Reborn in baptism

VATICAN CITY (CNS) -- The baptismal font is a tomb in which a person dies to sin, and it is a womb through which a person is born to new life in Christ, Pope Francis said.

"Just as our parents generated us to earthly life, the church has regenerated us to eternal life through baptism," the pope said May 9 at his weekly general audience.

Continuing a series of audience talks about baptism, Pope Francis said that from the time a person is baptized, God's voice repeats what God said at Jesus' baptism, "You are my beloved son. You are my beloved daughter. God loves us so much," the pope told the crowd in St. Peter's Square.

"Reborn as children of God, that is what we'll be forever," he said. "Baptism, in fact, is never repeated because it imposes an indelible spiritual seal. No sin can erase this mark, even if sin prevents baptism from bearing the fruits of salvation. This baptismal mark will never disappear."

The Mother Cabrini Health Foundation

Cardinal Timothy Dolan and the bishops of New York State have announced the formation of the Mother Cabrini Health Foundation, which at $3.2 billion will be one of the largest in the United States, and the largest focused solely on New York State.

The foundation will provide up to $150 million annually in grants to serve New Yorkers in need. It will be steered by a board of health experts, business leaders and philanthropists chaired by Al Kelly, CEO of Visa.

ROSARY CRUSADE: 16th annual crusade to be held May 18 in Carthage, p. 6
A place where faith comes to life

It seems fitting that I begin and end my career with the Diocese of Ogdensburg with a focus on Camp Guggenheim. My very first diocesan paycheck came into my hands (long before the launch of direct deposit) in July 1976 for my work as waterfront director of the diocesan camp. In my final turn as the solo NCC editor (Darcy Fargo, the new editor starts working with me this week) we present the first installment of our annual Meet the Staff pages. It’s always a delight to read the short biographies of young adults who are so eager to share their faith with the campers. Many started out as campers themselves and have come back year after year to spend their summers in service of God and his people. The words of staff member Johnny McBride are typical: “This will be my 10th summer at camp and 4th summer on staff. Guggenheim was a place that my faith came to life. Each summer I do my best and try my hardest to show the campers that being Catholic is full of wonder, helps us lead lives of joy, and is overall awesome. I look forward to everything Camp entails and being able to share my faith with the campers is a blessing.” Being part of the staff was life-changing for me as a college student. Spending summers as part of a community of faith-filled, fun-loving peers helped me to cement a relationship with God that has supported me throughout my life. My one regret is that I missed out on the Guggenheim experience as a camper, but alas, our diocesan camp came into existence about a week after I’d passed the 15-year age limit.

So, I will be forever grateful that our family friend, Father Doug Comstock, knew that there was a need for a waterfront director for the summer of 1976 and knew that I could fill the role. I am grateful too, that Father Art LaBaff, youth director at the time and one of the founders of our beloved camp, was willing to become my first diocesan boss.

Much has changed in our North Country church over the past four decades. We’ve experienced sad losses in closures of places like Wadhams Hall and Mater Dei, and so many of our parishes and Catholic schools.

But Guggenheim is still alive and well, flourishing for another generation of Catholic kids.

As this year’s campers will say many, many times during their week in the mountains: “God is good... all the time.”

The life of a priest: a bit of a vagabond

I now live in retirement in St. Andrew’s Parish, Sackets Harbor. I was pastor here in this parish many years ago. Actually, this was the first parish in which I was a pastor. I was reminded of those days recently when a lady who was living here back then gave me a parish bulletin that she had saved from those days when I was pastor. I guess she was rummaging through her scrapbooks. This bulletin brought back a flood of memories. Actually, this particular bulletin was my final one as St. Andrew’s pastor as I was preparing to be transferred. So, it included a farewell letter to the people of the parish. Reading this letter now after all of these years, is rather curious – like finding something written by another.

The farewell letter was rather short; I have become rather long winded now. However, much of what I wrote then are ideas that continue to be true over and over again in my life as a pastor and a priest. God has always been so good and loving to me.

I was sincerely grateful to the people of the parish. They were so good to me. Here is what I wrote then: “How do you say thank you to the greatest people in the world? You have taken this vagabond in and made him a part of your villages and your families.”

Reading that now, it was curious that I chose that word – vagabond. I wonder if my priest friends think of their years as a Catholic priest and an apostle of the Lord Jesus as being a vagabond. Is our life as a priest a bit of being a vagabond, wandering about from place to place?

I have discovered “the greatest people in the world” in every parish. St. Paul spoke of the people he ministered to and wrote to in his letters as “saints.” I have no doubt that in every parish I have been pastor to a multitude of “saints.”

I added this in that bulletin letter: “it was not a job for me – this was a home and you all were part of my family.”

I am certain that I mediated often on “family” as I was making my final decision to become a priest. As a priest and as a pastor, I quickly learned that I was to be a member of many families. My experience as a priest has truly been a family affair. I was there when a new child was born and entered a family. I was the one who baptized and welcomed that new child into the family of the Church.

I was part of families as their children grew up. I was there for the joyful celebrations. I was there in the difficult days and I was there during time of tragedy. There were many happy days, like the weddings. I was there with so many families at the time of death. There were lots and lots of families.

The one thing that tied me to all the families and to my God – the Mass. The joining of the parish each Sunday for Mass is always a family time with each family joining to make the parish a family.

All of us are united together to worship the Lord and seek God’s help and support for each member of the family, for each family of the parish.

So, as I read over that letter in that old bulletin I remember so much and think about how grateful I am to God for the gift of my priesthood.

This week, like many other priests in the diocese, I will remember my anniversary of my ordination as a priest.

Each time, I decided to drive across the diocese – off to visit a friend or to go to some sort of party or celebration – I still wander around some of my former parishes, visiting the Churches and remembering.

Maybe this vocation of priesthood does have a bit of vagabond in it.
Cardinal Dolan and New York Bishops announce Mother Cabrini Health Foundation

To serve New Yorkers in need

NEW YORK - Cardinal Timothy Dolan and the Catholic diocesan bishops of New York State announced the formation of the Mother Cabrini Health Foundation, which at $3.2 billion will be one of the largest in the United States, and the largest focused solely on New York State.

The foundation will provide up to $150 million annually in grants to serve New Yorkers in need and will be steered by a board of health experts, business leaders and philanthropists chaired by Al Kelly, CEO of Visa.

Mother Cabrini’s legacy

The foundation is named after Sister Frances Xavier Cabrini, known as Mother Cabrini, a tireless advocate for immigrants and children and the founder of the Institute of the Missionary Sisters of the Sacred Heart of Jesus. Building upon Mother Cabrini’s historic legacy the foundation will improve the health and well-being of poor and underserved New Yorkers across all parts of the state, regardless of background, including immigrant and other marginalized communities.

Born on July 15, 1850 in a small village near the city of Milan, Italy, Mother Cabrini founded the Institute of the Missionary Sisters of the Sacred Heart of Jesus, driven to help those in need in any way that she could.

In 1889, Mother Cabrini arrived in New York at a time when many Italian immigrants were struggling in the grips of poverty. She organized educational classes and helped provide for orphans with nowhere else to turn.

She traveled throughout the United States continuing to help the downtrodden and the neediest of society. Now her sisters are caring for new immigrants from all over the world.

Mother Cabrini was canonized by Pope Pius XII in 1946, the first American citizen to be named a saint, in recognition of her holiness and service to mankind and was named Patroness of Immigrants in 1950.

Board members

In addition to Al Kelly, other inaugural board members include Robert M. Bennett, Kathryn Connerton, Samuel A. DiPiazza, Jr., Dr. Laura L. Forese, Stanley E. Grayson, Carla Harris, Catherine R. Kinney, Sister Pietrina Raccuglia, Kathryn Rusticeto, Kevin Ryan and Robert Unanue.

Additional foundation board members will be named in upcoming weeks. The foundation will partner with public sector and governmental experts to develop innovative and impactful grantmaking programs.

From Cardinal Dolan

The Mother Cabrini Health Foundation, born of our Catholic tradition of healing for the sick and caring for the poor, will provide assistance to needy New Yorkers of every color, every religion and every background,” said Cardinal Timothy Dolan, Archbishop of New York, in the May 8 announcement.

“Named for Frances Cabrini, the Patroness of Immigrants, and chaired by prominent New York businessman and philanthropic leader Al Kelly, the foundation will seek to transform the lives of underserved New Yorkers from all corners of the state and set a national model for addressing the health and wellness needs of low-income communities,” the cardinal said.

Powerful force for good

“It is a tremendous honor to chair the inaugural board of the Mother Cabrini Health Foundation, which will be a powerful force for good in New York and a model for other states to emulate,” said Mr. Kelly, “This is an historic opportunity to transform the lives of New York’s poor, neediest, most vulnerable.”

Once-in-a-generation chance

“This foundation presents a once-in-a-generation opportunity to change the trajectory for a broad and diverse group of New Yorkers,” said Kathryn Connerton, chair of the Care Compass Network and President & CEO of Lourdes Hospital in Binghamton and a newly-named board member.

“It’s a true privilege to serve on the inaugural board of this non-profit community in order to improve the health and well-being of New Yorkers, bolster the health outcomes of targeted communities, eliminate barriers to care and bridge gaps in health services. It will seek to drive better care for marginalized communities, especially those in poverty.”

From Fidelis Care assets

The foundation will result from the sale of assets from Fidelis Care to Centene Corporation. The transaction has been approved by the New York Department of Health and the New York Department of Financial Services and is awaiting approval by the New York Attorney General.

Fidelis Care announced in September that it signed an agreement to sell substantially all of its assets to Centene Corporation (NYSE:CNC).

The proceeds from the transaction and other charitable assets of Fidelis will be used to fund the Mother Cabrini Health Foundation.

The foundation will grant up to $150 million annually to improve the health and well-being of vulnerable New Yorkers, bolster the health outcomes of targeted communities, eliminate barriers to care and bridge gaps in health services. It will seek to drive better care for marginalized communities, including immigrant populations and will provide flexible support for new and innovative approaches that enhance health and wellness across New York State.

This foundation will exist in perpetuity, helping generations of New Yorkers of all faiths or no faith at all and all backgrounds, and from all parts of the State.
Diocesan Catholics among 400 who attended annual summit in Ottawa

On the New Evangelization

By Darcy Fargo
Contributing writer

OTTAWA, ONT. - "Jesus told his disciples to 'go and make dis­ciples of all the nations.' We need disciples. We need people on fire for the Lord. The Catholic Church is losing 2,200 people per day... I think some people think the New Evangelization is just afad, just another passing movement. They say, 'we tried this program. We tried this event. It didn't work. What's next?' I can tell you: there is no plan B. We need to go and make disciples."

That was the exhortation of Michael Dopp, founder of The New Evangelization Summit held April 27 and 28. The event drew a crowd of five countries and on three continents.

The summit included eight speakers, small group discussions, music, Mass and music, and focused on providing inspiration, resources and strategies for evangelization.

The speakers covered a variety of topics, but seemed unified in stressing two themes: relationships and joy.

The first step toward being an effective witness is falling in love. Many Catholics are in a loveless relationship with God. Curtis Martin, founder of the Fellowship of Catholic University Students (FOCUS). "The first step toward being an effective witness is falling in love," said Curtis Martin, founder of the Fellowship of Catholic University Students (FOCUS). "Many Catholics are in a loveless relationship with God. They may be in the pews on Sunday, but they don't feel it in their hearts. You can't share what you don't have."

Martin, along with other speakers, encouraged the attendees to cultivate that relationship through prayer, forgiveness, meditating on scripture, participation in the sacraments, works of mercy and other spiritual practices, and then to share that relationship with those around us.

"Authentic love must guide our actions; love for the Lord and love for others," said Christy Dupuis, a former Catholic Christian Outreach missionary. "And we share that love one person at a time. It's easy to think, 'I have to do this big thing and reach lots of people.' But over the years, I've learned I always fall miserably when tasks replace relationships. Instead, we should think, 'who am I called to accompany today?'

Catholic radio host and apologist Patrick Madrid suggested taking the message of the Gospel to those relationships - in part - by utilizing available methods of communication and resources.

"When it comes to sharing our faith, let's go where the people are," said Madrid, holding up his smartphone.

Madrid suggested sharing our faith and information about it via social media, text messaging and by sharing books, videos and audio programming.

"You have to know about your faith, and/or you have to know where to find resources," he said. "We live in a great time in terms of the availability of outstanding content. We have Bishop (Robert) Barron and Catholic Answers and Relevant Radio, along with countless other content creators, making excellent videos, audio content - podcasts or CDs, books and articles."

Madrid suggested using that content to grow in personal knowledge of the faith, and also sending content to others as a means of spreading the Gospel and clarifying church teachings.

Several of the speakers noted that spreading the Gospel isn't always easy, but they stressed that it's what we're called to do as a mission church.

"In the Gospel of Luke, when Jesus encountered Simon after he had spent a night fishing and caught nothing, he told him 'put out into the deep,'" said theologian George Weigel. "We need to go beyond the shallow waters of self-sustaining Catholicism, and we need to put out into the deep."

Local voices

Among the 400 gathered in Ottawa were Cathy Witkowski of St. John's Parish in Plattsburgh and Sylvie Marion and Father Mark Reilly of St. Peter's Parish in Massena.

They shared their reaction to the event:

"All the speakers were excellent, each with their own distinctive style and form of expression, but their messages were all strung together with a unifying theme. I would sum up that theme with one word: relationship. Okay, maybe two words: relationship and joy. Relationship with Christ, and life with Him in the Holy Spirit, to the delight of the Heavenly Father. We evangelize only when we have this relationship at the center of our lives, and we become contagious with a deep joy that comes from this relationship with God. All the speakers, in one way or another, were encouraging us to develop our relationship with God and find joyful confidence in the knowledge that we are deeply loved by God. When we have a living, authentic, growing relationship with God (through prayer, sacraments, growth in virtue, etc.), we experience joy, no matter what hardships may come our way. And joy - evidenced by lots of laughter, camaraderie, and mutual encouragement - was palpable at the conference. On a practical level, many networking opportunities, resources, and helpful suggestions were available. I hope to get back to the NES again next year, and I hope more people from our diocese will be there with me - we've all got work to do, and the NES can be a great help in carrying it out."

Father Mark Reilly, pastor, St. Peter's Parish, Massena

"This is my second time attending the New Evangelizing Summit, and I just love coming to this event! The speakers were outstanding! They were inspiring, they were energetic, and it was clear that they were filled with the Holy Spirit. And, it was contagious. What a wonderful feeling it is to be surrounded by others who are so in love with Jesus Christ. And, to be able to talk freely, share freely, and to sing and pray together. It was amazing! I highly recommend this event to anyone regardless of where you are in your faith journey. I'm truly excited to 'cast the net into the deep' as I enter my daily life hoping to spread the Good News with those I encounter. I can't wait to go again next year!"

Sylvie Marion, St. Peter's Parish, Massena

"The main thing I took away from the weekend is that all Christians, through the Sacrament of Baptism, are called to bring others to Christ, and we can do that by reaching out to one person at a time. Our most powerful tool to ignite the fire of God's love in others is our own personal, authentic witness."

Cathy Witkowski, St. John's Parish, Plattsburgh
Hi! My name is Kelly Donnelly, I am incredibly blessed to be serving as the Camp Director for my fifth year. I live in Plattsburgh and am the Director of Youth Ministry for the Diocese. I’m engaged to be married this August. Some of my hobbies include kayaking, traveling, and reading.

I love Guggenheim and getting to know the campers as they experience the joy of Christ and grow in their faith in such a nurturing, fun environment.

Please keep all of the campers, staff, and chaplains in your prayers as we enter into the summer!

Hello! My name is Conner Cummings, I am 22 years old and I am a senior at SUNY Potsdam studying Business Administration. I am from Alexandria Bay, New York where I attend St. Cyril’s Catholic Church.

This will be my tenth year at camp, my third year on staff, and my first year serving as camp’s assistant director! Camp has always held a place in my heart and I am counting down every day in anticipation to hike, swim, and praise with all of you this summer!

My name is Lillia Woolschlager and I grew up in the town of Croghan, attending St. Stephen’s Parish. I am currently living in Chicago and studying music performance at DePaul University.

For the past ten years, I’ve looked to camp as the highlight of my summers and I can’t wait to be coming back for another!

I am so excited to see the work of the Lord in the camper’s hearts and to continue sharing the light of Christ with them as a Catholic community.

My name is Johnny McBride. I am originally from Saranac Lake but currently live in Waterbury, Vermont. I will be graduating from Assumption College this Spring with a major in Theology and a minor in English.

This will be my 10th summer at camp and 4th summer on staff. Guggenheim was a place that my faith came to life. Each summer I do my best and try my hardest to show the campers that being Catholic is full of wonder, helps us lead lives of joy, and is overall awesome. I look forward to everything Camp entails and being able to share my faith with the campers is a blessing.

Hello, Diocese of Ogdensburg! My name is Joy Leader, and I am from St. James Parish in Gouverneur. I am currently a senior at Franciscan University of Steubenville, OH where I plan to graduate this May with a degree in Spanish and Theology.

I am overjoyed to be returning to Guggenheim for my third summer on staff, and I thank God for this opportunity to serve our diocese in this way.

Please keep me and the rest of the staff in your prayers as we prepare for another incredible year, and know that we are praying for all of you!

Goal of Fishers Club is to help men discern vocations

By Father Howard Venette
Contributing writer
PLATTSBURGH - "No man who feels that all important and mysterious call should pass up the chance to discern with those who know its true value."

That's the thought of Matthew Tetreault, a young man from Champlain, currently discerning a call to the priesthood.

His fellow discerner, Tom Middleton, writes "I find the long journey of discernment so much richer in the fellowship of others."

The richness of such fellowship is at the heart of the Fishers Club, the diocesan priesthood discernment initiative.

These men, as well as several others, regularly gathered in two regional groups for prayer, discussion and camaraderie, beginning early this year.

The Midlanders met at St. Mary's, Canton, while the Lakesiders convened at St. Peter's in Plattsburgh.

Father Howard Venette conducted the Plattsburgh area group. Fathers Douglas Lucia, director of vocations, and Father Bryan Stitt, pastor of St. Mary's, Canton, gathered with men in the Canton area.

“...the world’s a fast-changing place..." (Ps. 103)

How is success measured for the group?

Tom’s experience provides the answer: "I am especially grateful to those fellow travelers who open their hearts in prayerful consideration of God’s call."

The simple goal of the Fishers Club is to bring together men to consider the one thing they have in common: the awareness of a call to the Priesthood. Hearts do open as experiences are shared within the context of a group discussion. At each meeting, prayer in common and a relaxing meal further the fraternal atmosphere.

When asked about his time spent with the group, Aaron Akey, said, "All in all the Fishers club provides a man with the outlet to begin to exercise his desire to please God, and to steal a line from Father Merton’s famous prayer: I believe the desire to please God does in fact please him."

Each discernment meeting begins with the words of Thomas Merton’s prayer: "My Lord God, I have no idea where I am going..."

Hopefully, time spent with the Fishers Club will continue to provide men with a sense of direction as they respond to the Lord’s ministerial call.

Interested men of high school junior age and above will have the opportunity to gather for discernment when the Fishers Club resumes next fall.

Rosary Crusade set May 18

CARTHAGE - The 16th Annual Family Rosary Crusade has been set for May 18 at St. James Minor Church.

The program begins with Mass at 5:15 p.m. followed by exposition of the Blessed Sacrament.

At 6 p.m. and at the top of the next seven hours, three complete Rosaries will be prayed in honor of Our Lady of the Seven Sorrows. Each hour also has specific intentions.

Artist and event coordinator, Bob Renaud, also paints a painting each year to set a theme. For those attending St. James for at least three hours (in honor of Our Lord’s passion and suffering), a print of the painting will be distributed. This year’s painting is entitled; ‘With the Queen of Hearts, There’s Hope.’

Further information is available on St. James parish website: catholicsofcarthage-copenhagen.org or from the artist’s personal website: brenaudart.com

Environmental Stewardship

PLANTING SEEDS OF HOPE

This week column is a continuation of last week’s column on the workshop on reptiles that was presented at the Youth Rally (April 28) by the Faith and Ecology Groups.

The young people attending the workshop learned many valuable lessons about caring for God’s creation.

Tom Kalinowski, a retired field biologist and member of the Faith and Ecology Group, reminded the young people that not “all of God’s creatures are warm and fuzzy, but all were created by God, serve important functions in our ecosystem and deserve to be protected, not destroyed just because we don’t happen to like them or find them attractive.”

Mary Benvenuto told the young people that the reptiles and amphibians she brought to the rally are mainly “rescue animals,” that were abandoned or given away by previous owners when they discovered they required more care than anticipated.

She cautioned the young people that caring for an animal is a responsibility that needs to be considered first, for these creatures come to depend on their owners. She urged the young people to research an animal first before acquiring it.

The table displays gave much information on reptiles and amphibians and the young people were invited to try their hands at identifying some local reptiles and amphibians. In addition, there was a display on trees and, in honor of Arbor Day, the young people were given a sapling to plant.

One student, Ciara LeRoy, brought a picture of herself and the sapling that she had been given last year, which is now thriving under the care of her entire family.

Catholics get chance to celebrate, think about Mary with new feast day

By Carol Zimmermann
Catholic News Service

WASHINGTON (CNS) -- The Catholic Church doesn't often add new celebrations to its pretty full liturgical calendar, but this year's new feast day, Mary, Mother of the Church on May 13, has Catholics gearing up to mark the day or at least think a little more about Mary.

The new feast day, which will be celebrated annually the day after Pentecost, was announced in a March 3 decree by the Congregation for Divine Worship and the Sacraments. The decree said the pope approved the celebration because he thought it might "encourage the growth of the maternal sense of the church in the pastors, religious and faithful, as well as a greater growth of genuine Marian piety."

That line struck Father Chuck Barthel, pastor of Mary, Mother of the Church Parish in St. Louis, when he first read it and he has continued to go back to it as he considers the feast with particular significance for his parish.

Gaining a renewed and deeper understanding of Mary's nurturing and caring side is something he said the church, especially in today's climate, could certainly use.

His parish is one of a handful of churches in the U.S., along with a Benedictine Abbey in Richmond, Virginia, named Mary, Mother of the Church. For this year's celebration of the new feast day, the St. Louis church is not planning anything big, but plans to celebrate on the actual day -- when he said parishioners can "enjoy each other's company" -- during Pentecost weekend when there is already a lot going on.

The pastor said he hopes to give parishioners a prayer card for the occasion and the parish will host a hospitality event after the morning liturgy and will have evening prayer that night followed by dessert.

The parish -- where Father Barthel was initially assigned more than 28 years ago as an associate pastor and now has returned less than a year ago -- was founded in 1971 and initially was staffed by Redemptorist priests. The parish, which opened so soon after the Second Vatican Council, took its name from the title given to Mary by Blessed Paul VI in 1964.

Gloria Falcao Dodd, director of academic programs for the International Marian Research Institute at the University of Dayton, Ohio, wrote a paper about this Marian title in 2006. Her research shows that a bishop in the 1100s called Mary, Mother of the Church and Pope Leo XIII's encyclical on the rosary said that Mary at Pentecost was "in very truth, the mother of the church, the teacher and queen of the apostles."

And in 1981, the title "Mother of the Church" was given another boost when St. John Paul II had a mosaic commissioned for the outside wall of his papal apartment called "Mater Ecclesiae" ("Mother of the Church") in gratitude for his recovery after being shot in St. Peter's Square. Then, and other times, the pope spoke of Mary as a mediator, or someone who intercedes for us, said Falcao Dodd.

That idea of Mary interceding for the church, as a mother does for her children, is important for Catholics to consider, especially as this new feast falls so soon after Mother's Day, said Falcao Dodd. She also said it is key to understand its placement right after Pentecost, noting that at the time of the original Pentecost, Mary "did what a mother would do -- she prayed with and for her children in the upper room." And at Jesus' crucifixion, when he publicly announced to the disciple John, "belong your mother" about Mary, John, symbolizes all of us, the church, Falcao Dodd said.

Auxiliary Bishop Gerard W. Battersby of Detroit said Mary's presence at the foot of the cross and with the early church at Pentecost, is an example of what it means to be a disciple.

He said this image of a mother with her children on this pilgrimage" is important for the church today, especially as the pope is calling Catholics to a new evangelization and to unleash the Gospel message, "it's important for us to understand the church is Marian; this is not just a pleasant sentiment added on," he said, stressing that Mary is a guide for the church today.

"I think this is a time of special grace," the bishop told Catholic News Service May 2, noting that Mary's job has always been to point to Jesus.

The Detroit Archdiocese is celebrating the new feast day with a May 21 Mass at Old St. Mary's Catholic Church in Detroit concelebrated by Bishop Battersby, Bishop Donald F. Hanchon, another Detroit auxiliary bishop, and several archdiocesan priests.

After Mass, there will be a May Crowning and procession through the streets with a statue of Mary carried by Catholic school students.
In celebration of the birthday of the Church

As Catholics, we all know that the Feast of Pentecost marks the “birthday”, the beginnings of the Church. But what more do we know? From today’s first reading from Luke’s Acts of the Apostles, we know that the apostles were all together in one place, when a violent wind from the sky was heard all over the city. Many people had gathered in Jerusalem to celebrate the Jewish Pentecost which commemorated God’s giving of the ten commandments to Moses. Because of the loud wind, thousands had gathered to find out its source. Inside the building, the apostles suddenly saw balls of fire which separated into tongues, landing on their heads. What did it mean and what did it do? The apostles, up until now, still stunned and confused from seeing Jesus ascend into the heavens just ten days before, are suddenly filled with infused knowledge, wisdom, and new courage. They spill out into the streets to preach in many languages about the works of God in sending His Son, Jesus, both God and man, to bring forgiveness of sin and salvation to all the world! On the news of this Word, three thousand people are baptized! What did this bring? Divine gifts to all who believed, gifts that St. Paul in today’s reading explains: “There are different kinds of spiritual gifts but the same Spirit; there are different workings but the same God who produces all of them in everyone”. Doesn’t this mean total unity and peace in using these gifts? Unfortunately, no. St. Paul is greatly distressed at the division that springs up through these gifts! Isn’t that still true in our parishes today? When people use the gifts of the spirit without in humility relying on the Spirit, disagreements and jealousy can spoil their work.

In the Gospel, Jesus, knowing that human nature is still weak, gives the apostles the power to forgive and reconcile those who sin. It is God’s mercy working through his bishops and priests! The Holy Spirit also gives to all followers of Jesus the power to forgive one another in our daily living. We are so in need of peace and unity in our families and communities.

COME HOLY SPIRIT, FILL THE HEARTS OF THY FAITHFUL, AND ENKINDLE IN THEM THE FIRE OF THY LOVE!

Pre-ordering starvation of people with dementia

By Kathleen M. Gallagher
NCC columnist

My 95-year-old mother has severe dementia. The disease has robbed her of the ability to do so many things she used to fully appreciate in her life: plant her tomato and cucumber seeds in the garden and lovingly nurture them through the summer; read the Reader’s Digest from cover to cover each and every month; put on her best dress and finest jewelry to go to church; and never miss anyone’s birthday with a card, a handwritten note or a gift. She’s also lost the ability to take care of herself. She can no longer shower or dress herself, control her bladder or bowels, or remember to take her medicines.

As her only daughter, it is challenging and painful for me to watch my once strong and vibrant mother become frail and dependent on others for the basic necessities of living.

This is euthanasia. It is elder abuse. It is the intentional elimination of our parents and grandparents when they become confused, difficult and dependent on others. It is dead wrong.

I miss those birthday cards. I miss my mom. But I thank God every day that she is being cared for by compassionate staff in an excellent facility. The one thing mom can still do is feed herself, and she continues to enjoy every meal. She has not lost her sweet tooth, and will never turn down a piece of chocolate! Others who have watched their loved ones slide into cognitive oblivion tell me that one day she may be unable to feed herself. If that day comes, I will gladly spoon the apple sauce into her mouth to provide her with the sustenance she needs. Because despite it all, hers is a life worth living. She is not terminally ill, nor is she in any pain. She still belly laughs at a good joke, enjoys a game of Scrabble, and cries tears of joy when she holds a puppy in her lap.

Recently I became aware of a new advance directive some so-called “right to die” groups are promoting. It’s explicitly intended for persons with Alzheimer’s disease or other advanced mental deterioration, and it’s all about providing – or more accurately, not providing – food and drink by hand, not through a feeding tube or other medical device. It’s so alarming to me, I’m having a hard time digesting it (yes, there’s a dark pun there.) Called the “Advance Directive for Receiving Oral Food and Fluids in Dementia,” it is specifically intended for people like mom. It would allow a person who has mental capacity but who fears they may one day develop dementia, to declare that if that day comes, they do not want to be fed or given water. Even if they open their mouth and appear eager to accept it, the directive would absolutely ban the caregiver from giving it. Wait, what?!

So if my mother had ever signed one of these documents, I, as her legally appointed health care proxy, would have to stand idly by and watch my mother starve to death. Yes, I would be prohibited from feeding her, with a spoon, even if she begged me for food. I just can’t imagine this sort of thing can be legal. It can’t be, can it? Good Lord, have mercy, I suspect the courts will decide.

From the document: “Under the conditions that may be imposed upon me by advanced dementia, including my inability to communicate comprehensively with loved ones or caregivers, and my physical dependence on others for all aspects of bodily care, continuing life would have no value for me. If I appear willing to accept food or fluid offered by assisted or hand feeding, my instructions are that I DO NOT want to be fed by hand, even if I appear to cooperate in being fed by opening my mouth.”

How can a competent person possibly determine that should they later become incompetent, their life will hold no value? And who are we to judge? This is euthanasia. It is elder abuse. It is discrimination against people with disabilities. It is the intentional elimination of our parents and grandparents when they become confused, difficult and dependent on others. It is dead wrong.

OVERBOARD

By Joseph McAleer
Catholic News Service

No need to throw a lifeline to "Overboard" (MGM), a surprisingly buoyant remake of the 1987 romantic comedy. The original film is best remembered for the chemistry between its stars, real-life partners Goldie Hawn and Kurt Russell. Unfortunately, however, its plot involved a frivolous treatment of adultery.

Happily, director Rob Greenberg, who co-wrote the screenplay with Bob Fisher, somewhat untangles that aspect of the storyline: this time out, both leads are (at least currently) unattached. Greenberg is also well-served by the pairing of comedians Anna Faris and Eugenio Derbez -- as well as by the switching of the gender roles, which gives a fresh take on the zany gotten-identity plot.

Leonardo (Derbez), the spoiled scion of one of Mexico's richest families, whiles away his days on a luxury yacht, awash in booze and surrounded by lovelies. He dismisses sensible working women like Kate (Faris), a single mother of three trying to make ends meet by holding down several jobs while also studying to be a nurse.

Kate arrives on the yacht to clean the champagne-soaked carpets. She and Leonardo argue over the bill, whereupon he gleefully tosses her overboard, then sails off into the sunset.

Actions have consequences, and that evening, our lothario interrupts his latest bout of casual sex to go above deck in search of a condom (this is Hollywood, after all). Now it's his turn to fall overboard, with changing results. He washes ashore with amnesia, claiming to be Leonardo's plight opens the door to two scheming women. In Mexico City, his sister Magdalena (Cecilia Suarez) sees her chance to take control of the family business, and decides to make Leonardo's disappearance permanent by faking his death.

Closer to home, Kate sees press coverage of Leonardo's situation and -- with the encouragement of her pizza-restaurant boss, Theresa (Eva Longoria) -- decides to serve up some 'poetic justice.' She arrives at the hospital, claims to be Leonardo's wife, and takes him home.

"Overboard" descends into slapstick as Leonardo, accustomed to poverty and physical labor, abides by Kate's rules, holding down a construction job by day, and cooking and cleaning the house by night. But a transformation is in store, as Leo discovers a long-buried reservoir of goodness deep inside him that earns him the respect of his newfound family and co-workers.

While the ends never justify the means, and Kate's abduction and deception are not to be condoned, viewers are hardly likely to have either the opportunity or the inclination to imitate her actions. Taken strictly as a comic fantasy, "Overboard" offers an entertaining parable about redemption.

The film contains implied premarital sex, fleeting male rear nudity, some sexual banter, occasional crude language and an obscene gesture. The Catholic News Service classification is A-III -- adults. The Motion Picture Association of America rating is PG-13.

Neighbors in a global village

From the Director's Desk
Sister Mary Ellen Brett, SSJ,
Diocesan Mission Director

“Not just the ones living next door, or down the block. Not just those from my hometown or country... No, my neighbors may or may not look or talk or think like me.

My neighbors may be of another faith or race or political persuasion.

My neighbors are whoever needs my help right now, whether standing beside me or half a world away. But wait, there’s more! My neighbors do not so much need my help as I need theirs. Without them, I cannot fulfill the law of Christ. Without them, my worship rings hollow and my prayers echo in the emptiness of my heart like an abandoned cathedral, cold, dark and deserted.

But if I believe God wants me here and now to bear witness to the truth and announce God’s reign and fulfill God’s plan for peace and justice on this earth, then let my eyes and ears and voice and hands be opened to see and celebrate and share God’s gifts...no matter how small.”

The above passage is from “Who are My Neighbors” a meditation by Maryknoll Father Joseph Veneroso.

Upon reading this passage, we realize that our neighbors are not just next door, but everywhere. Today, we live in a “global village” where advances in technology and communication have affected every aspect of our lives. The world seems smaller. Globalization can be seen in large multinational corporations which affect the world economy.

All too often, we see how corporate greed has brought to light grave injustices to employees, investors and citizens of our global village. Such injustices likewise affect the poorer nations of the world. As missionaries we are called to bring the Kingdom of God, namely justice, peace, mercy and love to all of God’s global village.

Missionaries are often on the front lines in dealing with both the positive and negative effects of globalization. As Catholics, we have the moral obligation to promote the positive effects and condemn the negative impacts of globalization to the integrity of human beings and their cultures.

We pray for missionaries throughout the world. We remember that we are neighbors in a global village that is the Catholic Church.

We pray that we may ever be faithful to the mission entrusted to us by Christ Himself.

Please remember “The Society for the Propagation of the Faith” when writing or changing your Will.
