Pope: Africa trip planted new seeds of hope

VATICAN CITY (CNS) — Having gone to Africa as a pilgrim of peace and hope, Pope Francis said he hoped the seeds planted there by his visit would bear abundant fruit for everyone.

Following in the footsteps of evangelizing saints before him, the pope said he sought to bring with him "the leaven of Christ" and his Gospel, which is "the most powerful leaven of fraternity, justice and peace for all people."

Speaking to some 12,000 people gathered in St. Peter's Square Sept. 11, the pope recalled his fourth apostolic journey to Africa. He dedicated his general audience talk to a review of some of the highlights from his visit to Mozambique, Madagascar and Mauritius Sept. 4-10.

The pope said he wanted to "sow the seeds of hope, peace and reconciliation" in Mozambique, which had experienced two devastating cyclones recently and 15 years of civil war.

While the church continues to guide the nation along the path of peace, the pope made special mention of the Rome-based Community of Sant'Egidio, which had facilitated the mediation process that resulted in the nation's 1992 peace agreement.

"I saw that the patients were the most important thing" at the Sant'Egidio-run center, which was staffed by people of different religious beliefs, including the director of the hospital, who was Muslim, he said.

Everyone worked together, "united, like brothers and sisters," he said.

Reflecting on Madagascar, the pope noted how beautiful and rich in natural resources the country is, but that it is still marked by tremendous poverty.

He said he asked that the people there would be inspired by their "traditional spirit of solidarity" in order to overcome the obstacles they face and foster development that respect both the environment and social justice.
He knew I needed community

What I needed was community.
It was 2016, I had returned to my faith after more than a decade away only a year before. I was convinced of the fullness of truth found in the Catholic Church. I had developed a profound love of Christ in the Eucharist. But I was struggling with a lack of community.

I think it’s important for all of us to have people in our lives with whom we can discuss our faith – the moments of inspiration, the times we struggle and the concepts we learn. It’s especially important to me, an extreme extrovert who is energized by social situations, especially those during which big ideas can be discussed. And we all need people to pray for and who will pray for us and with us.

When I was a teen/young adult, finding a faith community was easy. There was always a youth group or a college Bible study to be found. Faith groups and Bible studies aren’t always available when you’re an adult. When they do exist, they don’t always fit into the hectic schedule of someone balancing a family and career.

Then something happened. There was a series of what other people might call “coincidences” that I believe were signs God was calling me to attend a Cursillo weekend. At first, I wasn’t sure I wanted to go. I didn’t know much about what a weekend entailed, and I’m a bit of a control freak (I’m always good company for me).

I found a group of people who love each other and the Lord. I found a group of people who pray for and support each other. I found out why God called me to be there.

He knew I needed community.

Consider the importance of the Creed

A few weeks ago, I traveled to Ticonderoga to join in the Jubilee Celebration in honor of Sister Sharon Dalton’s 50th Anniversary. Sister Sharon has served as principal of St. Mary’s School in Ticonderoga for the last 34 years. She has touched the lives of innumerable families in that village. Congratulations, Sister Sharon.

On my way home, I stopped for Sunday Mass at St. Joseph’s Church, Olmstedville. The pastor there is Father Philip Allen, who was my classmate during our seminary days at Wadhams Hall. He’s a good friend and always good company for lunch. After Mass, I was greeted by several parishioners who told me they were regular readers of this column. That was very special for me. So, I now send my greetings to you, folks of St. Joseph’s and again thank you for joining me each week in this column. I will now remember you as I write each week.

This week, I would like to take time to consider with you the Creed as part of the liturgy of the Mass. Whether the Nicene Creed or the Apostles Creed, the Creed is a most important part of the Mass. The Creed is more than a prayer. The saying of the Creed is a moment in which the whole congregation together declares before God and each other that they believe in God and the message of Jesus.

Each time we, Catholics, gather at Sunday Mass, in Churches all over the planet, we declare, “I believe in God,” Catholics all over the world, as they say the Creed, proclaim that their lives are profoundly influenced by their belief in God.

Today, I am writing to encourage you to realize how seriously important this reciting of the Creed must be for you. Some may wonder if we have to proclaim our belief in God every Sunday. They say that belief in God is obvious since we go to church.

Yet, since each day our decisions and actions are influenced by our faith in God, it is tremendously important that we announce and remember our belief in God, our readiness to make God an important part of each and every day. We cannot repeat our Creed enough times. It helps us remember and keep alive exactly who we are.

Today, I would like to urge you to take a moment to read the Creed slowly and in prayer so that you recognize exactly what you are saying each time you say the Creed at Mass. You will recognize how thoroughly and carefully our Church has developed this Creed. Each Sunday, as the Mass comes to the Creed, be alert to prayerfully remember your commitment to make God a part of your everyday life.

Each year on Easter Sunday, the Creed is changed into questions, similar to the questions used at the ceremony of Baptism. This presents a unique challenge – that we face the question of our faith and belief. Each one of us is faced by a precise question that causes us to remember, to again dedicate ourselves to God and be truly touched deeply by our faith.

These are those questions. “Do you believe in God, the Father Almighty, Creator of Heaven and earth?” “Do you believe in Jesus Christ, his only Son, our Lord?” “Do you believe in the Holy Spirit, the holy Catholic Church, the communion of the Saints, the forgiveness of sins, the resurrection of the body and life everlasting?” At this moment, as you read this you can shout, “I do.” Can you walk outside at this moment and shout, “I believe in God?”

The praying of the Creed at Mass each Sunday is meant as a question, a question of your beliefs and your readiness to accept God’s profound influence on your life today and each day.
Celebrating marriage, consecrated life jubilees

Editor’s note: The following is Bishop Terry R. LaValley’s homily for the Marriage Jubilees and consecrated life jubilees. Photos of that event will be in next week’s edition.

There is real value in combining our diocesan celebrations of Marriage Jubilees and of Jubilees for those who are living the consecrated life. There is much we can learn from one another’s vocation. For instance, consecrated religious remind married people of the primacy of God and of that which does not pass away. They introduce spouses and their families to a love for the Word of God, for which consecrated persons have more time and availability. Religious also have much to learn from married people. You, who are married, teach us about generosity, self-forgetfulness, sacrifice for others. For instance, in our families we learn life lessons from our parents such as what it means to “go without” for the sake of others.

Certainly, at a Jubilee celebration such as this, we look back through the years and thank God for blessings received. But, today isn’t just about reminiscing without giving much attention to what awaits us in the future. No, we continue to grow in holiness, to struggle, to learn, to give good witness. The journey isn’t over! The lifelong pursuit of happiness and joy continues.

At this Jubilee Mass, I invite you to join me in focusing on the role of God’s Holy Spirit in our lives as we journey into tomorrow and beyond. God, the Holy Spirit, has been that third partner in your marriage covenant, enabling you to remain faithful to your wedding vows, albeit for sure, not without struggles. The fruit of the Father and Son’s intense love is the Holy Spirit Who continues to strengthen our consecrated religious in living their religious vows.

I came upon a poem written by Ignatius of Latakia. It first caught my eye because of our relationship with Latakia, but the message is inspiring for this occasion:

Without the Holy Spirit:
- God is far away, Christ stays in the past
- The Gospel is a dead letter
- The Church is simply an organization
- Authority a matter of domination
- Mission a matter of propaganda
- Liturgy no more than an evocation
- Christian living a slave morality

But with the Holy Spirit:
- The cosmos is resurrected and groans with the birth pains of the Kingdom
- The risen Christ is there
- The Gospel is the power of life
- The Church shows forth the life of the Trinity, Authority is a liberating service
- Mission is a Pentecost
- The liturgy is both memorial and anticipation, Human action is defined

Yes, the Gospel is a dead letter with the absence of the Holy Spirit. Such a void will not sustain a consecrated religious or support a husband or wife in living his or her vocation. Vocations in marriage or in consecrated life will be dull, boring, uninspiring, unattractive. If there’s no difference between a sacramental marriage and living together, why bother? If there’s no difference between living the consecrated life and life in the fast lane, why sacrifice?

But the Gospel has the power of life! It must not be a dead letter. With the Holy Spirit our vocations are about new life and resurrection power. The risen Christ is here!

Where can we find the Holy Spirit? One of the most important places of encounter with God’s Spirit is in our relationships. Spouses: do you pray together? Do you share your faith, talk about God at the kitchen table, yes, even in the ballfield? Our children and grandchildren must see us pray and be expected to join in the experience. You see, ours is a personal, but never a private faith. The Spirit beckons everyone to be invited into our relationships. Do we talk about Jesus as much as we talk about politics, sports, our doctor’s appointments? God mustn’t be a distant bystander in our daily living. It’s never too late! It doesn’t mean becoming a “Holy Roller,” but it does mean we must not allow Jesus to become a stranger to us and our loved ones.

Religious, do you share your prayer experiences, how your faith challenges you and brings you peace and joy. Being a member of a community means more than living under the same roof. Clearly, all you celebrating jubilees today have encountered the Spirit of the Risen Lord. Never let Him go. I ask myself: Does my energy come from the Resurrection of Christ? Resurrection of the heart must happen every day prompting a continual rebirth of hope. You remember in Ezekiel the story of the dry bones and their coming to life. We listen in on St. Paul’s words to the Philippians: “That I may know Christ and the power of His Resurrection.”

There’s a real danger that our married and consecrated lives can become devoid of joy and hope as we become slaves of duty, merely functioning in our proper roles, not unlike the elder son in today’s familiar Gospel. In every life circumstance, make room for God’s Spirit.

Come Holy Spirit, fill the hearts of your faithful and kindle in them the fire of your love. Send forth your Spirit and we shall be recreated. Let us all open our hearts to the living hope that comes from the resurrection of Christ. The Church is born of hope. In our vocations, we contribute to the giving of a new momentum to faith that conquers our troubled world. Like the father, speaking to his troubled, elder son, “Everything I have is yours...we must celebrate and rejoice.” With the apostles, we proclaim: “He’s alive! He has risen. He appeared; we saw Him!” and that, my friends, makes all the difference in this world and in the world to come.

In a world today that seems tired, discouraged and even fearful, we re-member our God hasn’t gone anywhere. His Spirit continues to recreate whatever He touches. Congratulations and thank you Jubilarians, for your faith-filled witness of love. Surely, we would not be here today celebrating such milestones, if you had not welcomed the Holy Spirit into your lives. Don’t let Him go in these, most troubling of times. We are Christ-led, Christ-fed, Hope-filled! Thank you, Jesus, for your Spirit of peace and joy!
Tupper Lake native takes vows at Benedictine Abbey

SUBIACO, Ark – The profession of a Tupper Lake resident as a Benedictine monk took place in the Subiaco Abbey Church, located in Subiaco, Arkansas, Sept. 8.

During Vespers, Novice Jesse Bedore presented his written and signed petition to Abbot Leonard who then welcomed his public profession of monastic vows for three years.

Reflecting this change in his state of life, the Abbot assigned him a new name, Brother André. After three years, he will be eligible to make his final, perpetual vows.

Brother André comes from Tupper Lake, where he lived most of his life before coming to Subiaco. He is a graduate of Tupper Lake High School.

The profession ceremony had six parts. First, the novice made his request to become a monk. Second, Abbot Leonard addressed him in the name of the community. Next, Abbot Leonard showed him the Rule of St. Benedict and asked if he was willing to observe; he then asked the novice to express his commitment by answering questions.

In the fourth part, Novice Jesse then read the document of his profession, in which he revealed his new monastic name, Brother André. Then he showed the document to Abbot Leonard, signed it and gave it to him.

Next, the Abbot blessed the monastic habit and clothed him with it.

Lastly, the newly professed returned to his place in the community and Vespers continued.

Knights raise funds for charity

Each year the Knights of Columbus Councils and Assemblies in the Diocese of Ogdensburg unite as members of the Bishop Brzana Chapter to conduct a Charity Dinner-Auction to benefit Catholic schools, pro-life organizations and other worthy charitable, religious or educational causes.

Since its founding in 1999, the Chapter has raised approximately $110,000, all of which has been donated within the Diocese of Ogdensburg. The 2019 Dinner-Auction combined with gifts from councils and individuals raised $6,000.

Over the past several weeks Chapter President Bill Ose and other Knights presented donations to Champlain Valley Right to Life ($1,000), St. Anne’s Shrine ($1,000), Life Right of Watertown ($1,000), Camp Guggenheim ($1,000) and St. Bernard’s School in Saranac Lake ($2,000).

Cursillo creates community, spreads faith

By Jonathan Monfiletto
Contributing Writer

Cursillo means “short course in Christianity” in Spanish, but for those experiencing God’s presence during their retreat weekends, the short events have a big impact.

Ken Racette, lay director of North Country Cursillo, called Cursillo “experiencing God in your community” through encounters with yourself, with others, and with God.

With separate retreat weekends for men and women, Cursillo Weekends feature talks followed by time for participants to split up into small groups to share their thoughts on the talks. There are also prayer times, opportunities for Reconciliation, and Mass each day.

“Your grow in friendship with those people over the three or four days,” Racette said. “It’s a way that people experience God’s presence in themselves and in other people in a deep way.”

The next men’s Cursillo weekend is scheduled for Nov. 21-24 at Wadhams Hall, located at 6866 State Route 37 in Ogdensburg. The next women’s Cursillo weekend is slated for Dec. 12-15, also at Wadhams Hall. Those interested in participating can contact Racette by phone at (518) 578-3056 or by email at kracette1a@gmail.com.

Along with circulating brochures and giving pulpit talks at diocesan churches, Racette said those who have participated in past Cursillo weekends help spread the word by sharing their Cursillo experiences and sharing their faith with those around them.

Typically, he noted, people who are recruited are just beginning a relationship with God or returning to the Catholic faith after time away from church. Others are those who are already rooted in the faith and wish to hone their ability to share their faith and talk to others about God.

Though people generally attend a Cursillo weekend as a participant just once, they can continue experiencing the encounter with their faith that the weekend gave them by forming a small group with other participants of Cursillo.

“That’s really, for me, the strength of Cursillo,” Racette said, noting team members at Cursillo weekends encourage participants to gather in small groups with fellow participants on a regular basis — weekly or biweekly, for example.

Small groups expand on the Cursillo weekend through participants sharing about their prayer life, their relationship with God, what they are doing to learn more about God, and what they are doing to bring others closer to God.

“The whole point of Cursillo is evangelization,” Racette said. “First, we are evangelized ourselves on the weekend. Then, we try to reach out to people to bring them closer to God. Those small groups are very powerful.”

Several small groups can get together in larger groups called Ultreyas and continue helping one another grow closer to God. An Ultrea typically includes a sharing time, a witness talk from someone who has experienced a Cursillo weekend and wants to share their personal relationship with God, and a spiritual talk from a priest or deacon.

“That those are very powerful moments for people, both the speakers and the hearers,” Racette said of Ultreyas. “You have a small group community, and then the small groups come together and share their faith lives in a larger group community. Cursillo is all about friendship in Christ.”

Racette attended his Cursillo weekend in 1978 and has been a part of three iterations of small groups since then. The first included couples — men and women who attended their respective Cursillo weekends together. Another group was comprised of couples who lived in close proximity to one another and spent time each week praying together and sharing their faith as families.

When Racette retired and returned to the North Country, he found that Cursillo no longer had a presence in the Diocese of Ogdensburg. Along with several people interested in restarting Cursillo weekends, he attended a weekend as a team member to serve the participants there.

“Several guys wanted to get together and share in a deeper way,” Racette said, noting he formed a small group with those it’s always with the goal of helping all participants grow closer to Christ and each other.

When Racette sees new people coming to Mass, he will greet them after the first few times to get to know them and their story and tell them his own story. After a while, he talks to them about God and eventually about Cursillo weekends.

The idea is to express that Jesus is alive, not only in the sense of His resurrection but also in the hearts of those who have grown in their faith through Cursillo.

“It’s just a way of building friendship,” he said. “Once you start building a friendship, you can begin to talk to that person about expanding their relationship with God, and one way to do that is a Cursillo weekend. … You don’t have to start out by saying, ‘Oh, hi, I want to talk to you about Jesus.’ You just build a relationship with the person, and then Jesus comes up, sometimes by them. … That’s how you move from just not knowing a person to friendship to faith friendship.”

What’s a climate strike?

Our youth are stepping up to voice their concerns about climate change, and who better to advocate for change for their future and awaken the world to this plight. Our planet is facing extremes in weather, extinction of God’s creatures and health problems to name a few things that are happening. Pope Francis has long sought to engage young people, encouraging them not simply to be bystanders but protagonists for change.

In his recent post-synodal apostolic exhortation on youth, Christus Vivit, he called for a new “popular youth ministry” carried out with “a different style, schedule, pace and method” and which “goes out to those places where real young people are active, and fosters the natural leadership qualities.” Christus Vivit fits hand in hand with the call to action of Laudato Si’. “Young people demand change. They wonder how anyone can claim to be building a better future without thinking of the environmental crisis and the sufferings of the excluded.” (p13)

The school strike for climate, also known variously as Fridays for Future (FFF), Youth for Climate and Youth Strike 4 Climate, is an international movement of school students who take time off from class to participate in demonstrations to demand action to prevent further global warming and climate change. Publicity and widespread organising began after Swedish schoolgirl, Greta Thunberg, staged a protest in August 2018 outside the Swedish Riksdag (parliament), holding a sign that read “Skolstrejk for klimatet” ("School strike for the climate").

School strike for Climate has announced two major global strikes for September 2019. One on Sept. 20, three days before a UN emergency climate summit being held in New York, and one with 350.org and Earth Strike the following week, on the Sept. 27. Let us support these efforts with our prayers and actions.

In June, 64 individuals were commissioned by Bishop Terry R. LaValley to serve as lay ministers in their parishes. These people join the ranks of nearly 2,000 other lay ministers who have come out of the Formation for Ministry program over its nearly 30-year history.

Without the financial assistance the program receives from the Bishop's Fund, along with local parish support, the program could not exist.

The Formation for Ministry program is a two-year course of study requiring students to take 10 courses, including scripture, moral theology, Catholic social teaching, spirituality, church history, ecclesiology, sacraments, Creed and the Eucharist.

In addition to those classes, students also commit to attending several Saturday workshops and retreats designed to prepare them to engage in parish ministry. The program provides an opportunity to deepen faith and learn to share gifts in ministry.

For men discerning entrance into the permanent diaconate program, Formation for Ministry is the first step.

This year, the program will undergo a major shift. Because of geography and busy schedules, it is sometimes very challenging to commit to the class schedule. Starting in October, the classes will be offered through Boston College's Crossroads program in an online format. Yet that personal contact and sharing together is essential to the program's success.

The workshops and the days of retreat and reflection will continue to happen so the candidates can get to know each other, share faith together and hone skills for ministry. After the first year, candidates in the program choose an area of ministry to specialize in: ministry to the sick and elderly, liturgical ministry, youth ministry and parish outreach ministry.

Now more than ever, the need is great for lay people to step up and live out the baptismal commitment to transmit the faith in the marketplace of everyday life.

This program equips lay people for this mission. With the support of the Bishop's Fund, the future of the program looks bright.
Pope to new bishops: Roll up sleeves, get dirty

VATICAN CITY (CNS) – New bishops need to prepare for a life filled with God's surprises, with daily plans that change at the last minute, and, especially, for a life dedicated to spending time with God and with the people, Pope Francis said.

"God surprises us and often likes to mess up our appointment books: prepare for this without fear," the pope told about 130 bishops attending a course for bishops ordained in the past year.

Bishops exist to make tangible God's love for and closeness to his people, the pope told them Sept. 12. "But one cannot communicate the closeness of God without experiencing it every day and without letting himself be infected by his tenderness."

Pope Francis told the new bishops that no matter what else is going on in their lives and ministries, they must spend time in prayer.

"Without this intimacy cultivated daily in prayer, even and especially in times of desolation and dryness, the nucleus of our episcopal ministry splits apart," he said.

Without a strong relationship to God, the sower of every good seed, a bishop's own efforts will not seem worth the effort, he said, and it will be difficult to find the patience necessary to wait for the seeds to sprout.

Closeness to God also leads directly to desire for closeness to God's people, the pope said. "Our identity consists in being near. It is not an external obligation, but a requirement that is part of the logic of gift."

"Jesus loves to approach his brothers and sisters through us, through our open hands that caress and console them, through our words pronounced to anoint the world with the Gospel and not ourselves," Pope Francis said.

A bishop cannot simply proclaim his closeness to the people, the pope said. He must be like the good Samaritan: seeing people in need rather than looking the other way, stopping to help, bandaging wounds, taking responsibility for them and paying the cost of caring for them.

"Each of these requires putting yourself on the line and getting your hands dirty," Pope Francis told the bishops.

"Being close to the people," he said, "is trusting that the grace God faithfully pours out on us and of which we are channels, even through the crosses we bear, is greater than the mud we fear."

And, he said, a simple lifestyle is part of a bishop's mission because it is the first and clearest way to proclaim with integrity that "Jesus is enough for us and that the treasure we want to surround ourselves with is made up of those who, in their poverty, remind us of and represent him."

Bishops must spend more time visiting parishes and other communities than they spend at their desks, and those visits should not be super-formal affairs, he said.

"What comes to mind are pastors who are so groomed that they seem like distillate water that has no taste," he said. They must truly listen to people, rather than surrounding themselves with "lackeys and yes men," he added.

Bennett’s War

NEW YORK (CNS) – Loosely based on the case histories of real-life wounded veterans, writer-director Alex Ranarivelo’s endearing sports drama “Bennett’s War” (Forrest) is a portrait of courage in the face of adversity. Well-suited to an audience of grown-ups, the film may also pass muster with the parents of older teens willing to overlook some barracks-style talk in the dialogue.

Victimized by a mine in Afghanistan, where he served with the Army’s Special Operations motorcycle division, Sgt. Marshall Bennett (Michael Roark) is warned that any further damage to his leg might leave him permanently crippled. So he abandons the hope of reviving his impressive pre-deployment reputation on the motocross track, and settles down to a job in the motorcycle repair garage owned by his friend Cyrus (Ali Afshar). This arrangement satisfies his formidable wife Sophie (Allison Paige) who, as the mother of a newborn infant, doesn’t want her husband confronting any more danger than he’s already taken on in the military. But the call of racing is strong and, when combined with the lure of prize money that could potentially save his father Cal’s (Trace Adkins) failing farm, it becomes irresistible.

As Marshall tries to overcome Sophie’s initial vehement opposition, Ranarivelo presents a pleasing portrait of family life in which spouses try to balance their sometimes-conflicting interests and outlooks. Add to that respect for the armed forces, an easy-to-root-for hero and the occasional religious flourish—Sophie gets the clan back to their once habitual practice of saying grace—and “Bennett’s War” emerges as a crowd pleaser.

On the topic of faith, there’s a slightly odd but mildly amusing exchange in which, surprised to see Iranian-American Cyrus bless himself, Marshall says, “I thought you were a Muslim.” “Only when my grandmother is watching,” Cyrus answers.

Those not addicted to racing may find the competitive sequences pitting Marshall against various rivals a bit lengthy. And the overall pace is somewhat languid. But the movie’s heart is in the right place and its story arc, though it forms a predictable parabola, will leave viewers feeling cheered.

The film contains stylized combat violence, scenes of marital sensuality, a couple of mild oaths and much crude and crass language. The Catholic News Service classification is A-III—adults. The Motion Picture Association of America rating is PG-13—parents strongly cautioned. Some material may be inappropriate for children under 13.

Reflecting on the sin of greed

The major theme in today’s Scripture is greed. Greed deliberately confuses our wants from our needs. Greed has unlimited wants.

One of my father’s favorite ways of describing his growing up on a farm was this: “We were poor, but we didn’t know it!” In other words, his family knew the difference between “wants” and “needs.” While Americans live on a comfort scale well above the Third World, there is growing concern that the gulf between the “haves” and the “have nots” in our country has grown to the point of alarm. Greed for profit has seriously injured the rights of workers. If we are on the wrong track, then Catholic social teaching would suggest that we change direction.

How does God judge greed? The prophet Amos, while speaking in the eighth century B.C., might just as well be voicing God’s judgment on our present-day society. It is just not acceptable to Him! In fact, greed seems to be one of the sins that anger God the most. It’s a question of good stewardship. When greed rules our lives, we make decisions that often deprive the poor.

Although the story in today’s Gospel about the unjust steward who is about to be fired is somewhat confusing, the main lesson is very clear: “The children of this world are more prudent in dealing with their own generation than are the children of light.” How come? Because this steward, seeing he is about to be fired, reduces the debts of all his master’s debtors. In so doing, he makes his master look good, and makes friends of those debtors he had cheated by giving back to them from his own commission! Even though he lost his job, he neatly provides for his future state of unemployment. He was a very clever man.

God so wishes that his followers, in spreading the Kingdom, would imitate the cleverness of the worldly! One saintly medieval commentator, Cornelius à Lapide, suggests that we, His sinful, struggling disciples, would show some cleverness in securing our salvation. How? By praying earnestly every day for our brothers and sisters in purgatory, so that when we die and are in that place of purification ourselves, those for whom our prayers have earned Heaven may return the favor, and beseech the Lord to shorten our stay there and bring us immediately to eternal joy. That, according to à Lapide, is the meaning of “Make friends for yourselves of the mammon of dishonest wealth, so that when it fails, you will be welcomed into eternal dwellings.”

Not a bad interpretation! It all fits with today’s second reading in which St. Timothy urges both public and private daily prayer, so that everyone can live his or her life according to the teaching of a God who loves justice.

We are blessed to have Jesus with us

By Mary Beth Bracy

“Do you know who you are?” a priest asked me awhile back. “You are a beloved daughter of the Father.” How many of us think of ourselves as God’s beloved child? In a world that focusses so much on our weaknesses and failings, it is easy to forget that we have a Savior who loves us so much He died for us, and remains with us always in the most Holy Eucharist.

Sadly, according to the recent Pew Research Center poll, it is clear many have forgotten, or never realized, the awesome gift of Jesus’ Presence among us – body, blood, soul, and divinity – in the Blessed Sacrament. This is a clarion call to those of us who do know and believe He is here to share that “In your presence is fullness of joy” (Psalm 16:11).

At the beginning of a ре-treat I recently made, I was feeling burned out. I went before the Blessed Sacrament and happened to open a prayer book someone left in the pew. There was a card inside with the Scripture verse: “Cheer up, don’t be afraid. For the Lord your God has arrived . . . He will rejoice over you in great gladness; He will love you and not accuse you. Is that joyous choir I hear? No it is the Lord Himself exulting over you in happy song.” (Zephaniah 3:16-18) During this time of Adoration, I was reminded that our heavenly Father was happy I was seeking Him and His will. This made me rejoice, since for some time I prayed daily for the following lines from the song “Smile,” sung by the Carmelite Sisters of the Most Sacred Heart of Los Angeles: “Just to see you smile, just to dance with you a little while. Just to hear Your heart sing.” Wondering what I could do to please Him, my heart was gladdened at the thought that God was simply pleased with my humble presence and attempt to serve Him. Had I not taken the time to go before Our Lord, I would have never experienced this beautiful grace.

Lately, however, I’ve noticed this isn’t a rare occurrence. As it says in one of my favorite passages from Isaiah: “As a young man marries a virgin, your Builder shall marry you, and as a bridegroom rejoices in his bride, so shall your God rejoice in you.” (61:5) In the Psalms we also read, “The Lord takes delight in his people.” (149:4a) Is there anything more consoling than the realization that God loves us so much He remains with us in the Holy Eucharist and desires a personal relationship with us? As Ven. Archbishop Fulton J. Sheen proclaimed, “The greatest love story of all time is contained in a tiny white Host.” The world’s best kept secret is that the Mystery of our faith, Christ Jesus, is here in our midst! His love is always waiting for us in our Catholic churches.

We are so blessed to have the personal presence of God in all of our Catholic Churches, and Adoration of the Blessed Sacrament in many of them. Are we willing to commit to spending time with Jesus to pray for our families, Church, and world?

St. Mother Teresa of Calcutta writes: “Every Holy Hour we make so pleases the Heart of Jesus that it will be recorded in Heaven and retold for all eternity. It opens up the floodgates of God’s merciful Love upon the world. Adoration of the Blessed Sacrament is the best time you will spend on earth. It will make your soul eternally more glorious and beautiful in Heaven. A Holy Hour of adoration helps bring everlasting peace.

May we visit our Lord in the Blessed Sacrament often and work that He may be adored, so that all will have the opportunity to bask in the rays of His presence. Let us delight in this amazing gift of His love and share the good news that Jesus is here with us in the Holy Eucharist with others!

Preparating for Extraordinary Missionary Month

Pope Francis has set October 2019 as an Extraordinary Missionary Month to foster greater awareness of mission ad gentes and to animate the missionary transformation of Church life and pastoral activity. The theme of the month is “Baptized and sent.”

The following is an excerpt from missio.org on missionary charity.

Baptized and Sent to Africa…
Where those who are sick are provided loving care at 6,500 Catholic hospitals and clinics, where 19,000 young men are preparing to be priests, to uplift the poor, celebrate the Sacraments, reach out to children and families and comfort the sick and dying.

Baptized and Sent to Asia…
Where 6 million children receive an education from Religious Sisters in more than 15,000 Catholic Church-run schools.

Baptized and Sent to Latin America…
Where catechists travel to remote areas to bring the Good News of God’s Great Love to families there.

Baptized and Sent to the Pacific Islands…
Where 3,500 religious bring the Lord’s mercy and peace to those in need of so much.

Baptized and Sent to Europe
Where new churches are being built to welcome faith communities, renewed after years of persecution.

We are Baptized and Sent! Pray for the Church’s worldwide missionary work!

‘Trust Truth’ series brings faith, reason to a local bar

By Amanda Conklin
Contributing Writer

CANTON – Two priests walked into a bar. While this is the start to many jokes, this scene was actually the start of many of the Trust Truth evenings in Canton.

The brainchild of Seth Conklin and Josh Parker, parishioners of St. Mary’s in Canton, with the help of their pastor Father Bryan D. Stitt, the Trust Truth series was formed out of a desire for more. These two young adults were searching for more fellowship and to go deeper into the faith — in particular to explore the relationship of faith and reason.

“Growing up [I had] the idea that faith and reason opposed one another,” Parker said. “This led me, as a teenager, to question whether or not the existence of God could be eventually disproven by science.”

He didn’t persist in those beliefs, though.

“When I was introduced to the rich intellectual tradition of Christianity (and Catholicism specifically), I was, in a sense, transformed by the logical arguments made that reason does not compete with faith, but rather is completed by it,” he said. “Trust Truth attempted — I would say successfully — to articulate and reinforce the validity of this ever-important paradigm shift.”

Early in the planning, the organizers knew they had to meet the people where they were, not only philosophically but also physically. So, it was decided that the series would not take place at the church or school. The Stadium Sports Bar was decided on for a location.

The original hope was for 10-15 adults to gather and hear a speaker, followed by a discussion. The expectations were far surpassed when around 30 people showed up to the first session, with the crowd growing in the weeks following. The biggest crowd was around 50, which led to a packed house.

“If I ever doubted that people want to be challenged to think about the Catholic faith and enjoy being together, I can think of any of our six sessions,” said Father Stitt. “It was such a joy to have people young and old, married and single, Catholics and Protestants, even believers and atheists discussing the presentations with charity and joy.”

To help attract people from all vocations, free childcare was also offered during the series at St. Mary’s School.

Five of the six presentations and Q&A sessions were recorded and are available to listen to at www.cantoncatholics.com/homilies
