Called by name

VATICAN CITY (CNS) — Naming a child is an important task for parents, because it gives children a sense of identity and belonging to their family and to God, Pope Francis said. “Without a name, we remain unknown, without rights and duties. God calls each one of us by name, loving us individually in the concreteness of our history,” the pope said April 18 during his weekly audience. “Therefore, the name is important. Parents think of the name to give to their child already before birth,” he said. “This, too, is part of the expectation of a child who, in his or her name, will have an original identity, including for the Christian life linked to God.”

Continuing his series of Easter-season talks on baptism, the pope said that a person’s name, asked during the welcoming rite of the sacrament, “takes us out of anonymity” and is the first step in a person’s journey as a Christian. “Baptism ignites the personal vocation to live as Christians, which will develop throughout one’s life. It implies a personal response and not a borrowed answer that is ‘copied and pasted,’” he said.

EDITOR’S NOTE

Ready to welcome the ‘new Mary Lou’

For better or worse, my chance for mind-changing has passed.

After months of meetings to determine the future of the North Country Catholic and, then, who should lead the paper into that future, decisions have been made.

On May 14, we will welcome Darcy Fargo to the diocesan staff as the “new Mary Lou” (and then some.)

The old Mary Lou will have a couple of weeks to share everything she’s learned in 40 years and then, happily and with great confidence, pass on the torch.

In my conversations with - and about - Darcy over the past week, I have no doubt that she has the talent and energy to take on my job… and in expanded mandate.

In addition to her responsibilities as editor/general manager of the NCC, Darcy will wear an additional hat as communication director for the diocese.

She’ll be working with Deacon Jim Crowley, who will remain the diocesan spokesperson, and other staff members to make sure that the Good News of our North Country church is presented in a unified and effective manner on Facebook, Twitter, the radio, in secular newspapers and through whatever new media source emerges over the next 40 years.

The mere thought of this new job exhausts me. Luckily for us all, it’s a source of excitement for my successor.

As soon as I knew that my time with the next editor would be limited, but before I knew who he/she would be, I started to keep notes about everything I wanted to share. This gave me a chance to think about all the area reporters and photographers who have made my job possible. I took time to reflect on the topics I’ve tried to address every year and the stories that deserve more attention.

And, as I typed all the items of our newspaper style (“Spell out Father, Sister and Deacon except in headlines,” always capitalize Mass and “Catholic,” and on and on and on) I could hear the voice of Father Christian, my first editor and the best teacher of the newspaper business I could imagine, who patiently explained what and why we did what we did.

It’s surreal to think about my life without this work/ministry/love but the time is right for this transition. I knew it a couple weeks ago and I’m even more convinced now that I know who will be filling my shoes.

FATHER MEUNCH SAYS

Recognizing the presence of the Lord

I have been thinking today of the many ways the resurrected Jesus enters my life.

The Easter Season gives us several weeks to prayerfully celebrate the Lord’s Resurrection. On each day of this season the scriptures at the Masses remind us of all the resurrection stories in the Gospels and the Acts of the Apostles. Jesus interacted with his disciples in the time after the resurrection.

I am certain that you know the stories. These resurrection stories are the tenderest of all the Gospel stories. I think of Jesus’ conversation with Mary Magdalene at the tomb, and of course, Jesus entering the lives of the two disciples on the road to Emmaus.

Jesus enters my life and yours just as he entered their lives each day. I still pray for a stronger faith that I will be open and aware to the presence of Jesus in my life. I know only too well that if I remain open I would become a much holier person, a holier priest.

Recently, Pope Francis published an Apostolic Exhortation “Gaudete et Exsultate” (Rejoice and Be Glad). In this formal letter, he extends a call to holiness in today’s world.

In the beginning of the letter, Pope Francis writes this: “What follows is not meant to be a treatise on holiness… my modest goal is to repropose the call to holiness in a practical way for our own time, with all its risks, challenges and opportunities. For the Lord has chosen each one of us “to be holy and blameless before him in love.” (Ephesians 1:4)

This Apostolic Exhortation is quite extensive – and quite good. Pope Francis writes a great deal in the letter about all we should learn from the saints. Pope Francis mentions our saints as models of holiness. I have discovered many books written about holiness and I have attended many retreats and conferences based on personal holiness. However, I want to tell you that I continue today to discover most about holiness from the many people and the many experiences that the Lord places in my life. They have helped me to recognize the presence of the risen Lord in my life.

Let me to tell you of one. Each week I bring Holy Communion to one of our home bound parishioners, Each week it is a uniquely peaceful moment. There is something special about each visit and I know that I find a special recognition of the presence of God in my life.

In addition, once a week I celebrate Mass at the Motherhouse of the Sisters of St. Joseph for the retired sisters. Again, it is a spiritually peaceful, holy experience. The Sisters are wonderful holy women who have lived their lives dedicated to the Lord. The Mass with this group is truly a celebration of God’s love.

I know the Eucharist is always a time of gratitude for God’s many blessings. With the Sisters, the spirit of gratitude is a reality. The Lord’s present is truly with us.

I do want to add that the celebration of Mass is always a special moment for me. The Mass has become my time to recognize the Lord’s presence guiding and supporting me. Every time I celebrate Mass something special is part of the experience.

In addition, my road to holiness involves experiences other than prayer – even, social occasions. I am thinking of gatherings of the family and times with friends. They are often opportunities for me to discover the Lord reaching out to me in a special way. I believe that the Lord knows when I need such a gathering in my day.

By the way, when I think of family gatherings, I also think of the many wonderful families I have known in the various parishes I have been part of. These families have been an important part of my life and have brought the Lord’s presence into my day. The have been part of my road to holiness in my life.

You never know who or what may uniquely guide you or give you the opportunity that guides you to the Lord and show you the path to holiness. So pray often that you will recognize the presence of the Lord in your life.

Dr. Gregory and Lisa Popcak speak at ‘Marriage: God Calls, We Respond’ conference

‘Marriage is a ministry’

By Tom Semeraro
Contributing writer

MASSENA – Marriage as a ministry was the focus of the first of two presentations offered by Dr. Gregory and Lisa Popcak, keynote speakers at a diocesan family life conference “Marriage: God Calls, We Respond” held April 14 at Sacred Heart Church and Trinity Catholic School.

The program was sponsored by the diocesan Department of Family Life and Offices of Vocation and Evangelization. A large group of married couples, engaged couples, families, lay ministers, as well as clergy were in attendance.

Following an opening prayer service led by Bishop Terry R. LaValley, the Popcaks – authors, educators and life coaches – presented “Marriage as a Ministry; God’s Plan for Love and Marriage vs. Society’s View”.

In their talk, the couple discussed levels of marriage as they exist in society today: civil, romantic, theistic, and concluding with Catholic marriage.

Giving real life examples and situational outcomes, the Popcaks presented Catholic marriage as the most loving and truest form of marriage. When couples marry according to the Catholic model, they said, they are accepting God’s love for them and asking God to help teach them how to love each other.

Dr. Popcak took this view further by explaining that when couples marry, they actually enter into what is considered a “School of Love”.

In essence, they become “apprentices” in God’s love, as they learn how to love each other in family life.

The Popcaks offered insight into what this means in daily life and how a husband and wife can work toward loving each other as God loves them. They stressed the importance of “praying together” and treating marriage as “sacred”.

They also described the goal of living in “charism”, or essentially sharing the joy of marriage and family life with others, by embracing the particular role God has for them and their family.

Dr. and Mrs. Popcak spoke about viewing the mundane and menial everyday tasks family members do for each other as corporal acts of mercy.

“When you prepare dinner for your family, you are ‘feeding the hungry,’ or when you do laundry and prep the kids clothes, you are ‘clothing the naked’,” Mrs. Popcak said.

She shared what she called a transformative moment when she realized that, by changing her perspective on this aspect of her life, seemingly laborious and monotonous tasks could be viewed as “steps on her road to holiness”.

During the moderated breakout sessions which followed the morning address, attendees were asked to share their views on family life, Catholic marriage, spousal support and more.

Couples, families, and ministers shared views and perspectives on their personal marital experiences as well, as what the future may hold for new couples and families.

The Popcaks continued their presentation with an afternoon session, “Building Blocks for Constructing Your Marriage Castle”.

Dr. Popcak began this session with an explanation and understanding of sexuality, natural family planning and the sacredness of intimacy in a Catholic Marriage. They described ways for couples to serve and love each other all day, and all through their lives. They also covered the ultimate expression of love, the creation of children through a loving Catholic Marriage.

Further information about Catholic marriage and the living ministry of the Popcaks is available at www.catholiccounselors.com. The website for the diocesan Family Life Office is www.rcdony.org/family-life.html.

Dear Friends in Christ:

The month of April has been designated as Child Abuse Prevention Month. This provides us with an opportunity to highlight our awareness of child sexual abuse and to call attention to our ongoing responsibility to provide safe, healthy environments for our children and young people. It also affords me the opportunity to assure you that the Diocese of Ogdensburg is continuing our strong efforts to create and maintain a climate of safety and of joy for all the youth entrusted to our pastoral care.

I am grateful to Jill Lawrence, Diocesan Safe Environment Coordinator, who directs our efforts to ensure that the national and diocesan policies established to provide safe environments for our children are implemented fully. Since 2003, independent audits have been conducted in the Diocese of Ogdensburg to determine how well we comply with national and our own diocesan policies. With the coordinating efforts of Mrs. Elaine Seymour, our Charter Compliance Coordinator, we have been found to be compliant every year. The strong support and cooperation of our pastors and their pastoral staffs enable our Church to be a safe place in which we can all grow in love of God and neighbor.

We know that Jesus, the Good Shepherd, so tenderly loves and accompanies all those who are hurt in His Church. We are a Church of the hurting, indeed, as Pope Francis says, a field hospital. We remain vigilant in providing a safe environment for all within the Church and sorrowful when we have failed our sisters and brothers and caused such hurt and suffering.

With a Shepherd’s care and concern,

Most Reverend Terry R. LaValley
Bishop of Ogdensburg

Family seeks Archbishop Sheen’s intercession for newborn son’s healing

Praying for a miracle

By Jessica Trygstad
Catholic News Service

ST. ANTHONY, MINN. (CNS) - Even before Katherine and Jeff Dobbs were married, they had a name picked out for a future son: Fulton Francis.

Fulton, for Archbishop Fulton J. Sheen, known for his mid-20th century broadcast evangelism, and Francis, for Pope Francis, whom the couple met at a general audience during their honeymoon in 2017.

Little could they have known the significance of their baby’s namesakes less than a year after.

Fulton Francis Dobbs was born Christmas Eve with an immunodeficiency that remains undiagnosed. They have been praying for Fulton’s healing through the intercession of Archbishop Sheen, whom Pope Benedict XVI declared venerable in 2012.

The next step in the sainthood process is beatification, which requires one miracle that is verified as having occurred through that person’s intercession.

Prayer charge begins

After Fulton’s birth, the Dobbs’ parish, St. Charles Borromeo in St. Anthony, distributed cards with a prayer written by Franciscan Father Andrew Apostoli, who was ordained by Archbishop Sheen and has worked on his canonization cause.

Katherine’s father, Steve Burrill, also a St. Charles Borromeo parishioner, has been leading the prayer charge.

“Your faith needs to get you through the ‘whys,’ not the ‘why me?’ but the why us?” Burrill, 61, told The Catholic Spirit, newspaper of the Archdiocese of St. Paul and Minneapolis. “I think it would be strange not to have that. But it’s faith that helps you figure that out, or at least try to work through it. I can’t think of two people who were more ready to be parents... than these two.”

Fulton’s difficulties surfaced during Katherine’s 30-week ultrasound, which revealed that he wasn’t growing at a normal rate. Her doctor ordered her to go on bed rest. At 37 weeks gestation, doctors decided to induce labor, and Fulton was born Dec. 24 at 3 pounds, 13 ounces and 17-and-a-half inches.

From the start, Fulton did not eat well and his oxygen levels dropped, so Katherine, 32, and Jeff, 30, had him baptized at the hospital. After about a week, doctors performed genetic tests and Fulton was placed in isolation.

Meanwhile, his newborn screening tests indicated that he had severe combined immunodeficiency, or SCID, involving a disorder that leaves little or no immune response.

Commonly known as “bubble boy disease,” the condition leaves those who have it highly susceptible to severe infections. But more tests ruled out SCID, which could have been treated with a bone marrow transplant.

Thus far, every genetic test has come back inconclusive.

While Fulton’s March 2 homecoming was joyous, it brought new challenges. The Dobbses have few visitors, and when they do, guests must wear masks and gloves; Fulton cannot be around children. The couple must wear protective gear at home if they exhibit symptoms of an illness. They can’t take him out in public.

The couple was trained to administer infusions in Fulton’s legs every other week, giving him antibody protection.

Katherine admitted that at first she was even afraid to cry, fearing her tears could kill Fulton because of the germs they contained.

“So, just to think about even more than just one hour at a time was so anxiety-provoking,” she said. “I read all these books on childbirth and nothing has been able to basically be applied to this situation in life. I feel like the Lord is saying, ‘My ways are not your ways,’ and... not to plan the next moment because it’s impossible to plan the next moment. So, just to trust that [God is] going to provide, and receive the graces of the moment.”

Katherine’s love of St. Therese of Lisieux inspired her and Jeff to read Archbishop Sheen’s book, “St. Therese: A Treasured Love Story,” which includes text from talks he gave in 1973 about the French nun. During the last weeks of her pregnancy Katherine researched Archbishop Sheen and listened to his talks “Life is Worth Living” from his 1950s television show.

Another healing

Her research led to an Illinois woman who shares not only her esteem for the archbishop, but also, at one point, prayers for a baby’s miraculous healing.

Katherine connected with Bonnie Engstrom, who, during a presentation at St. Charles Borromeo March 23, shared the account of the alleged miraculous healing of her newborn son, James Fulton, in 2010 through Archbishop Sheen’s intercession.

“And wouldn’t it be amazing if we had Fulton’s miracle,” Engstrom told the gathering.

Engstrom, 36, grew up 20 miles away from Archbishop Sheen’s birthplace of El Paso, Illinois. While she was familiar with the archbishop for that reason alone, she started to watch videos of him during her pregnancy.

James was stillborn during a home birth. He was rushed to a local hospital, where doctors and nurses worked to revive him. As the doctors began putting their hands up to call his time of death, ‘after 61 minutes of not having a heartbeat, James’ heart started to beat again, and it never stopped again,” Bonnie said.

Despite the surprise recovery, doctors cautioned that no one goes without a heartbeat for an hour and lives. But the boy survived and is a healthy 7-year-old child today despite medical tests early in life that revealed various serious complications. But they all disappeared and Engstrom credits the intercession of Archbishop Sheen for her son’s recovery.

Doctors subsequently determined the boy’s recovery was a medical miracle. The alleged miracle was submitted to Vatican’s Congregation for Saints Causes through the Diocese of Peoria, which is coordinating the archbishop’s canonization submission. The case is on hold because of a conflict with the Archdiocese of New York, where Archbishop Sheen is buried.

Katherine attended Bonnie’s presentation. She and her family continue to trust in the power of prayer, “that God is in the details, and he’s a good father,” she said.

Katherine acknowledged the family faces a long road to full healing, “but the Lord has given (to) me in prayer before, just that he’s always been there. And so, I know he has been in this, too.”

'Seamless garment' revisited: Pope insists all life deserves defense

VATICAN CITY (CNS) - When Pope Francis insisted that the lives of the unborn and of the poor are "equally sacred," he was not trying to shift the focus of Catholics from fighting abortion to fighting poverty, he was trying to show they are part of the same battle, said Archbishop Vincenzo Paglia, president of the Pontifical Academy for Life.

The life of the unborn must be "promoted and defended with great determination and given an effective priority," the archbishop told Catholic News Service April 17.

"At the same time," he said, "we must keep in mind that the dignity of every human being is equal and inviolable at every stage throughout his or her life."

In "Rejoice and Be Glad," his apostolic exhortation on holiness, Pope Francis wrote that living a Christian life involves the defense of both the unborn and the poor, and he criticized what he termed the "harmful ideological error" of thinking one’s own cause is the only important one.

"Our defense of the innocent unborn, for example, needs to be clear, firm and passionate, for at stake is the dignity of a human life, which is always sacred," Pope Francis wrote.

"Equally sacred, however, are the lives of the poor, those already born, the destitute, the abandoned and the underprivileged, the vulnerable infirm and elderly exposed to covert euthanasia, the victims of human trafficking, new forms of slavery, and every form of rejection," the pope said.

We must never do death's job. Never

Pope Francis’ words reminded many people of the "seamless garment" approach to life issues promoted by the late Cardinal Joseph L. Bernardin of Chicago.

While applauding its recognition of the sacredness of all human life, some people criticized the approach, saying it could give people a mistaken impression that, for example, the church teaches abortion and capital punishment are equally serious sins.

Others worried that some Catholics would claim their defense of life in one area meant that they did not have to pursue the protection of life in other areas.

But "Pope Francis has reaffirmed that abortion is evil without mincing words," Archbishop Paglia said. At the same time, he asks that "the pro-life commitment be enlarged."

The pope's words in the exhortation reflect the same vision the pope had in renewing the statutes and membership of the Academy for Life, he said; the pope believes "true support for life cannot be limited to isolated moments of its existence, but also must promote the conditions of justice and peace" life needs to thrive.

What Pope Francis is telling Catholics, he said, is "to be pro-life always, in every situation and everywhere, not only in one moment, in one country or one aspect. We must rediscover the prophetic call to defend life in its concrete situations, not as an abstraction, by defending human beings from the very beginning of life to its end."

Rather than watering down Catholics’ commitment to ending abortion, the archbishop said, attention to defending life at every stage and in every circumstance "should make us stronger, including in effectively combatting the absurd prospect of abortion."

By putting together abortion, euthanasia, hunger, immigration, the death penalty, weapons trafficking, war and other serious issues, he said, Pope Francis makes it clear that all human life always must be defended.

A prophetic pro-life stance, Archbishop Paglia said, "has no limits," while an "ideological approach" zeroes in on particulars. "Ideology moves the mind, while prophecy moves the mind, but also the heart and the hands because it dares to dream of a future that is beautiful for everyone.

"We must never do death's job," the archbishop said. "Never."
SCRIPIRE REFLECTIONS

‘I am the vine and you are the branches’

Soon after the early Church began to grow, a major event occurred. Saul of Tarsus, one of the most feared and hated persecutors of Christians, miraculously converted to Christianity. No one could have predicted the startling accident that befell Saul on his way from Jerusalem to Damascus. He was knocked off his horse, and struck blind by a divine shaft of light that left him blind and helpless. He was directed by a Voice to seek out one Ananias who would give him further directions.

The rest is history. After some time in prayer and solitude, Barnabas, a man respected and trusted by the Christians, brought him to Jerusalem, and introduced him to Peter and the other leaders. At first, distrust and fear kept them at a distance, but gradually he was accepted. Despite many severe trials, Paul’s theology prevailed. The Church would never be the same again. It was a miracle of grace that often-bitter fighting between various factions did not split the Church apart and destroy it again. Furthermore, many were sorely tested when friends and relatives opposed them or even betrayed them to the authorities. What saved the whole enterprise was surely the teaching we find in today’s second reading, John tells his followers “… love not in word or speech but in deed and truth.” We must not merely “mouth” the beautiful teaching of Jesus, but work on the difficult task of living those words.

All of the disciples must likewise have found consolation in the powerful image of today’s Gospel. In the great farewell address of Jesus at the Last Supper, He tells his disciples: “I am the vine; you are the branches”. Think about it! As a branch cannot survive if it is separated from the vine, neither can we survive if we sever our connection with Jesus. He is constantly strengthening us with grace, just as a vine gives life moment by moment to its branches.

Sometimes we take to ourselves all the credit for the resulting growth within us. We even try to control the directions in which our faith is shared. We like to pick our own ministries, rather than allow the Lord through the Church have a say in the decision.

Then, when our activities are “pruned” through failure—or a call to another ministry, we can complain or become bitter. At those times, we need to be more trusting, and realize that perhaps God’s Providence has broader plans for our growth and the growth of His kingdom.

This is what Jesus meant by “pruning”. Let’s hope it’s all for a closer grafting on the Vine. Consult the NCC for information and a summary of Pope Francis’ new Apostolic Exhortation, “Gaudete et Exultate” (Rejoice and Be Glad).

Making Sense of Bioethics

Cowboys, infertility, deeper moral questions

Most people still remember the story of Nadya Suleman, dubbed “Octomom,” a single woman who used in vitro fertilization to become pregnant with eight babies simultaneously.

Suleman had asked her fertility specialist, Dr. Michael Kamrava, to implant at least a dozen embryos into her uterus, leading to the birth of the famous octuplets in 2009. Dr. Kamrava’s medical license was later revoked by the California Medical Board.

In commenting on the case, Judith Alvarado, Deputy Attorney General in California, concluded that Dr. Kamrava had acted “like a cowboy” in ignoring fertility industry guidelines.

When it comes to the “wild west” of infertility—a field of medicine with little oversight and unbridled profit margins—there are a lot of cowboys out there.

Recently there was the case of Kelli Rowlette who, after having her own DNA analyzed in 2017 through a genealogy website, shockingly discovered that her biological father was actually a fertility specialist who had once treated her mother.

Without her mother’s knowledge or consent, the specialist had used his own sperm to impregnate her, while falsely claiming he was using a mixture of sperm from her husband (who had low sperm count) and a donor who was supposed to have been an anonymous university student with features similar to her husband.

Another infamous case involved Bertold Wiesner who, back in the 1940s, established a fertility clinic in London to help women struggling to conceive. His clinic supposedly relied on a small number of highly intelligent men to serve as sperm donors for artificial insemination, with more than 1500 babies being born. More than seventy years later, based on DNA testing of people who had been conceived at the clinic, it turned out that as many as 600 of the babies born may have relied on sperm from Mr. Wiesner himself.

There was also the troubling story of Dr. Cecil Jacobson of Fairfax County, Virginia. He was accused of a “purposeful pattern of deceit” during the 1980’s when he fathered up to 75 children using his own sperm for artificial insemination with the female patients. He was eventually sentenced to five years in prison and had his medical license revoked.

Another notorious episode relied on DNA testing and other evidence gathered by police in Brazil. They discovered that many of the 8,000 babies born after IVF treatments at the clinic of Dr. Roger Abdelsmsih in Sao Paulo were not geneti­cally related to the couples who were raising them. Authorities believe that Abdelsmsih misled many of his clients during the 1990s and early 2000s and impregnated them with embryos formed from other people’s eggs and sperm, in a bid to improve his clinic’s statistics for successful implantations and births.

Yet another nefarious incident involved Doctors Ricardo Ascher, Jose Bulmaceda and Sergio Stone, three fertility specialists and faculty members at the University of California at Irvine who ran a campus fertility clinic during the 1990s. They were accused of fertilizing eggs they had harvested from women and implanting the resulting embryos into unrelated women, as well as selling some of the embryos to scientists and researchers.

Dozens of women and couples filed lawsuits against the doctors and the university.

One of the reasons these acts of deception by fertility specialists are so offensive to us is that we realize how the procreation of our own children is meant to involve a strict exclusivity between husband and wife.

Whenever we violate that exclusivity by hiring outsiders to produce our offspring in clinics, or engage strangers to provide their sex cells for these procedures, unthinkable outcomes become possible.

The plethora of these cases also reminds us how many of the cavalier approaches to human procre­ation being promoted by the...
RAMPAGE

By John Mulderig
Catholic News Service

Those looking for a film that seriously engages with the human condition or advances the art of cinema will not find what they’re looking for in “Rampage” (Warner Bros.).

Grown-ups out to kill the better part of two hours and willing to be satisfied with some campy fun, on the other hand, will have little cause for complaint.

An entertaining bit of outsized nonsense, the flick combines 1970s-style disaster movie spectacle with the even older altered-animal trope that gave the world Godzilla back in 1954. The fact that “Rampage” is derived in part from the video arcade game of the same title is a tipoff of what to expect from it, including destructive action and shallow characterizations.

Cue the cartoonishly villainous brother-and-sister team at the helm of an evil corporation called Energyn, Claire (Malin Akerman) and Brett (Jake Lacy) Wyden. The Wydens’ scheme to weaponize a DNA-changing chemical hits more than a bump in the road when the space station on which their secretive research is being carried out is destroyed, and containers of the substance plummet to various localities around the world. One dose of it ends up infecting, transforming and enraged George, a previously peaceful albino gorilla who inhabits a fictional wildlife sanctuary attached to the real-life San Diego Zoo. To save George from running amok and being put down, his devoted trainer, Davis Okoye (Dwayne Johnson), teams with geneticist Kate Caldwell (Naomie Harris) and with an unconventional government agent known simply as Russell (Jeffrey Dean Morgan).

Davis is a Special Ops veteran (of course), Kate used to work for Energyn (naturally), while Russell, who cultivates the image of a modern-day cowboy, represents the OGA — Other Government Agency. These connections come in handy once the trio find themselves not only trying to contain George but battling an enhanced wolf and a monstrous crocodile as well.

Devoid of any artistic or moral significance, director Brad Peyton’s mayhem meter invites the audience to revel in the gruesome downfall of the wicked siblings, though the toll exacted by the monsters is generally portrayed without blood. Additionally, the script includes an unusual number of vain invocations of the divine name. These defects aside, “Rampage” makes for a mindless, pleasant romp — though viewers are likely to forget all about it shortly after exiting the theater.

The film contains frequent monster violence, mostly stylized but with some gore, several uses of profanity and a couple of milder oaths, at least one rough and numerous crude terms and obscene gestures. The Catholic News Service classification is A-III — adults. The Motion Picture Association of America rating is PG-13 — parents strongly cautioned.

fertility industry are unethical at their core.

We are witnessing an unprecedented burgeoning of laboratory techniques for manufacturing human life, many of which are deeply antagonistic to human dignity and contrary to the parental obligations assumed by spouses when they marry.

The natural exclusivity intended in parenthood is meant to afford protection, security about our origins, and the safety of the home hearth.

In the headlong rush to achieve a pregnancy at any price, many couples, regrettably, are allowing hawkish businessmen to manipulate their sex cells, create their children in glassware, store them in frozen orphanages, and even discard them like medical waste.

The tragic fallout of these decisions should reignite our natural moral sensibilities, and point us back in the direction of the Creator’s plan for human procreation. Our children are truly safeguarded in the dignity of their origins when they are brought into the world exclusively within the marital embrace of husband and wife. Turning to the lawlessness of modern day fertility “cowboys,” meanwhile, is a quick study for violation and heartache.

The tragedy of human trafficking

“Human trafficking is an open wound on the body of contemporary society, a scourge upon the body of Christ... It is a crime against humanity... ‘Tens of millions of children are forced to work in degrading conditions, exposed to forms of slavery and exploitation, as well as to abuse, ill-treatment and discrimination... Let us all renew our commitment, especially families, to ensure the tutelage of every boy’s and girl’s dignity and the chance to grow up healthy.’” - Pope Francis

What is Human Trafficking?

The United Nations Protocol on Human Trafficking defines human trafficking as the “recruitment, transportation, harboring or receipt of persons by means of force, fraud, or coercion”. Human trafficking takes a variety of forms in every region of the world. Some adults and children are trafficked for prostitution and other forms of commercial sexual exploitation. Other individuals are trafficked for forced labor in agriculture, sweat shops, fishing crews, and domestic servitude or are trapped into situations of bonded labor or debt bondage. Some children may be lawfully and forcefully recruited as child soldiers by armed forces and combatants or other forms of labor.

The Catholic Church’s teaching

The Catholic Church as long spoken out against depravity of human trafficking and slavery. Their historic concerns on forced labor state that “slavery, prostitution, and the selling of women and children into disgraceful working conditions where people are treated as mere tools for profit rather than as free and responsible persons are an affront to fundamental values rooted in the nature of every human person. Pope Francis speaks out to end modern day slavery. He feels that “victims of various kinds of human trafficking’ and how the need for an end is immediate. There are 21 million victims of trafficking worldwide. Our Faith calls on us to defend life and human dignity to fight conditions that lead to enslavement of human beings. Much like the call to be Missionaries, we are called to defend life and end slavery.

The Missionary Childhood Association (MCA) helps make a difference in fighting trafficking and child labor practices. Prayers and sacrifices through MCA support missionaries who bring the Good News of Jesus to the poor and suffering, including child workers and those subjected to terrible conditions. MCA assists volunteers and missionaries who work with children that are victims of forced labor, domestic abuse, and provide support while uniting children with their families. Basic needs such as clean water, food, education and clothing are examples of provisions made by MCA to compromised children. When children escape poverty to obtain an education, the chains of child labor, trafficking and misery are broken. MCA is proud to be able to make these dreams a reality.
