Pope: Biggest danger in life is fear

VATICAN CITY (CNS) – The worst enemies in a young person’s life aren’t the problems they may face, Pope Francis said.

The biggest dangers are being unwilling to find a way to adapt, mediocrity by settling for the status quo, and fear, he said at his general audience in St. Peter’s Square June 13.

“It is necessary to ask the heavenly father for the gift of healthy restlessness for today’s young people, the ability to not settle for a life without beauty, without color. If young people are not hungry for an authentic life, where will humanity end up?” he said.

The pope asked people to reflect on the reading from the Gospel of Mark and Jesus’ response to a young, wealthy man who asked what was needed to inherit eternal life. This question reflects the burning desire for a full and dignified life.

“Unfortunately, the pope said, some people believe this desire to live a better life should be tamped down. “I would like to say, especially to young people, our worst enemy is not concrete problems” no matter how serious or tragic they may be.

“The biggest danger in life is a bad spirit of adapting that is not meekness or humility, but is mediocrity, pusillanimity,” that is, cowardice or fear, “and making the excuse for doing nothing.”

FACES OF FAITH: First Communions & May Crownings... Pages 8 & 9
Living faith publicly in a secular society

For I am not ashamed of the gospel. It is the power of God for the salvation of everyone who believes.

– Romans 1:16

On the Solemnity of the Most Holy Body and Blood of Christ, also known as Corpus Christi, I witnessed a large group of people who were not ashamed of the Gospel. They were visibly proclaiming their faith, processing through their community while singing and professing their belief that bread and wine turn into Jesus Christ, body and blood, soul and divinity. We live in a secular society. We’re discouraged from living our faith publicly. Society tells us our faith should be relegated to the walls of our churches. Yet here was this large crowd – it stretched almost the length of the block – exiting the church, taking their faith to their neighborhood. They did that in front of their neighbors, their friends, their classmates. That takes guts.

When I accepted this job, I had the standard concerns anyone has when starting a new adventure: will I make friends? Will I like it? Will it be fulfilling? Those fears were minor.

One of my fears, however, was/is major. That fear: writing this column. Why does that scare me? First, because I have little experience writing in my own voice. But that was the lesser concern. The bigger fear: it’s intimidating to express my faith in such a public way.

Thousands of people receive this paper. If I write well, a certain priest (who shall remain nameless) may even post my article on social media. All of my online friends and family then have access to it, too. They all get to see me attempting to express my faith. That’s sort of scary.

I pray God continues to give us – all of us – the grace we need to live our faith boldly, and share the Gospel with our neighbors, be it in the streets, in a newspaper or wherever we may go.

As Catholics, we are called to community

Today, I would like to continue to share with you my thoughts on the challenge that is ours – yours and mine – as Catholics to become church, a church that is truly a community. Jesus set the tone for our church when he drew his disciples into a community, as he did at the Last Supper. Throughout the years since, the challenge for our church, the body of Christ, is to become truly a family, a community.

Each year, the Church celebrates certain feast days as part of our Catholic liturgical year. Those feasts remind us of the message of Jesus, the call of the Lord, that our Church must be united, must be a community. Our life as a Catholic is not an individual adventure, rather we are on a journey, united with others in a community, praying and working together as a family.

Recently, the Church celebrated an annual holy day commemorating Christ’s institution of the Sacrament of the Holy Eucharist. This is the Feast of the Body and Blood of Christ. The frequent celebration of this sacrament unites us all in a special way to our God and unites us in a special way to each other as the Catholic Church, a community of faith.

Each time we celebrate the Holy Eucharist together, something transformative happens for us all. Each person who participates at Mass leaves that Mass a transformed person, more alive in the life of the Savior. Jesus instituted this sacrament with his apostles at the Last Supper. He also ordained his first priests at that Last Supper.

Each time we, Catholics, celebrate Mass together, our union as church and community is strengthened. Let us consider the Mass. We begin by joining our hearts with song and prayer. Then we consider our own personal lives, seeking God’s blessing and forgiveness if we have somehow failed in love for others. Our Mass then invites us to consider the sacred Scriptures, the word of God. This leads us to the altar of the Lord and a celebration of the Holy Eucharist. I, through my ordination to the priesthood, am allowed to say the very words of Jesus over the bread and wine in consecration to the body and blood of Jesus.

The Prayer of the Eucharist begins with members of the community bringing bread and wine, and the community’s donations to the altar. The people who bring forth the bread and wine are very important to this celebration. They carry forth to the altar the hopes and dreams of all those present. They bring the intentions and needs of the entire congregation to be placed on the altar with the bread and wine to be consecrated in the Eucharist.

I remember attending a Mass while traveling in the Serengeti in Tanzania. It was a very impressive and prayerful Mass. The music was especially wonderful. At the Offertory, every person there walked up to the sanctuary to place their offerings in large baskets. I looked upon that as an opportunity for all of us to place our intentions and prayers on the altar ourselves, seeking consecration with the bread and wine. It was a very sacred moment, all of us walking up together as a community, united in our pleas to the Lord. Even as a stranger there in Africa, I recognized being part of a family, if only for that day and for that Mass.

I like to think that at the time of Communion, we receive the body and blood of Christ, and also all we are praying for, now blessed and consecrated with the sacrament of the Holy Eucharist. We receive back something of ourselves, so that we can now live this life of ours with new power and life.

The sacrament of the Holy Eucharist is all about thanksgiving. The very word Eucharist means thanks. Each celebration of Mass is a time to offer our gratitude to our God. We offer gratitude for Jesus and all that he brought to our world – his life among us, his death for us, his resurrection to new life. We also join in gratitude for all the gifts that God gives us each day of our own lives. Jesus wants to be part of our lives. Jesus wants to unite us to himself in a people, living in his Spirit and life.
IHC names valedictorian, salutatorian

Immaculate Heart Central in Waterton is pleased to announce Gwyneth Rowland and Brendan Kelly as valedictorian and salutatorian.

Valedictorian

Valedictorian Gwyneth Rowland, daughter of Christopher and Sarah Rowland, Watertown, earned a grade point average of 96.6.

Rachel plans to attend Colgate University this fall, where she plans to study economics.
PROCESSION IN FORT COVINGTON

St. Mary’s of the Fort in Fort Covington held a Corpus Christi procession in the neighborhood surrounding the church. Father Thomas E. Kornmeyer carried the monstrance containing the Eucharist, accompanied by Altar Servers Zach Smith and Deacon Brian T. Dwyer. Three parishioners set up an altar on the curb, the neighborhood surrounding the church. Father Thomas E. Kornmeyer then took his faith to the streets here be a source of renewed vigor and deepened faith in the Real Presence of Jesus in the Eucharist," Bishop LaValley said. "Let us pray to our holy Mother, so that she may help us to open our entire being to Christ’s presence, so that she may help us to follow Him faithfully, day after day, on the streets of our life, giving generously of ourselves for others."

Msgr. John R. Murphy, pastor at St. Andrew’s Church, said the tradition of a Corpus Christi procession was revived in the community in 2015, at the urging of the Msgr. Francis Maguire Council of the Knights of Columbus.

After a successful first event in Norwood, Msgr. Murphy said the procession was held at St. Mary’s in Potsdam in 2016 and at Sacred Heart in Massena in 2017.

Msgr. Murphy said the Knights of Columbus continue to be an integral part of the celebration, with the Msgr. Francis Maguire Council (Norwood) serving in the procession and at the Mass, and members of the Sarto Council (Canton), along with seminarians from the diocese, providing music.

Taking faith to the streets for Corpus Christi Sunday

NORWOOD – Around 150 area faithful, including priests, deacons, Knights of Columbus and altar servers, took their faith to the streets on June 3 in a Eucharistic procession celebrating the Solemnity of the Most Holy Body and Blood of Christ, also known as Corpus Christi.

Hosted by St. Andrew’s Church, the event included Mass, a Eucharistic procession and Benediction, as well as a reception.

In the procession, the Eucharist, housed in a monstrance, was carried by Bishop Terry R. LaValley, escorted by Knights of Columbus, priests and deacons from around the area, as well as a team of altar servers.

Hymns were sung as the procession moved through the streets of Norwood.

The Mass preceding the procession was celebrated by Bishop LaValley, who reminded those in attendance of the significance of the Eucharist.

"It is the very core of our faith that the bread and wine we take up the aisle and put on the altar will become for us the actual Body and Blood of Christ," Bishop LaValley said. "It is no mere symbol. It is real."

Bishop LaValley also indicated how powerful bringing the Eucharist to the streets could be.

"May the visit of the Eucharistic Christ on the streets here be a source of renewed vigor and deepened faith in the Real Presence of Jesus in the Eucharist," he said. "Let us pray to our holy Mother, so that she may help us to open our entire being to Christ's presence, so that she may help us to follow Him faithfully, day after day, on the streets of our life, giving generously of ourselves for others."

Msgr. John R. Murphy, pastor at St. Andrew’s Church, said the tradition of a Corpus Christi procession was revived in the community in 2015, at the urging of the Msgr. Francis Maguire Council of the Knights of Columbus.

After a successful first event in Norwood, Msgr. Murphy said the procession was held at St. Mary’s in Potsdam in 2016 and at Sacred Heart in Massena in 2017.
Environmental Stewardship

MORE ‘SEEDS OF HOPE”

Even though there is an enormous amount of devastation in regards to plastic pollution the “seeds of hope” can be found by awareness, knowing the facts and taking even a small action.

So, first let’s define plastic: it is a synthetic material made from a wide range of organic polymers such as polyethylene, PVC, nylon, etc. that can be molded into shape while soft and then set into a rigid or slightly elastic form. Plastic pollution is the accumulation of plastic products in the environment that adversely affects wildlife, wildlife habitat or humans. With that being said most plastics don’t biodegrade in any meaningful sense, all that plastic waste could exist for hundreds or even thousands of years, and approximately 91% of plastic waste isn’t recycled. Pretty scary thought but now that we are becoming aware of the harm it is doing to wildlife as they try to ingest these products thinking it is food and dying because it prevents them from eating regular nutrients, it is time to help.

This quote I believe says it all: “The devastation of plastic pollution is not who we are as a global community. Now is the time for us to reflect on our own beauty, to reconsider our use of plastic products. It is time to start a plastic campaign.”

Adrian Grenier, Lonely Whale Co-Founder.

For more information on this project, please check out this website: https://www.strawlessocean.org/lonelywhale/

Something as small as refusing a straw at a restaurant is a great place to begin your action plan to reduce plastic pollution. When we know that 500 million plastic straws are used EVERY DAY in America; enough to circle the Earth twice it is time to take this awareness and make a small step toward helping our planet.

“We must do small things for one another with great love!” Mother Teresa

Registration is still open for this year’s Cursillo weekends.

The men’s weekend will be held July 12 to 15, and women’s weekend will be held August 9 to 12. Both weekends will be held at The Haven in Star Lake.

A Cursillo Weekend is an intense three-day experience of Jesus. Central to the retreat are talks and discussions that introduce participants to prayer/piety (spiritual practices), study (spiritual reading and development) and apostolic action (hearing and responding to God’s calls) as means to grow in love of the Lord and share that love with those we meet in our day-to-day lives.

In addition to those talks and discussions, the weekend includes opportunities for both individual and group prayer.

“Cursillo weekend has been a life-changing experience for me,” said Brent Davison, a parishioner of St. Peter’s in Plattsburgh, who made his Cursillo weekend in 2014. “I was nervous at first about going into something unknown, but now feel it was one of the most powerful experiences I have encountered. My faith has grown profoundly.”

With the help of resident chaplains, the weekend also gives participants an opportunity to participate in the Sacrament of Reconciliation, as well as Mass and the Eucharist.

“Cursillo has given me a deeper love for the Catholic Church and has shown me that through the many spiritual aids it gives us, such as the sacraments, daily Mass, prayer, scripture, adoration and especially the Eucharist, I can know Jesus better and draw nearer to Him,” said Kathy Racette, a parishioner of St. John the Baptist Church in Plattsburgh, who made her Cursillo in 1978.

Of course, weekends also include social time and group celebrations. In addition to growing in faith, most participants grow their circles of friends in faith.

“When I first decided to attend Cursillo weekend many years ago, I was apprehensive,” said Ken Racette, a parishioner of St. John the Baptist in Plattsburgh. “I didn’t think I would fit in. I was unsure of myself and somewhat shy. After the first evening, I found myself enjoying the other men on the weekend and actually having fun. There is a closeness that develops during a weekend. It’s the result of experiencing Christ’s Body in a personal way. I still think fondly of the men I met many years ago on that weekend, even though we are far away from each other.”

After the three-day Cursillo retreat process, Cursillo participants are encouraged to form or join sharing groups as part of “the Fourth day,” life moving forward with a focus on prayer/piety, study and action to grow in faith and to share the faith with others.

Participants can meet in two types of settings: small group reunions and Ultreya, which is a gathering of small groups. Although encouraged, participation in the fourth day is up to the freedom and choice of the individ-

Quick facts about Cursillo

What is Cursillo?

Cursillo is a lay movement that aims to bring participants closer to God, help them live a Christian life and equip them to share God’s love with those around them.

What does it involve?

Cursillo includes a weekend retreat, as well as opportunities to participate in group faith sharing events.

Who should participate?

Weekends and group events are open to Catholic men and women who wish to strengthen their relationship with the Lord and be open to His calls to action.

Cursillo weekend:

Cursillo Weekends are currently scheduled for 2018 at The Haven in Star Lake. The next men’s weekend will be held July 12 to 15, and the women’s weekend will be held August 9 to 12.

How Do I get involved?

MEET THE STAFF

Kevin McCulloch
Hi, my name is Kevin McCulloch. This will be my third year on staff at Camp Guggenheim, but my 10th year here at camp! Over this past year I just finished my first year at the Pontifical College Josephinum. I am majoring in philosophy, and as a seminarian, that means I am studying to be a priest. Before entering the seminary, I attended two years at SUNY Jefferson Community College. I completed my Certification to be a Youth Minister in the spring of 2017. I can’t wait to start the summer with my incredible co-workers for the summer, and all the returning and new campers this season.
HIKE * SWIM * PRAISE

Katy Sherman
Hi, my name is Katy Sherman. I spent my childhood growing up in the North Country, but I currently reside in Melbourne, Florida and my home parish is Our Lady of Lourdes. In the fall, I will be a senior at Ave Maria University, where I am majoring in exercise science and playing lacrosse. This will be my third summer on staff. Camp has always been my favorite place on earth and has had such a positive influence on my faith journey. I could not be more excited to spread Christ’s love with all the campers this summer! I am ready to hike, swim, & PRAISE!

St. James in Carthage gets an updated look

CARTHAGE — Soon after becoming pastor of St. James Church in June 2015, Father Donald A. Robinson discovered that both the exterior and interior of the church needed extensive restoration work.

With the approval of the parish Finance Council and Pastoral Council, a capital project was initiated in the fall of 2016. Lupini Construction, Utica was awarded the contract for the exterior masonry restoration. Phase one and two of a multiple-year renovation plan are now complete.

Father Robinson and his church committee also voiced a strong desire to freshen the appearance of the interior of the church, which needed updating. Therefore, the Reconciliation Room was updated with new walls, lighting, screened wall and glass panels.

The interior of the church was painted by J.L. Smith and Sons, Building Contractors, Inc., Port Leyden. New up-lighting illuminating the vaulted ceilings and murals was installed by DCM Electric Contracting, Castorland. Each of the 14 Stations of the Cross now have a separate and distinct spotlight. Each station was cleaned and repaired by Mary Beth Renaud, a parishioner of St. James.

A new high quality ceramic porcelain tile floor was installed by Kevin Lyndaker, Moore River Hearth and Patio, Lowville.

Bishop LaValley celebrated a Mass of Thanksgiving to mark the successful completion of the Interior Renovation Project on May 27. A reception followed in the Augustinian Academy gymnasium.

The renovation of St. James Church is the third church that Father Robinson has refurbished. The first was St. Mary’s Church, Champlain followed by St. Anthony’s Church, Watertown. “This was my third church renovation and it most definitely will be my last,” Father Robinson said.

Bishops decry asylum plan

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (CNS) — The U.S. bishops decried U.S. Attorney General Jeff Sessions’ decision that asylum seekers fleeing domestic or gang violence cannot find protection in the United States.

“At its core, asylum is an instrument to preserve the right to life,” the bishops’ statement said. They urged the nation’s policymakers and courts “to respect and enhance, not erode, the potential of our asylum system to preserve and protect the right to life.”

Sessions’ decision “elicits deep concern because it potentially strips asylum from many women who lack adequate protection,” it said. “These vulnerable women will now face return to extreme dangers of domestic violence in their home country.”

The statement from the bishops came on the first day of their June 13-14 spring assembly in Fort Lauderdale.

Just after opening prayers, Cardinal Daniel N. DiNardo of Galveston-Houston, president of the U.S. Conference of Catholic Bishops, read the statement from the dais, and the bishops voiced their support.

Announced by Sessions at a June 11 news conference, the decision “negates decades of precedents that have provided protection to women fleeing domestic violence,” it said. “Unless overturned, the decision will erode the capacity of asylum to save lives, particularly in cases that involve asylum seekers who are persecuted by private actors.”

The attorney general reversed an immigration court’s decision granting asylum to a Salvadoran woman who said she had been abused by her husband. He said U.S. asylum laws cannot be used to remedy “all misfortune,” including violence someone suffers in another country or other reasons related to an individual’s “social, economic, family or other personal circumstances.”

In his remarks, Cardinal DiNardo also said he joined Bishop Joe S. Vasquez of Austin, Texas, chairman of the USCCB’s Committee on Migration, “in condemning the continued use of family separation at the U.S./Mexican border as an implementation of the administration’s zero tolerance policy.”

“Our government has the discretion in our laws to ensure that young children are not separated from their parents and exposed to irreparable harm and trauma,” the cardinal said. “Families are the foundational element of our society and they must be able to stay together.

“While protecting our borders is important, we can and must do better as a government, and as a society, to find other ways to ensure that safety. Separating babies from their mothers is not the answer and is immoral.”

Cardinal Joseph W. Tobin of Newark, New Jersey, said the new policy “is consistent with cardiovascular” or a hardening of the American heart. He called for a widespread discussion among bishops on how to more vocally respond to the practice.
Stolen letter returned to Vatican Library

VATICAN CITY (CNS) – With the help of the U.S. Department of Homeland Security, a 15th-century copy of a letter Christopher Columbus sent to his royal patrons describing the riches of the New World has been returned to its rightful owner — the Vatican.

The rare eight-page document, estimated to be worth $1.2 million, had been secretly replaced with a forgery, while the true document eventually ended up in the hands of a U.S. collector from Atlanta.

The late Robert Parsons purchased the piece for $875,000 in the United States in 2004 “in good faith,” unaware it had been stolen.

Callista Gingrich, U.S. ambassador to the Holy See, and representatives of the Department of Homeland Security and its investigations division presented the original copy during a ceremony June 14 at the Vatican Library. Archbishop Jean-Louis Brugues, head of the Vatican Library and Vatican Secret Archives, and Msgr. Cesare Pasini, the library’s prefect, also attended the ceremony.

“This is a historic day,” the archbishop said, as an important document that is part of the history of the Americas and Spain “returns home.”

The U.S. ambassador said, “It is a precious piece of history and I am honored to return it to its rightful owner.”

After Columbus’ first voyage to the Americas, the Italian explorer documented his findings and his assessment of these “new” lands in a letter to Spanish King Ferdinand and Queen Isabella, his patrons.

The original letter, written in Spanish in 1493, was then immediately translated into other languages and printed in major European cities, thereby quickly spreading the news of Columbus’ historic discoveries.

While the original Spanish letter no longer exists, about 80 of these early printed translations still survive, such as the one that had belonged to the Vatican — a Latin version printed by the Rome-based printer, Stephan Planck, in 1493.

The document had been acquired in the early 1800s by a Rome collector, who donated it to the superiors of the Jesuits, according to U.S. court documents obtained by the Wall Street Journal. The head of the Jesuits then gave the collection to Pope Benedict XV in 1921.

It is not known when the letter was stolen, but special agents from Homeland Security had received a tip in 2011 that the document in the library was a fake. Investigations eventually led them to believe the document in the Parsons’ collection was the original.

Experts compared the two pieces and found the fake letter in the Vatican Library actually had the original 1493 binding, whose dimensions and “sewing thread” matched the real letter held by Parsons.

Bishops accept new guidelines for health partnerships

FORT LAUDERDALE, FLA. (CNS) – The process for considering key moral questions are more thoroughly examined in revised guidelines governing Catholic and non-Catholic health care partnerships adopted by the U.S. bishops.

Voting 183-2 with two abstentions during their spring assembly, the bishops adopted the revisions, which are limited to Part 6 of the “Ethical and Religious Directives for Catholic Health Care Services” developed by the U.S. Conference of Catholic Bishops.

The directives govern moral questions related to the delivery of health care in settings involving cooperation among Catholic and non-Catholic systems.

Bishop Robert J. McManus of Worcester, Massachusetts, chairman of the bishops’ Committee on Doctrine’s Subcommittee on Health Care, told the assembly that the new directives will help bishops decide whether a health care partnership can occur under the church’s moral teaching.

The revisions offer more specific guidance to hospital administrators confronted with an increasingly complicated business environment. They also offer guidance to bishops as they witness health care mergers and collaborative arrangements in their dioceses.

The revised directives became necessary in the face of widening consolidation within the health care industry as hospital systems look to reduce expenses and limit the duplication of services in any given service market.

Archbishop: Religious freedom still challenged

FORT LAUDERDALE, FLA. (CNS) – Challenges to religious freedom continue to emerge and the U.S. Catholic Church will remain steadfast in addressing them to serve the good, Archbishop Joseph E. Kurtz of Louisville, Kentucky, told the spring assembly of the U.S. Conference of Catholic Bishops.

In his report as chairman of the bishops’ Committee for Religious Freedom, the archbishop said June 14 that such efforts are rooted in a vision to protect human dignity and support family and the gift of sexuality.

“We propose this vision with passion for the good of individuals and for the good of our nation,” the archbishop said.

While some challenges have been overcome, such as the contraceptive mandate in the Affordable Care Act that forced religious institutions and people of faith to violate their faith, it does not mean they have ended, he said.

“These issues will continue. They continue in health care. They continue in marriage and family, in life issues. Certainly challenges, perhaps of a different sort, in the welcome of immigrants and refugee families.”

“Perhaps the greatest challenge is what we might call what’s happening in the court of public opinion,” Archbishop Kurtz said. “Public polling tells us in many ways people 60 years of age and older often appreciate the threats to religious freedom, but younger generations are not. People seem to be swayed by those who characterize religious freedom as ‘a license to discriminate.’ We know this to be farthest from the truth, but that doesn’t mean it doesn’t hold sway.”

In response, he explained, the committee has developed a plan to change the narrative about religious freedom.

The effort will include “choosing our language carefully” through the use of “inspiring and relatable language that promotes the ‘gift’ of religious freedom,” he said. He used the example of faith-based agencies that face the threat of government shutdown because of their religious or moral convictions.

The effort will focus on keeping the needs of children first, Archbishop Kurtz said. “We also have emphasized that this is not the time to limit those agencies that are able to serve children and we’ve urged the need to make space in our culture to offer service with integrity of faith,” he said.
We are commissioned to spread the Good News

Today is one those rare times that the feast of a saint replaces the usual Sunday readings (the other three are St. Joseph, Sts. Peter and Paul, and All Saints). June 24th is also called Midsummer’s Day, the longest day of the year. From here until Christmas, the Birth of Jesus, the days start to get shorter.

Jesus told his followers that his cousin, John, was the greatest man born of woman. This feast clearly shows his “claim to fame”, for John spent his whole life preparing the people of Israel for the mission of Jesus. The world would never be the same again.

The first reading from Isaiah is one of four Suffering Servant songs that foretell the coming of the Messiah. Besides prophesying the birth of Jesus, this reading can also be applied to John the Baptist. The names of both John and Jesus were determined before their birth. Both were in their mother’s wombs when John “leaped for joy” at the presence of Jesus.

June 24

Feast of the Nativity of John the Baptist

READINGS
Isaiah 49:1-6
Acts 3:22-26
Luke 1:57-66, 80

John’s preaching of repentance in the desert prepared the way for the “light of the nations” to bring salvation to all the world. As Jesus grew in favor before the people, John could see that his work was coming to a close. In humility, he helped his own followers attach themselves to Jesus by declaring, “Behold, one is coming after me; I am not worthy to unfasten the sandals of his feet.” In our second reading, St. Luke quotes St. Paul as using this statement of John in his own preaching of the Good News.

In the Gospel of Luke today, we learn of God’s special providence in the circumstances of John’s birth, and how God used John’s father, Zechariah, as his special prophet. In the beautiful hymn, the Benedictus (skipped over in today’s selection), Zechariah connects his son’s future mission with that of Moses, who told of God’s promises to bring salvation to all peoples. There are no greater birthdays in all of history to compare with those of John in today’s feast, and the birth of Jesus which we celebrate six months from now. Two cousins, bound together in the great rescue mission of redemption!

As confirmed followers of Jesus, we, too, are commissioned by Jesus to proclaim the Good News. In order that society may pay better attention to what we say and do, it is very necessary for us to see as people of prayer, reflection, and faith, courageous in speaking about and living our faith. The interests of Jesus Christ must come before our own.

Bishops approve election-year video, documents

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (CNS) – New supplementary documents and a video are on the horizon for the U.S. Conference of Catholic Bishops in advance of the 2020 presidential election.

During their spring general assembly, the bishops approved the production of a short letter “to inspire prayer and action regarding public life” and a short video and other resources that would apply the teaching of Pope Francis to contemporary issues.

The actions are meant to clarify the bishops’ document on Catholics in public life, “Forming Consciences for Faithful Citizenship.”

In a June 14 vote, bishops supported the actions 144-41, with two abstentions after an 85-minute discussion that found some bishops calling for an extensive revision of the quadrennial document that traditionally has been issued a year in advance of a presidential election.

Approval came after the working group included a reference that the materials that will be developed would “apply the teaching of Pope Francis to our day.”

Supporters of a full revision said the current document, first adopted in 2011 and revised in 2015, does not reflect the extensive teachings of Pope Francis on issues that have emerged in recent years such as restrictive immigration policies, the U.S. withdrawal from the Paris climate agreement and the renewed threats posed by nuclear weapons.

The proposal for a letter, video and other materials came from a working group that included the chairmen of several USCCB committees that regularly deal with public policy issues, including poverty, abortion, family, marriage, health care and international affairs.

The materials will be prepared in time for the bishops to review at their fall general assembly in November 2019. The bishops traditionally have issued updated versions of the Faithful Citizenship document about a year before a presidential election.

The discussion found several bishops saying that the most recent edition of the document does not incorporate the teachings of Pope Francis on worldwide concerns such as the migration of people, economic inequality and protecting earth’s resources.

They also pointed to the need to incorporate the USCCB statements access to health care.

In calling for a new document, the bishops said the current document has gained little attention from Catholics – with about one in six churchgoers having read at least part of it – because it is too long.

The push for a major revision of the document started with Chicago Cardinal Blase J. Cupich, who said, “It would be a missed opportunity and a big mistake not to move forward with an entirely new document.”

He said there was a “new body of teaching” offered by Pope Francis and “the way he presents those topics seems to be a body of teaching we ought to integrate.”

Their discussion of a new document and how to address differences of opinion could also model for the country how “how public civil discourse can take place,” the cardinal added. “People have very few examples of how this should take place.”

Bishop John E. Stowe of Lexington, Kentucky, saying he welcomed the new materials, echoed the cardinal and said including gun control in the document was important as young people rise to challenge the nation’s gun laws after several mass shootings in schools.

Bishop Robert W. McElroy added that it was vital for the Faithful Citizenship document to reflect “the signs of the times” by addressing rising racism, economic inequality and the “greatest assault on immigration law in the last 50 years.”

“We need to speak to these questions and we need to speak as a collective body of bishops,” he said.

Archbishop Jose H. Gomez of Los Angeles, USCCB vice president, who presented the working group’s proposal, explained drafting a new document on Catholic participation in public life would require a long effort and regular review. He expressed concern that it might not be done by November 2019.

NEW YORK (CNS) – The first family of superheroes returns in "Incredibles 2" (Disney), the highly anticipated sequel to a much-loved 2004 animated film.

Alas, the passage of time (a truly incredible 14 years) has not been kind. Despite Brad Bird's return as writer and director, "Incredibles 2" lacks the spontaneity, charm and style of its predecessor (as well as the leading article from "The Incredibles").

Story takes a back seat to a visually impressive but relentless barrage of (often repetitive) action and violence, even gunplay, which may frighten younger viewers. Added to the mix is some profane and crass language which is jarring in any children's movie.

It's a pity, as amid all the bluster "Incredibles 2" pitches the worthy lessons of its predecessor about love, family, courage and helping others in need.

The Parr family – parents Bob (voice of Craig T. Nelson) and Helen (voice of Holly Hunter), and kids Violet (voice of Sarah Vowell), Dash (voice of Huck Milner), and baby Jack-Jack (voice of Eli Fucile) – have just used their assorted superhuman abilities to vanquish the forces of evil.

But their victory is short-lived; the law still dictates that "supers" must remain undercover and inactive. So the Parrs reluctantly return to their humdrum existence, and Helen and Bob wonder how they will make ends meet.

Enter a champion, Winston Deavor (voice of Bob Odenkirk), a media mogul and superhero fan who wants to rehabilitate the supers and remind society of their importance. Joined by his inventor sister Evelyn (voice of Catherine Keener), Deavor wants Helen – aka Elastigirl – in the spotlight, showcasing her powers in the fight of good versus evil.

That means parental roles are reversed, and Bob must now stay home to care for the kids, while Helen gets to save the day and dominate the headlines.

It's a big change for "Mr. Incredible" as he navigates homework with Dash, comforts Violet amid her boyfriend troubles, and discovers that Jack-Jack, despite being in diapers, is full of (super) surprises.

Needless to say, the opportunity arises to introduce a gaggle of new supers into the mix and offer cameos of old chestnuts like Frozone (voice of Samuel L. Jackson) and fashion designer Edna Mode (voice of Brad Bird). And before you can say "Great Caesar's ghost!" (sorry, wrong cartoon), the Parr family will reunite to save the world, again.

The film contains action violence and gunplay and mild profane and crass language.

The Catholic News Service classification is A-II – adults and adolescents.

The Motion Picture Association of America rating is PG – parental guidance suggested. Some material may not be suitable for children.

June signifies not only the start of summer, but also new beginning for our youth. For many, that new beginning starts with a graduation, the start of the future. That future may include college or a trade school, the military, a new job or career training, or maybe a vocational calling to God.

To our graduates, congratulations! Keep going, work hard and continue to learn. Grow your minds, grow your optimism. Remember, faith must continue to grow as well. Grow your spirit, your missionary spirit. Go forth and seek what calls you.

These rites of passage, like graduations, are set by society as benchmarks of progress. Progress is the goal of every business, institution, community and church. In the Mission Lands, progress is the goal of the Pontifical Mission Societies.

Because we are baptized, we are called to be missionaries. This is another benchmark in our faith, much like graduation is in our education. The act of baptism makes us a missionary, just like graduation from high school or even from kindergarten sends us forward to our next path or destination.

Baptism is our first sacrament, just like graduation is the first step towards your future career or endeavor.

Getting to graduation requires hard work. In fact, for some it is the hardest work you will do. What you do with this accomplishment next is how you will be judged and measure your own self. Just like our baptism make us a missionary, you are called upon by Jesus to work hard at your faith and to be sent forth and make disciples of all nations.

So, go forth graduates! Work hard and answer your calling. Follow your hearts. Many people helped to get you to this point. Just like in the mission lands, it truly does take a village! Take a moment to remember those who love you and promoted you and your spirit. Promote your spirit well. Be your own best advocate, and remember your faith and your love of the church. Be a missionary in spirit by always remembering to be kind, generous and loving with your time, treasure and talent. Try to be the best you can be.

Remember, this is the beginning and not the end. This is only a benchmark for now. There are many more ahead. Make friends and continue to grow. Go forth and make disciples of all nations.

God bless our young people and their families!
