foundation of the Works of Mercy, both corporal and spiritual, that are taught by the Church.

One last thought: St. Teresa of Calcutta recognized the rights of all those for whom she cared. She based it on the reflection of Jesus in their being. When we consider this in our responsibilities towards our neighbors, it is much easier to act in charity and for the “duty” to come with much less effort.
SUPPORT THE CATHOLIC RELIEF SERVICES COLLECTION

Help Jesus in Disguise

Collection Weekend March 10 & 11, 2018

www.usccb.org/catholic-relief
In this Jubilee Year of Mercy, Pope Francis has called each of us to be a witness of charity. He encourages us to "open our eyes and see the misery of the world, the wounds of our brothers and sisters who are denied their dignity, and let us recognize that we are compelled to heed their cry for help!" (Misericordiae Vultus [MV], no. 15).

The Peter’s Pence Collection unites us in solidarity to the Holy See and its works of charity to those in need. Your generosity allows the Pope to respond to our suffering brothers and sisters.

The purpose of the Peter’s Pence Collection is to provide the Holy Father with the financial means to respond to those who are suffering as a result of war, oppression, natural disaster, and disease.

Broader representation of women in church is a process, cardinal says

By Junno Archo Esteves
Catholic News Service

ROME (CNS) - The fuller participation of women in decision-making in the Catholic Church is a continuing process that still needs time, Cardinal Kevin J. Farrell said.

Speaking during a question-and-answer session in Rome March 1 after the presentation of the book, "A Pope Francis Lexicon," Cardinal Farrell said that a greater role for women in the church is going to take more than just issuing a decree.

"It's a question of changing a culture, and I believe that will take time, but I think that Pope Francis -- more than anybody -- has tried and continues to try and continues to bring about that change each and every day," he said.

Responding to a question regarding an essay written by Tina Beattie, a theologian, in which she noted the exclusion of women "from many offices of Catholic teaching," Cardinal Farrell said the pope would not totally agree that "he has not tried and is not bringing women into positions of authority in the church."

Some dicasteries once led by cardinals are now led by bishops and priests and, thus, pave the way for more participation by laypeople, especially women, in church decisions, said Honduran Cardinal Oscar Rodriguez Maradiaga of Tegucigalpa, who also spoke at the conference.

"Every day, more and more, the presence of the laity is taking place," the cardinal said. "It's a process of changing the culture, but I can assure (you) it's taking place."

Cardinal Rodriguez Maradiaga, a member of Pope Francis' international Council of Cardinals, also was a contributor to the book, writing an essay on reform.

Cardinal Farrell also was asked about reports that he prevented a conference on women in the church, Voices of Faith, from meeting in the Vatican March 8, although the conference had been held for the past four years in the Casina Pio IV, a villa located in the Vatican gardens.

Organizers of the conference said they had to change locations after the cardinal rejected the participation of several speakers, including former Irish President Mary McAleese, an advocate of gay marriage and women's ordination.

Events held within the Vatican, Cardinal Farrell explained, are "presumed to be sponsored by the pope" and people assume that "the pope is in agreement with everything that is said."

After being told "what the event was about, it was not appropriate for me to continue to sponsor such an event," he said.

However, Cardinal Farrell said that while he could not sponsor the event, the church is "always open to listening and we are always open to dialogue."

"It would appear sometimes that we are not, but this is one case where I would say the circumstances don't correspond to what some people would like to make out that we don't want to listen," the cardinal said.
Time to take a ‘breather’ and rejoice

This Fourth Sunday of Lent is still called “Laetare (rejoice) Sunday” because the opening words of today’s Mass are from Isaiah: “Re­joice, Jerusalem, you who mourned.” We find in all three readings.

Second Chronicles (first reading), gives the history of Israel from Solomon, the last king of the united kingdom, to King Cyrus of Persia. Princes, priests and people had “added infidelity to infidelity” by mistreating the prophets and ridiculing God’s message. Enraged, God had sent them into exile in Babylon for seventy years. But in his great mercy, he uses a pagan, King Cyrus, who had conquered the Babylonians, to release the enslaved Israelites, sending them back to Jerusalem, loaded with gold and materials for rebuilding the Temple, the center and soul of their worship.

What striking similarities there are in our own day. All we have to do is read surveys and follow the news to know how many in our country wish to make laws that would overturn God’s laws on marriage, life, and family.

We need to pray that God will forgive us for this flaunting of His laws. If we do not pray and do penance, our religious freedom may be more and more confined to the church buildings.

A reason for hope, however, is found in today’s Gospel. There, we find one of the most consoling texts in all Scripture: “For God so loved the world that he gave his only Son, so that everyone who believes in Him might not perish but might have eternal life.” What follows is Jesus’ plea that we shun the darkness. That means that we must preach the Gospel “from the rooftops”. “For whoever lives the truth comes to the light, so that his works may be clearly seen as done in God.”

That means living in a society under laws of religious freedom. Along with religious freedom, Christians are meant to have courage and some boldness in taking advantage of it. We need to make our voices heard along with deep conviction about the truth of our Catholic teaching. Indeed, REJOICE this Sunday.

Finding strength in a life with sad moments

By Father John Catoir
Contributing writer

When I was little, I was sad because my parents wouldn’t buy me a pony. (We lived in an apartment.) When I was a teen, I was sad because I had pimples. As an adult, I became sad when I started losing my hair. You might say, sadness is part of the human condition. However, there are more serious kinds of sadness. The ones that have to do with our spirituality, I recently received this letter from a reader:

“Father, why is it that lately, when I pray, I feel like it’s very rote and flat. Although my prayers come from the heart, and I have a strong faith, it’s not the same as it once was. It makes me feel very sad. I never have serious doubts, but I feel I can never measure up.”

I understand this kind of sadness very well. I’ve had my share of it over the years. It’s a nostalgia over the loss of something or someone dear to you. Feeling down or unhappy because of grief or disappointment is very human.

When I was in the seminary, I prayed so hard that my mother would live to see me ordained. She suffered for years from many ailments. I trusted God, and prayed that she’d make it, but alas, she died a year before my ordination.

The normal grief period was compounded by my doubts about God’s love. I believed I was called to be a priest, but new doubts flooded my mind.

What if my vocation was a creation of my imagination? If God really loved me, why didn’t He answer my prayers? What if I fail as a priest?

It was my dark night of the soul. I lived through it by sheer will power. The pious feelings that brought me from the Army to the seminary had evaporated. Nevertheless, I persevered.

Despite that painful year, I recovered, and was ordained On May 28th, 1960.

It was a joyful day, but the grief was still lingering. My Dad and I had a good cry, and then life went on. I never looked back, and I never doubted my vocation again.

What if I had given in to those fears and dropped out. As a priest over the years, I’ve touched many lives through my work in the parish, through the written word (writing is a vocation within a vocation), and through my nationally syndicated TV Show, Christopher Close-up. I’m happy now that I didn’t allow my sadness to deter me from enjoying my life as a priest.

To all of you who are suffering from one nagging sadness or another, if it has caused you to believe that God has withdrawn His consolation from you because you are no longer as pleasing to Him as you once were, let me tell you emphatically: THAT IS SIMPLY NOT TRUE! Feelings are not facts.

Only faith can give you the facts about your relationship with God. God is unchanging love. He loves you on good days and bad, during good seasons and sad. Carry on with courage!

Know that the merits of your actions increase when you’re not doing it for emotional gratification. But for the love of God.

When your sadness passes away, you’ll see that it was a gift from God to help you bear rich and abundant good fruit for all eternity.

May the Lord be your strength and your joy as you journey through life, with all its sad moments.

Not one sparrow, so we are assured on the highest authority, falls to the ground without God’s knowledge.

In the case of the potentially engaging espionage thriller “Red Sparrow” (Fox), however, such awareness may represent the downside of omniscience.

Twisty and sophisticated, though not without holes in its logic, the film might have offered relatively flavorful entertainment. But gruesome violence and gratuitous sexual content ruin its appeal.

Disabled in an onstage accident, Russian ballet star Dominika (Jennifer Lawrence) finds her future endangered once she is no longer of value to the Bolshoi. Not only her salary, but her rent and the medical care provided to her ailing mother, the audience learns, were all included in her lucrative - and now doomed - deal with the famous company.

Dominika’s sudden vulnerability opens her to recruitment by her Uncle Vanya (Matthias Schoenaerts), a highly-placed and ruthless intelligence official who wants her to train as a seductress of foreign agents. Through his influence, she’s enrolled in a school - run by jackbooted sourpuss “Matron” (Charlotte Rampling) - perversely dedicated to the purpose.

Dominika’s eventual target is veteran CIA operative Nate (Joel Edgerton) who serves as the contact for an unusually valuable Kremlin mole. But her ultimate loyalty, throughout the zigzagging plot, remains intriguingly uncertain.

Director Francis Lawrence’s adaptation of Jason Matthews’ 2013 best-seller, the first volume in a trilogy, leaves nothing to viewers’ imagination.

Over-the-top Matron relentlessly drills her proteges in amorality. Later, Nate undergoes an unbearable interrogation, the length and intensity of which are wholly artistically unjustified.

Its cruelty and cynicism, alas, will keep this “Sparrow” from finding a nest with any viewer of sensibility.

The film contains excessive graphic violence, including horrific torture, strong sexual content, themes of incest and vengeance, at least one use of profanity as well as numerous rough and a few crude and crass terms.

Greetings from Fr. Dan Chapin

By Sister Mary Ellen Brett, SSJ
Diocesan Mission director

I recently received this email from Father Dan Chapin, former pastor of St. Stephen’s Parish, Croghan, and currently serving in Latin America associated with Maryknoll Fathers and Brothers, to share with all of you.

“I appreciate your daily prayer for me; I remember often all of you in the diocese; thank God for the North Country Catholic which keeps me up to date on so much of the life of the church in the North Country; it’s hard to keep up with the many changes, especially the retirements and the many people I have known and loved who have been called home and who see the Lord face to face.

Being a diocesan priest associated with Maryknoll (there are only three of us in the whole world, and the other two are in Cambodia), you probably won’t find me in the Maryknoll Magazine, at least not at this time.

It’s hard to believe that I’m already in my second year in Cochabamba with the Maryknoll Fathers and Brothers; I signed my five-year contract with Maryknoll on July 29, 2016, we are part of the complex here known as the “Maryknoll Mission Center in Latin America”.

Before I share my activities of the local church, know that I will be traveling to Peru on January 30: I will be spending the month of February in Arequipa and Mollendo; this is my vacation, as I had none last year; but of course, I will be helping out at San Marin de Porres (Padre Andres knows I’m coming), spending time with friends and bringing myself up to date on happenings in Peru; I am planning on presiding at a special Mass at San Martin to remember Frs. Maroun and Mundy, expressing gratitude to God for their lives as missionary priests; I have the funeral booklets of both and they will be displayed(such beautiful photos!) at the Mass. I will certainly express your greetings from the mission office. My last day here is Monday, Jan. 29th, as I will be leaving early on the 30th; I’m spending a couple of days in Cuzco and then heading to Arequipa for a week and then Mollendo for 2 1/2 weeks(three weekends).”

Please remember “The Society for the Propagation of the Faith” when writing or changing your Will.
