 Legislative Day focused on abortion law

Albany – More than 1,200 people from around the state, largely Christians representing a variety of denominations, recently gathered to discuss public policy at an annual Legislative Day.

New Yorkers for Constitutional Freedoms (albanyupdate.com), a state organization that educates and activates evangelical Christians regarding matters of public policy, and New Yorker’s Family Research Foundation (newyorkfamilies.org) co-sponsored the annual event on March 19 at the Empire State Plaza Convention Center.

The theme of the event was “A New Season: Where Do We Go From Here?”

Pope: The sinner is more important than the VATICAN CITY (CNS) – Jesus does not view sinners as transgressors who must be punished according to the law, but as people in need of hope and freedom from sin, Pope Francis said.

“It is Jesus who, with the power of the Holy Spirit, frees us from the evil we have within us, from the sin which the law could impede but not remove,” the pope said in his homily March 29 during the annual Lenten penance service in St. Peter’s Basilica.

After the homily and several minutes of silent reflection and prayer, the pope removed his liturgical vestments and walked toward one of the wooden confessionals; he knelt before a priest to confess.

The sound of sacred music, interspersed with moments of scripture reading and quiet reflection, filled the basilica while Pope Francis and dozens of priests and bishops listened to confessions.

In his homily, the pope reflected on the Gospel reading, in which the Pharisees brought a woman accused of adultery and attempted to trap Jesus by asking him whether she should be stoned according to the law of Moses.

“Let the one among you who is without sin be the first to throw a stone at her,” Jesus replied.

Citing St. Augustine, the pope said once those who sought to stone the woman left, only Jesus and the woman remained, “mercy with misery,” because in his eyes, “that woman, that person” was what was of value.

“For him, the sinner comes before the sin,” the pope explained. “I, you, each one of us come first in the heart of God: before mistakes, rules, judgments and our failures.”

However, Christians must keep in mind that, without the love of God, evil cannot be overcome. Thus, the sacrament of reconciliation, the pope said, is the gift that helps “make room for the Lord, who forgives and heals.”

Forgiveness, he continued, “is a new beginning” and not “a photocopy which is identically reproduced in every passage through the confessional.”
It gave him more than just funny stories

I’ve said it before, and I’m sure I’ll say it again: Marry those IHC grads.

My husband, a Watertown native, graduated from Immaculate Heart Central after attending Holy Family School for the elementary grades.

While Adam’s favorite tales of his time at IHC involved him cooperating with friends to stink bomb the library (he never got caught for that; if you attended IHC in the early 90s, you know), standing up to a particularly tough teacher/religious sister and cultivating friendships, there’s no doubt his Catholic school education gave him more than just funny stories.

Adam is somewhat quiet and reserved. He enjoyed the relatively small size of his Catholic schools and the familial environment the smallness of the schools created.

It was in those Catholic schools that he developed his love of art and history, as well as his early artistic skills. It was in those schools that he learned the fundamentals of our faith.

While he still relishes the occasional prank or moment of mischief, Adam’s Catholic education combined with awesome parenting helped him develop into an outstanding man who values faith, thinks critically, exhibits more patience than anyone I know and creates beautiful works of art.

While our diocesan Catholic schools certainly face challenges, they also do amazing, meaningful work. They provide all the state-required education, of course, but they also teach empathy and service; offer opportunities for enrichment; and, maybe most importantly, create communities of faith, love and support.

As our Catholic schools ramp up their planning and recruiting for the 2019-20 school year, consider supporting them in their efforts. If you have a school-aged child, enroll him or her in a Catholic school.

Even if you don’t have a school-aged child, there are many ways you can help. Spread the word about the benefits of a Catholic education. Contact your local school to see if there’s any way your skills, hobbies and talents could benefit the students/facility and do some volunteer work. Make a donation.

Our schools are worth it.

Spending time with Jesus on his cross

We are now near the middle of Lent. This can be a spiritually difficult time. I suspect that you, like me, begin Lent with enthusiasm and spirit, and extra prayer and sacrifices. But after a few weeks, as we get into the middle of the season of Lent, I know that my enthusiasm loses some of its fervor. So, I write today to share with you some of my ideas and hopes to get my Lenten Spirit going again.

I have decided that this is a good time for me to spend some time with Jesus on the Mount of Calvary. I have been there before, of course, at the foot of the cross of Jesus. But now is a good time to climb that hill and find that cross of Jesus. As the church looks ahead to Good Friday and Easter, the best preparation for those holy days is to now pray at that Lord’s cross. This is a time to allow the Lord to lead us and guide us to carry our own cross.

Jesus died on the cross for me and for you, demonstrating God’s great forgiving love for us all. Lent leads us to the cross of Jesus.

So, let us take a moment to think about the cross of Jesus. The cross was in those days an instrument of death. But now for us the cross is sacred. Jesus, Our Savior, died on a cross. Now we place a cross over our churches; we place the cross of Jesus over the altar for our Eucharist. For us, Catholics, the cross must be more than just a reminder of Jesus. The cross for us is a sacred icon. Each time we pause to pray we begin with the Sign of the Cross, even in a restaurant as we say grace before meals. Every blessing I do as a priest, I complete with a Sign of the Cross. Every one of our Catholic Sacraments involves the Sign of the Cross – the water of Baptism is poured in a Sign of the Cross, the priest forgives our sins with a Sign of the Cross. You may have noticed that some ball players, as they come up to bat, steady themselves with the Sign of the Cross.

I believe that Jesus, on the cross, in that moment, recognized just what salvation would cost him. On the cross, in that very moment, Jesus recognized each one of us, his people of all time. At that moment of his crucifixion, we were all there; he could recognize us all.

Standing at the foot of the cross, even now, I see Jesus for the first time, and each time is the like the first time. Jesus on the cross is my symbol of love.

At the foot of the cross of Jesus, my prayer is a prayer of gratitude. Because Jesus died on the cross for me, my life is filled with gratitude. The Lord’s action in my life profoundly changes each and every moment. Jesus’ death on the cross changes all the way I live. All my relationships are touched by the love of my Savior. Jesus shows me how I must treat all others, as I learn to live by joining Jesus on that cross.

I believe it is important for us all to learn to carry the cross of Christ. The best way for me to face the crises that touch my life is by carrying the cross of Jesus. I need the strength and power of Jesus to meet the hardships of life. I will always find that strength by carrying the cross of Christ.

I believe that when I need the help of the Lord to accomplish something each day, when I must make an important decision, when I must say the right thing (as in a homily or as the Confessor in Confession), I do this best when I am carrying the cross of Jesus.

Principal, Immaculate Heart Central

WATERTOWN – Every year at Immaculate Heart Central School in Watertown, the sixth graders spend the day at the high school and then attend the annual registration night in the evening. That event was held March 13.

On the morning of March 13, Mr. Delaney, IHC’s guidance counselor and athletic director, and this year’s 2019 New York State Basketball Hall of Fame inductee, explained to the students how course selection and the sports program works. One student marveled at IHC’s three language offerings with the possibility of even more to choose from through IHC’s new partnership with The Virtual High School. What they don’t know yet, too, is that American Sign Language will be an option.

Christin Filippelli, the Enrollment Management Director, assigned student ambassadors to guide each student group throughout the day. At no time did the older students leave their sides. After becoming acquainted with the morning routine, the newbies were led by Mrs. Filippelli through a guided tour of the building. “You can come here any time of the day to talk to God. We also have adoration here.”

The class of 2025 even caught a glimpse of what changing classes every forty minutes and battling with the lockers in three minutes are really like for the average student. Becoming fully immersed in French with Mrs. Minter-Powell, a longtime IHC veteran teacher and the community service coordinator, discovering the many ways to say the word “smart” in Mr. Rowland’s English Language Arts class, and preparing to become a well-informed voter at the age of eighteen while Mrs. Pedraza teaches a civics lesson are just some of the ways the students became acquainted with what is to come next school year.

And most people are not even aware of one of IHC’s best kept secrets: the cafe. Students, faculty, and staff dare to enter the kitchen with a hearty appetite. The menu includes fresh salads, yogurt parfaits, turkey wraps, and the entree of the day. Mrs. Magovney, the cafeteria manager, believes that “Children should eat fresh food every day.” The line is often almost out the door with little left over after the period ends.

At dismissal time, students left very satisfied with their junior high experience. As one of many parents noted on the buffet line at registration night, “My daughter was so happy at the end of the school day. She could not stop talking about starting the seventh grade.”

Dave Nicol, the Booster Club president, and other club members, sponsored a delicious pasta and meatball dinner with salad, bread, cookies, and a variety of beverages. Towards the end of the dinner, Mrs. Filippelli reminded the families about the reason we were all there.

Each family received a mason jar to fill with prayers and reasons to be thankful. She also encouraged everyone to add petitions for others as they remember them in the jar. Other suggestions included placing the jar at the center of the dinner table as a reminder that God should be first in our lives.

Mrs. Filippelli told all families to save the date for the New Student Orientation. She asked the students to recall the day they will meet again to receive their locker numbers and combinations. They shouted, “August 20”! Immediately, the cafeteria was filled with phone lights as the students and their families enthusiastically programmed the very important date in their devices.

After the students, their parents/guardians, and in some cases, their siblings, left their tables, they toured the school building, tried on the new uniform, and learned more about our community service and music programs.

Before leaving for the evening, a mother of three students from a long-time IHC family stated with great pride that “This is why I send my children to a Catholic school.”
CANTON—This coming year marks St. Mary’s 90th year serving the families of Canton, NY. This past fall, the school community came together to discuss different ideas and proposals presented to help save our school from closing. This vulnerable and emotional time opened our eyes to the true support and deep love that each of our St. Mary’s families has for our school as we all began finding a solution to saving this vital institution in our region.

After coming to a conclusion in January to keep the school open through a refresh and recharge to multiple different departments within the school, we are excited to be accepting applications for the 2019-2020 school year for grades Nursery through six.

The deep and rich values of our school, providing a faith-based, student centered education, that ensures the development of the whole child in a family-oriented environment through a community service-based education are vital to the development of our students. Our relationship with God is the foundation of how and why we operate and the way we live our lives. Faith formation is a priority, especially for those at a young age, and this includes direct instruction in Catholic beliefs, traditions and attitudes, and daily prayer.

“I grew up attending another St. Mary’s school. It gave the walls to my life,” said Father Bryan Stitt, Pastor of St. Mary’s Canton. “Any school teaches math, science, reading, and writing, but St. Mary’s gives walls to your life: Walls that support, walls that protect, walls that keep the focus in mind. The walls of our Catholic school are intended to be like the walls of a mighty river. When they are in place, the river flows with great power and efficacy. But if they fall, there is nothing but marshland. These walls help us live freely.”

In addition to the intrinsically beautiful and essential virtues that can be found within a small, private, Catholic education, we have enhanced multiple departments of our school including marketing, fundraising, the nursery program, after school classes, and volunteer opportunities.

We will continue to offer Latchkey programs before and after school for students in Nursery to grade six for those at St. Mary’s and Canton Central. Our Nursery for youth aged 3, and pre-K for youth ages 4 both offer half and full day programs, and we are proud to say that we will be offering an additional Nursery/Pre-K classroom in the coming 2019-20 school year due to high demand.

The school will also be offering high impact mini-classes after school for students. St. Mary’s is excited that our team is currently working with the local universities and institutions to develop programs in foreign languages, STEM, robotics, and the arts, as well as continuing our long-standing relationship with Crane for our music program. We see these mini-classes as an additional creative outlet for students to learn more in areas they are interested in outside the classroom.

“We are thrilled to work with local teachers and universities to expand our after-school programming at St. Mary’s School in the coming years,” said Kate Murphy, a parent of two at St. Mary’s. “Countless studies have revealed positive gains for students who participate in high-quality after-school programming, and St. Mary’s School is aiming to develop a robust after-school curriculum, particularly in STEM and foreign languages.”

“The mini programs are a phenomenal way to expose our children to the amazing benefits of living in the North Country,” said Devon Sutton, a parent of two students at St. Mary’s. “We have so many organizations that specialize in music, nature, STEM, art, sports and so on here. Being able to offer that to our students in a manner that is accessible for all of the St. Mary’s families is a priority as we look to serve our community with excellence in the coming years.”

Another excellent development is our new Parent Teacher Organization which allows another avenue for parental involvement in their students’ education. This partnership between parents and teachers will allow for even more transparency between the school and our families.

“The PTO has already become a vital tool, freeing up our educators to do just that, educate,” Devon Sutton continued. “We have parents and community members with a broad array of talents who are dedicated to offering their expertise to ensure the prosperity and preservation of this institution. We see the joy in life here at St. Mary’s School for the families blessed to be a part of it and we want that to be available for generations to come.”

As we continue our nationwide search for a new principal to lead this new chapter of St. Mary’s School, we are encouraged by the response we have had so far and will keep our community updated once a decision has been made.

As the hopes and dreams that parents and faculty have for St. Mary’s are materialized and put into action, one of the main goals within our school now is fundraising. We are proud to report that we have already hit over half of our yearly goal of $80,000 and are looking forward to the St. Mary’s Annual Gala on April 27. We invite everyone from our community to join us that night as we celebrate and support St. Mary’s Canton.

We are encouraged by what our community has already done for St. Mary’s Canton and what we will continue to achieve as we all work together to see our student enrollment increase. There is a pure joy and happiness found within our school that is truly a gift from God. Our staff is thankful for the opportunity to see our mission and vision come to life in our students and look forward to the years to come and the new students who will enter into these four walls.

Policy event draws crowd

By Colleen Miner
Diocesan director, Respect Life Office

Albany - More than 1,200 people from around the state recently gathered to discuss public policy at an annual Legislative Day.

New Yorkers for Constitutional Freedoms (albanyupdate.com), a state organization that educates and activates evangelical Christians regarding matters of public policy, and New Yorker’s Family Research Foundation (newyorkfamilies.org) co-sponsored the annual event on March 19 at the Empire State Plaza Convention Center. The theme was “A New Season: Where Do We Go From Here?”

“New York has entered a new season of governmental authority,” said event organizer Jason J. McGuire, executive director of NYCF. “Political power resides with those who do not share our values, and it’s reflected in the tragic turn our state is taking. By approving legislation like late-term abortion expansion, Gov. Andrew Cuomo and his allies have launched an all-out assault on the beliefs held by evangelical Christians and other socially-conservative New Yorkers. With objectionable proposals like paid surrogacy, legalizing prostitution and recreational marijuana under consideration, it is clear that too many Albany politicians intend to continue aggressively imposing their morally bankrupt agenda on the Empire State. In this new season, it is crucial that Christian voters provide a robust and effective voice of opposition.”

The day featured a variety of speakers and topics including Walt Heyer of SexChangeRegret.com and Garth Van Meter of Smart Approaches to Marijuana. Stephanie Woodward of the Center for Disability Rights spoke about physician assisted suicide, and Gianna Jessen spoke about her experiences as a late-term saline abortion survivor and prolife advocate.

Attendees also heard from elected officials Sen. Pat Gallivan, Sen. Daphne Jordan, Sen. Rob Ortt, Sen Chris Jacobs, and Assemblyman Andy Goodell. They shared the need to get back to family principles and to take our state back with logic and reason, and that RHA was the darkest day in this legislative body. During a panel discussion, Kathleen Gallagher of the New York State Catholic Conference and Kate Maloney of Students for Life spoke about the future of NY’s Pro-life Movement.

Woodward and Jessen, the two “disabled” presenters, shared their thoughts about being labeled “disabled.” Stephanie Woodward, a 30-year-old lawyer, who works with NY Alliance Against Assisted Suicide and uses a wheelchair, and Gianna Jessen, a 40-year-old who has cerebral palsy due to the saline solution that was meant to kill her, both embrace their “disability” with humor and joyfulness.

Woodward shared that when people approach her stating that they will pray for a cure, she answers, “I’m fine (in my wheelchair), please pray that my student loans are paid off!”

She urged people to make activities accessible and to respect the dignity of each individual, “do not group us all together.”

When she enters a church, she likes to participate where she wants. She dislikes when there is one wheelchair section.

“Our diversity is who we are,” she said.

Jessen said that she is a constant reminder of what people want to forget, especially those who work in the abortion industry, and she is often met with hostility.

“I survived abortion, I can survive Twitter,” she said.

Jessen stated that she is never invited to women’s marches and asked, “if abortion is a women’s right, where are mine?”

Jessen’s said her life has been a progression of miracles: she was not killed by the saline abortion, the doctor was late to Planned Parenthood that day, the nurse called an ambulance to have her transported to the hospital when she was accidentally born alive, then she was adopted by loving parents.

“I am here for His services and I’m having fun,” she said.

She paused to offer advice to post-abortive women: If you hear that voice saying “Your sins are too big, you are condemned”, then you are listening to the wrong voice!

At the end of the day, rolls of “Repeal Late-Term Abortion Act” petition signatures were delivered to Governor Cuomo’s office. Over 20,000 of those signatures were from the Catholic Action Network. More deliveries will be made throughout the legislative season.

National Trust: One-third of Canadian churches to close

TORONTO (CNS) - A third of Canada’s Christian architecture, some 9,000 churches, will close in the next 10 years, according to the National Trust for Canada.

“It's definitely going to be a bad thing,” architect Roberto Chiotti told The Catholic Register. “You know, it's our theology in stone.”

There are approximately 27,000 places of worship across Canada, which means about one-third of them will be sold, demolished or abandoned over the next decade. But it is not all bad news. In the Archdiocese of Toronto, for example, no closures are anticipated. The archdiocese has built nearly a church per year since the turn of the 21st century.

“The Archdiocese of Toronto is blessed to have a large immigrant population engaged in their faith locally, part of the reason we celebrate Mass in more than 35 languages each week,” said Neil McCarthy, archdiocesan spokesman.

That’s a stark contrast to Nova Scotia, New Brunswick and Quebec, where large numbers of churches have been shuttered or are slated to close.

Dozens of Catholic and Protestant churches in small towns across Western Canada and in southwestern Ontario also have been closing for years.

Under canon law, final decisions about closing Catholic churches, amalgamating parishes and finding other uses for buildings belongs solely to the bishop.

For mainline Protestant denominations — largely white, elderly and nonimmigrant — finding new uses for old churches is now a cross-country consulting job for Kendra Fry.

“It is bad news from a faith community perspective, in that it indicates a lack of commitment to faith communities as the locale where people identify community,” she told The Catholic Register.

Fry works for Regeneration Works, a joint project with the National Trust for Canada. If a building has served the community for a century or more, Fry believes it should continue to bring people together — whether for concerts, yoga, child care or charitable work.

Catholics have not been beating a path to Fry’s door because canon law and Catholic culture make it difficult to imagine a Catholic parish as part of a shared-use building.

Environmental Stewardship

Fasting is most often associated with food. We know that Jesus fasted in the desert. However, recently during this Lenten season, we hear Pope Francis call us to an “ecological conversion.” He quotes St. John Paul II as having encouraged and support an ecological conversion in his papacy. When we view fasting from this vantage point, we realize that there may be other ways to fast.

One of the ways is to fast from wasting food. Three realities cause us to stop and consider that this may be an important way to observe the call to Lenten fast. “First, it is estimated that 30-40 percent of the food grown doesn't' make it from farm and factory to fork. Secondly, for nearly 800 million people, hunger is a condition of life. And thirdly, food waste would be the third largest emitters of greenhouse gases globally.

Wastage occurs early in the supply chain, rotting on farms or spoiling during storage or distribution. Retailers reject food based on bumps, bruises, coloring — aesthetic objections of all sorts. There are many other places where food waste happens. Regardless of the reason, the outcome is much the same. Producing uneaten food squanders a host of resources — seeds, water, energy, land, fertilizers, hour of labor, financial capital — and generates greenhouse gases at every stage, including organic matter lands in the global rubbish bin.

“Taken from Drawdown, Ed. by Paul Hawken”

While the challenge of major intervention is on the retail and consumer levels, we may ask, “Is there anything that we can do on a personal level?” Here are a few suggestions:

(1) Purchase and cook only what you can eat or share with a neighbor, (2) Check on the dated items to see if it reads: SELL BY or BEST USED BY, (3) move dated items and leave eggs to the front of the refrigerator.

Fasting from wasting can not only bring about a “springtime of one’s soul” but a springtime for our neighbors and all of God’s Creation.

Jesus fulfills God’s promise of something new

On this Fifth Sunday of Lent, we need to perk up the ears of our hearts when God says to a despondent people in exile to look forward, not backward, as though this moment in which they hear Isaiah’s prophecy is really the first day of their lives. He tells them to forget the past, for He has decided to do something new! This prophecy is really a veiled reference to the Father’s decision to send His Son, Jesus, as Messiah. By his sacrifice, He will bring them out of their vicious cycle of sinning. How sad that hundreds of years later, when their descendants saw their Messiah in the flesh, they failed to remember Isaiah’s words that God was doing something new!

In the light of that first reading, we can better understand that mercy is the “something new” in the message of Jesus. The Gospel describes what incredible mercy Jesus shows towards the woman in today’s Gospel. There is no question that she is guilty as well as the man involved. The law in Deuteronomy clearly says they should both be put to death by stoning.

For the time being, the Pharisees have placed the woman squarely in front of Jesus, hoping to trap him into saying something incriminating. By writing on the ground, Jesus cleverly shifts the attention to the sins of those about to stone her to death. Here, indeed, is “something new.” and the Pharisees immediately see that Jesus has placed them in the trap! The elders among them are the first so acknowledge that Jesus has won the test, and they are the first to drop their stones and slink away. The others follow, leaving Jesus alone with the woman. Without excusing her sin, He merely tells her she is free to leave, but to “sin no more.” What surprises and delights us here is that the Lord has placed something new into the Law – He now includes MERCY – mercy is now a part of justice!

The second reading on Fifth Sunday brings us to a death sentence on the state of California. The state of California has been granted reprieves. As the governor, I encourage your readers to contact their legislators. Or go to www.nyscatholic.org and click take action.
NEW YORK (CNS) — The hard-hitting, fact-based drama "Unplanned" (Pure Flix) dares its viewers to confront the reality of what happens when a baby is aborted.

That’s an effective strategy on the part of co-writers and directors Chuck Konzelman and Cary Solomon, not least because the peculiar institution of our day thrives on concealment, muddled thinking and Orwellian euphemisms. But it also means that this emotionally unsparing film is not for the casual moviegoer of any age.

Adapted from the eponymous 2011 memoir by Abby Johnson (Ashley Bratcher), "Unplanned" traces her steady rise to become one of the youngest Planned Parenthood clinic directors in the country. Yet it also shows how she gradually became uneasy about the organization’s marketing of abortion.

The conversion in her outlook reaches a dramatic climax when Abby is asked to assist a doctor performing the procedure and witnesses via sonogram what it actually involves. As the child in the womb tries to move away from the suction tube and medical containers quickly fill with blood, this scene may prove as upsetting for the audience as it was for Johnson.

Her new stance is welcomed by Abby’s husband, Doug (Brooks Ryan), and parents Kathleen (Robin DeMarco) and Mike (Robert Thomason), all of them pro-life. It also brings reconciliation with some of the protesters she once considered adversaries, including 40 Days for Life activists Shawn (Jared Lotz) and Marilisa (Emma Elle Roberts).

Unsurprisingly, Abby’s ornery former superior, Cheryl (Robia Scott), views her change of heart in a different light. Once Abby’s mentor, infuriated Cheryl becomes the moving force in a lawsuit against her ex-protege as well as against Shawn. Kaiser Johnson steals this portion of the picture playing Shawn and Abby’s unflappable lawyer, Jeff.

While Cheryl is clearly the villain of the piece, the script avoids demonizing all those associated with Planned Parenthood. Nor does it present all pro-life activists in a positive light. Whether this sense of balance will give "Unplanned" any traction with supporters of legal abortion is open to question, however.

Given that the full horror of slaughtering the unborn is on display here, the parents of older teens will have to decide whether the informative value of Abby’s story outweighs its disturbing elements. Those also include a sequence showing the sufferings Abby endured after taking RU-486 in the second of her own two abortions.

The film contains gruesome images of abortion and dismembered fetuses, much medical gore, a mild oath, a few crass expressions and a vague sexual reference. The Catholic News Service classification is A-III — adults. The Motion Picture Association of America rating is R — restricted. Under 17 requires accompanying parent or adult guardian.
Our pope, our environment; actions needed

Pope Francis has declared October to be an Extraordinary Missionary Month, during which the Synod on the Amazon will also take place. During October, Pope Francis wants us to reflect on themes from his Encyclical on the Environment, Laudato Si’ and take swift action to protect our common home.

Pope Francis chose his papal name to honor St. Francis of Assisi, patron saint of those who promote ecology. Pope Francis describes “the poor man of Assisi” as “a man of peace, a man of poverty, a man who loved and protected creation” – in other words, a person who embodies integral ecology.

Integral ecology, or an integrated approach to environmental and social justice as being required and the bond between humans and the natural world. Everything is connected. An integration of our concerns for people and our planet while recognizing the systemic links between ecology, equity and justice through the sciences, arts and humanities.

Pope Francis says, “It must be said that some committed and prayerful Christians, with the excuse of realism and pragmatism, tend to ridicule expressions of concern for the environment. Others are passive; they choose not to change their habits and thus become inconsistent. So what they all need is an ‘ecological conversion,’ whereby the effects of their encounter with Jesus Christ becomes evident in their relationship with the world around them. Living our vocation to be protectors of God’s handiwork is essential to a life of virtue; it is not an optional or a secondary aspect of our Christian experience.” Encyclical Laudato Si’, 217

Pope Francis’s attention to creation is not a new focus for the papacy. Especially since 1891, when Pope Leo XIII began the modern tradition of Catholic Social Teaching, many popes have reiterated that care for creation is a moral responsibility and a core commitment of the Christian faith.

In recent decades, Catholics have come to find a deeper appreciation of God’s good gift of creation. Additionally, many recognize that the care of creation is fundamentally connected to other Christian commitments like the protection of human life, defense of human dignity and particular care for the poor. These are all things that the work of missionaries in the developing lands strive for each day. Coming to understand that everything is connected is the key.

Please remember “The Society for the Propagation of the Faith” when writing or changing your Will.

Funeral Mass celebrated for Sister Ann Marie Striegl

A Funeral Mass for Sister Ann Marie Striegl, was celebrated March 30 in Redeemer Sisters Chapel, Huntington Valley, Pennsylvania.

Her service as a certified and licensed social worker spanned more than 40 years at Catholic Charities in the Diocese of Buffalo (1975-2015) and Ogdensburg (1973-75). She previously spent 10 years in the field of education at St. Mary’s, Potsdam and Holy Angels School, Buffalo; Christ the King, Atlanta, Georgia and Grey Nun Academy, Yardley, Pennsylvania.

In 1983, she was named Religious Educator of the Year, Holy Angels Parish. She was a recipient of a Pro Vita Award from Bishop Kmiec, Bishop of Buffalo in 2010. Sister Ann Marie was a frequent contributor to The Buffalo News, authoring several articles for the "My View Column" on a variety of topics and in letters to the Editor. She also had an article published in Sisters Today. "Remembering - During My Annual Retreat."

Daughter of the late Joseph and Helen Wyborski Striegl, she was born October 27, 1934 in Buffalo. Ann Marie attended St. Gerard School and graduated from Sacred Heart Academy. She received a B.S. in Elementary Education from D’Youville College in 1957, entering the Grey Nuns of the Sacred Heart that same year. She was awarded an MSW from Loyola University, Chicago in 1973.

In addition to her religious congregation, she is survived by her sister Margaret Piniewski, and nieces and nephews. She was predeceased by her parents; a brother, John; and a sister-in-law, June Striegl.

Donations in her memory will be gratefully received by the Grey Nuns of the Sacred Heart, 14500 Bustleton Ave., Philadelphia, PA 19116-1188 or at www.greygun.org.

IHC IN ACTION

(Left) Immaculate Heart Central tenth grader Bryce DaFoe is registered to take the Plunge in Sackets Harbor on April 6 at the Sacket's Harbor Boat Launch, in memory of his father, Charlie Zeltwanger Jr. DaFoe is currently accepting donations to raise funds for local Special Olympics Athletes and is on his way to meeting his goal of $2,000. (Middle) Upon graduating from Immaculate Heart Central School's Intermediate Building (6th grade), Loryne G. Nebie received the “Presidential Award.” To congratulate her on her accomplishment, her family rewarded her with some monies. With the monies, Loryne funded the drilling of a well in Serekeni, a small village in the West African nation of Burkina Faso. She visited the village over Christmas Break with her family to see the impact she's had on the village. The well cost was $5,000 (U.S. Currency). Before the well, the village members had to walk up to three miles a day just for clean water. (Right) Seventh-grade student Brendan Mercer participates in Immaculate Heart Central Jr./Sr. High School’s annual Retreat Day on March 27. The theme of the day was “Many Parts, One Body,” based on 1 Corinthians Chapter 12. The day's schedule consisted of ice breaker activities, faith enrichment projects, a service project, and Father Michael Gaffney concluded the school day celebrating Mass with the students. This year’s service project was creating Pinwheel Bouquets to support the Victims Assistance Center of Jefferson County, Inc.- Child Advocacy Center of Northern New York. Each individual pinwheel represents a victim of child abuse. The Child Advocacy Center set a goal of selling 730 pinwheels to support the 730 children served by the program in 2018.
