Items from local churches head south

CARTHAGE — It all began with an entry in eNotes submitted by Father Donald J. Manfred that began, "Items for Use in Parishes: First come, first served!"

St. Henry's Church in Natural Bridge had religious items available at the "low, low price of picking them up!" Following the closing of St. Henry's, many of the religious items needed new homes. Thanks to Margaret Woods, bookkeeper at St. James Minor Church in Carthage and some inspiration from the Holy Spirit, many local items will soon find new homes in churches in New Mexico, including one church recovering from a fire.

Priesthood is a gift, not a job, pope says

VATICAN CITY (CNS) — Being a priest is not a job or fulfilling an employment contract but is a gift from God that should be contemplated and treasured as such, Pope Francis said.

Those who turn ordained ministry into an occupation "lose the heart of the ministry, lose the gaze of Jesus who looked upon all of us and told us, 'Follow me,'" he said Sept. 19 during morning Mass at the Domus Sanctae Marthae.

The pope focused his homily on the day's first reading in which St. Paul writes to Timothy (1 Tim 4:12-16), "Do not neglect the gift you have."

Ordination is a freely given gift from the Lord, the pope said; it is not a job or "an employment contract" in which one "must do" something, "Doing is secondary," he said. First and foremost, "I must receive this gift and safeguard it as a gift and from that — in the contemplation of the gift — everything else springs."

When ordained ministry is not seen and treasured as a gift, he said, "deviations" emerge, starting with "the worst ones, which are terrible, to the more everyday ones that makes us base our ministry on ourselves and not on the gratitude of gift and love for he who gave us this gift, the gift of ministry."

Effort, intelligence and "also a bit of shrewdness" are needed to safeguard this gift properly, he added.

The pope also briefly commented on the day's Gospel reading, Luke 7:36-50, in which Jesus corrects his host who has forgotten to perform the customary rituals associated with welcoming a guest. Jesus instead praises the "sinful woman" who showed Jesus "great love," including by using her tears and hair to bathe and dry Jesus' feet.

The pope said the Pharisee hosting Jesus was a good man, "but he had forgotten the gift of kindness, the gift of coexistence, which is also a gift. These gifts are always forgotten when there are some underlying motives, when I want to do or achieve something."
These parables show how God loves us

The Gospel readings for the last few Sundays have centered on the parables of Jesus. Today, I would like to share with you some thoughts about Jesus’ parables.

It is important to keep in mind that these parables are stories – brilliant stories crafted by Jesus to teach us, the disciples of all ages. These incidents did not happen. Jesus wanted to teach his disciples about God and the important of our relationship with the Lord. These parables are about us, also. When we understand this, we realize more about how God wants to enter our lives. This is our faith. This is grace.

Christians have been reading and discussing these parables from the time of Jesus. Interestingly, many college literature courses include the reading of a couple of Jesus’ parables – obviously, not to teach religion, but to investigate good literature. Let us consider a few examples of these parables.

First, let us consider the stories of Jesus and the Lost Sheep.

The Lost Sheep – in this parable, Jesus tells a story about a unique shepherd. This shepherd is willing to leave many sheep and go searching for a stray, one lost sheep. When he finds that sheep, he is so happy, he celebrates with his neighbors. I believe an ordinary shepherd would not do this. He would worry something might happen to the main group of the flock. Now we know that in his parables, Jesus wants us to see God. God is willing to search for us if we stray.

I once wondered why God might leave all those righteous to search for the stray. That was because I thought I was among the righteous. As I got older, I began to realize that often I was the stray. I was the one who separated myself from God. I was the one who often failed to live well. Now, I realize I am very grateful to God, who is willing to search for me, who is anxious about me. God is ready to reach out to help me change my life and find the Lord's peace and love.

The Prodigal Son – I am certain you remember the story. Jesus tells us about this compassionate father whose younger son demands his inheritance while still young. The son then lives badly and wastes everything. He then repents and returns home. And this compassionate father in the story runs out to welcome him and welcomes him home and celebrates his return.

Reflecting joy, Christ to the nursing home

By Jessica Hargrave
Contributing writer

OGDENSBURG— At St. Joseph’s Home in Ogdensburg, there’s a light that shines down the halls, into the private resident rooms and into the chapel. That light is Father Richard S. Sturtz.

A staple of the facility, Father Sturtz sees beyond the dementia and chronic illness, offering words of comfort and sparking smiles from residents.

A resident of Ogdensburg, Father Sturtz, who is 88 years old, ministers to his neighbors at the nursing home saying Mass, anointing the sick, offering counsel and just adding joy to the lives of those at the home, residents, visitors and staff alike.

“Welcome to the only chapel in the diocese with air conditioning,” joked Father Sturtz, opening Mass on Aug. 18 at the nursing home. He was answered with laughter erupting from his faithful listeners.

In addition to St. Joseph’s Home residents, visitors also attend Mass at the chapel, eager to hear the beloved priest preach the word of God. Father Sturtz delivered a homily that dug into “faith seeking understanding.”

His ministry continues after Mass, as he checks in on residents, and staff in the cafeteria. “What are you up to? Why are you leaving the table?” he asked one resident, as he spotted a friendly, yet confused face. “You walked away from all that good food.”

Father Sturtz then gently guided the resident back to her seat.

“Thank you so much,” she said gratefully.

“Caring and understanding are both popular words used to describe Father Sturtz.”

“Father Sturtz then gently guided the resident back to her seat.

“No matter where he sees you, he says hello and says something nice,” said Lucretia “Pete” Smith.

Fellow retired priest and nursing home resident Monsignor Harry K. Snow said having Father Sturtz as a Chaplin and resident at St. Joseph’s Home is a blessing.

“He’s great with visiting with everybody and knows everyone’s names,” Msgr. Snow said. “That’s quite a gift and makes people feel important.”

A native of the North Country, Father Strutz was born in Lowville on Jan. 16, 1931. As a young man, he attended seminary at College of the Holy Cross in Worcester, Massachusetts, Wadhams Hall in Ogdensburg, and Theological College in Washington, D.C.

He returned to the Diocese of Ogdensburg in 1956, when he became a professor and vocations director at Wadhams Hall, a position he held for the next 26 years. From there, his assignments included pastor in AuSable Forks, Black Brook, Morrisville, Treadwell Mills, Schroon Lake, and Olmstedville. He retired to his current home at Notre Dame Cathedral in Ogdensburg in 2014.

His ministry didn’t end with retirement, though. He said he has always known he was called to hospital ministry. That calling led him to become the chaplain at St. Joseph’s Home.

“I really love my people here,” Father Sturtz said. “Many like to hear a joke every now and then. And to see the smiles on their faces, it’s a very rewarding ministry. I’m in excellent health, thanks be to God, so the fact that I can do this at 88 is great, and I’ll do it for as long as I can.”

He adds that besides visiting and chatting with residents, he likes frequenting the facility’s rehab center.

Humbly, Father Sturtz said he can’t take all the credit for the positive environment at St. Joseph’s Home. He calls the facility an outstanding nursing home with staff who provides excellent care, “I would be very happy to spend my last days here if that’s the Lord’s will.”

Mass is celebrated at St. Joseph’s Home Monday through Friday at 10:50 a.m. and Sunday at 11 a.m.

Monsignor Whitmore, Thank you Msgr. for all you do! It’s been 18 years since your brought us together.

Thank you and may God bless you and your service to others.

~ Deacon James and Christine Chaufty

QUEST FOR PRISTS

WOuld you pray for a priest each day?

O Jesus, Eternal High Priest, live in (name a priest), act in him, speak in and through him. Think your thoughts in his mind, love through his heart. Give him your own dispositions and feelings. Teach, lead and guide him always. Correct, enlighten and expand his thoughts and behavior. Possess his soul; take over his entire personality and life.

O Mary, Immaculate Conception, Mother of Jesus and Mother of priests, pray and intercede for (…)

Amen.

Serving on scene with emergency responders

By Deacon Kevin Mastellon
Contributing writer

It is a scene you have witnessed or viewed from afar. Perhaps it is a fire that claims property and lives. Or it is an automobile accident that results in lives lost. Or an incident in which an officer dies in the line of duty.

The first responders: the police, the emergency medical services, the volunteer firemen and fire police all have important but often troubling tasks to perform. They are called upon to bring calm to chaos; to save lives even in challenging circumstances; to assess the damage and, too often, to make notifications of death.

Father Christopher C. Carrara says, “First responders develop protection. Farmers develop calloused hands to enable them to touch things that are hot or pointy and not get hurt. Officers become calloused too, not in a negative way, to defend against tragic or gruesome situations. They either learn it (develop protection) or suffer greatly from it. We know from psychological studies that those types of critical incidents multiply and become cumulative.

So, one can suffer from stress by being exposed over-and-over again. After “X” number of cases, individuals might hit overload.”

This department chaplain is available to help the officers through those troubles. Father Carrara and Father Shane M. Lynch are appointed chaplains for various police, fire and emergency services departments in the western end of the diocese. Father Lynch, who is pastor of parishes in Gouverneur, Edwards and Star Lake, is also a chaplain in the Federal Bureau of Investigation. Father Carrara is pastor in Morristown, Hammond and Rossie. He is also the Diocesan Vicar for Clergy, as well as Director of Vocations and Director of Seminarians.

The diocese has chaplains in a variety of settings. Some are employed, others volunteer. Chaplains are generally attached to a secular institution such as a hospital, prison, military unit, school, labor union, business, police department, fire department, university or fraternal organization. They can be a cleric, consecrated religious, a lay representative of a religious tradition or, in some cases, a lay member of the organization.

Father Lynch’s interest in law enforcement started when he was young. He took a leave of absence from seminary studies and had received an invitation to the police academy when he chose to return to his formation as a priest. But his interest never waned. A year after ordination to the priesthood, while serving in Malone, he was invited to become chaplain to the Malone Police Department and Franklin County Sheriff’s Department.

It was the fire service that drew Father Carrara’s attention. He was a junior fireman in the Selden New York Fire Department on Long Island and eventually became a lieutenant in the department and an Emergency Medical Technician. He is a member of the Morristown Fire Department and serves on one of the department’s ambulance crews.

Sheriff James Lafferty asked Father Carrara to become the first chaplain of the Jefferson County Sheriff’s Department in 1994. Fathers Carrara and Lynch now both serve as chaplains in the department.

The two priests cite presence as the hallmark of successful chaplaincy. “Nobody is going to see the chaplain as a resource unless they know who they are. I mean that’s first and foremost,” Father Lynch said. “They are not going to come to someone they don’t know and someone who has not shown them that they care and are there for the right reasons.”

Early in their chaplaincy ministries, both priests participated in “ride-along” tours with officers. During those rides, the chaplains learned what to do, and not to do, during police investigations while simultaneously building rapport with the officers.

“Immediately upon arriving at a scene, I get briefed by the officers in charge,” Father Carrara said.

Depending on the circumstances, Father Carrara said, he is there to pray over the victim and support the victim’s family. He’s also there to be a resource for the first responders. “I go to every first responder who is there. My style is to introduce myself to everyone. It’s called ‘flight deck ministry.’ In other words, be present to the people where the planes land.”

Ultimately, the priests agreed, their presence to victims, families and to the men and women on the line as first responders will earn the respect and support of the uniformed personnel.

“The law enforcement group is very tight knit. They are very protective, cautious,” Father Carrara said. “Once they get to know the chaplains and trust them, they are seen as a chaplain. Eventually, you have to be careful because officers will trust chaplains enough to let them go anywhere on a scene, but that is not always the best idea.”

As chaplains to the departments they officiate at weddings, baptisms and funerals for many of the personnel they now consider friends. If necessary, they are also ready to counsel those who are approaching that “overload.”

“A rule of the chaplain and others who respond to critical incidents is to alleviate, mitigate the adverse effects of those incidents so people can continue their work in a healthy way,” Father Lynch said.

Father Carrara believes he and Father Lynch provide a valuable service to the first responders. “When police or firemen retire, they carry the burden of service with them,” Father Carrara said. “A chaplain may be able to mitigate the effects by just talking with them.”

Editor’s note: Deacon Ronnie Gingerich, Lowville, is also a chaplain. He serves first responders in Lewis County. Deacon John Drollette is retired from the Plattsburgh Police Department. He is not a department chaplain but has been available as a resource to first responders in need.

Father Don, we are blessed to have you as our parish Priest. We enjoy your sermons & presence.

Priests bring Seton Catholic ‘closer to Jesus’

By Patricia Jenkins
Contributing writer

PLATTSBURGH – Parents, teachers and students at Seton Catholic Central School say the priests who minister at the school have a profound impact.

Ron Garrow, father of Seton Catholic fourth-grader Lauren, was happy to share his feelings about our current and former priests at the school.

Lauren started at Seton when she was 4. “The nuns and the priests have made a lasting impression on her,” Garrow said.

He said his family chose Seton because they understand how important it is to have their daughter exposed to faith.

The priest’s presence in the school made an impact not only on Lauren, but also on her father. With the help, advice and encouragement of Father Timothy G. Canaan during Lauren’s preparation for First Communion, Garrow received his Confirmation at the Easter Vigil that year.

“Father Tim, Father Scott Seymour, Father Kevin McEwan, Msgr. (Dennis) Duprey, and Father (William) Reamer have a special place in Seton,” Garrow said.

“They bring us all closer to Jesus,” Lauren added.

“Thank you to all,” both Garrows said. “You have our family’s utmost respect and Christian love for your service.”

Lauren said she loves all the priests at school, their prayers and their blessings.

Father Reamer is a prominent figure in the lives of the students at Seton. Not only does he make frequent appearances in the halls of the school, but he also attends the students’ sporting events as often as he can and plans to attend their annual hiking prayer in October.

According to Asst. Principal Andy Bilow and parent/teacher Christine Boule, “The students notice that he is there for them.”

Father Clyde A. Lewis and Father Guy F. Edwards are also affiliated with the school.

This appreciation of the school’s priests is echoed by both parents and students at the school past and present, from Pre-K to alumni: Priests have made a tremendous impact in the lives of all at Seton Catholic Central.

With Grateful Appreciation to

Environmental Stewardship

Autumn’s call to go let
As we continue to celebrate the Season of Creation (Sept. 1 - Oct. 4), we praise God for the magnificent blaze of autumn foliage. We also know that soon after this display, the trees begin to let go of their leaves. While we can joyfully praise God in the midst of these beauties, it may be much more difficult to let go of them. We know that this process is essential for the new growth in the spring, but it is still a challenge to give up those colors! What might we learn for our own lives from this pattern of letting go that God has placed in the natural world?

During this Season of Creation, we are called to become aware of what is happening to our natural world and the consequences for all life on the planet. We are called to look more deeply into the causes of the catastrophic events that we are experiencing from wildfires, major flooding, rising sea levels and draughts.

Ninety-seven percent of climate scientists agree that carbon emissions from fossil fuels play a major part in these changes. They have been predicting these consequences for decades. The change in climate causes clear threats to international peace and security. The growing tensions over resources and mass movement of people are affecting every country on every continent. If we as humans have been part of creating this crisis, the good news is we can also be part of the solution. It is not about blame, but it is about what can we do about it now that the facts are in.

What can I “let go of” today that can bring new life for tomorrow? How about letting go of that plastic shopping bag? Fifty years ago people were very resistant to letting go of their paper bags. But look what has happened in 50 years.

If we adopted single-use plastics out of convenience, what would it cost us to change to reusable bags out of a moral responsibility to “our care for our Common Home?”

‘Bringing the love and mercy of God’ to the sick

By Suzanne Pietropaoli
Staff Writer

MALONE — “When we serve the sick, we serve Jesus. We must not fail to help our neighbors, because in them we serve Jesus.”

These words of St. Rose of Lima, spoken 400 years ago, are very much alive for Father Michael J. Jablonski, parochial vicar at St. André Bessette Parish in Malone. Most Sunday afternoons, Father Jablonski can be found at the local hospital, and any day of the week he responds to the needs of parishioners who are ill or homebound.

Since coming to Malone last September, Father Jablonski has focused considerable time and attention on this aspect of priestly ministry – a practice he developed in his previous assignment at St. Peter’s Church in Massena.

“There I was assigned to work with pastoral associates Sister Maureen Sweeney and Julia LaShomb,” the priest explains. “They were great at knowing who needed attention, and they introduced me to a lot of wonderful people – in the hospital, at home, sick folks, older folks. I really enjoy the older folks. They are honest and open.”

Father Jablonski notes that “having elderly grandparents living with us while I was growing up made it easier for me to relate to the elderly. Also, I enjoy reaching out to them. Going into their homes, I find that everyone has a life history, which they like to share.”

And this jovial priest, with his degree in history and a heart for the needs of those in front of him, is always ready to hear and appreciate their stories.

But his ministry to the sick is not confined to the homebound.

“We always have parishioners in the hospital, sometimes more, sometimes less,” Father Jablonski explains. “So, we respond to emergency calls, but also, I go there each week, check the patient list, and offer to visit individual patients. I always approach respectfully; I don’t barge in. Most say, ‘Yes. Come in and visit.’ But some do not want that yet, so it is important to ask. There can be a lot going on: fear, people fallen away from the practice of the faith, misunderstanding of what the Sacrament of the Sick really is. So many people still seem to think it is only for those taking their last breath. That prevents them from seeking out the sacrament. So I just let the Lord lead me to the folks I should visit.”

Word-of-mouth is also an important source of information for Father Jablonski.

“Someone will come up to me and let me know that their mom/dad/friend can’t come to church anymore but would like to see a priest,” he said. “I am always glad to get these requests and follow up on them. From time to time, I speak from the ambo, asking folks to let us know about people who are confined to their homes and in need of the sacraments of Eucharist and Reconciliation. Anyone who is facing surgery, or is seriously ill, is especially in need of the Sacrament of the Sick.”

Father Mike has high praise for the team of parishioners who make regular, often weekly, visits to bring Communion to those unable to come to church.

“Sue Hughes and the team actually maintain home visits to bring the Eucharist,” he points out. “Right now there are 46 people on the visitation list. The volunteers let me know when someone is ill and needs to be visited by a priest outside of my regular seasonal rotations. And the people I visit are so grateful! How they light up at God’s love and mercy, especially in the sacraments!”

The priest relates some amazing examples of such graces at work. One of them was a woman with Alzheimer’s who no longer spoke at all.

“After I anointed her,” Father Jablonski recalls, “she said to me, clear as day: ‘I am so glad you came to see me. Thank you.’ Once I was ministering to a man who was dying and ended up talking to his son for an hour. The younger man had fallen away from the Church, though he never stopped praying – thank God. He was upfront, honest, and sincere. His grandma was native, so he had the habit of gratitude. A lot happened in that hour. I heard his confession and he came back to the Church.”

Bringing people closer to Christ amid their pains and sufferings continues to inspire this priest.

“At the end of a visit, seeing that they are at peace and feeling loved and cared for is awesome,” he said. “Each has the experience of receiving the sacraments, and they just glow. Their souls come to life again! Then, too, the Church is touching their families at the same time. We are able to make inroads, and hopefully some of those families that are touched in this way will come back.”

Father Jablonski acknowledges that, when he was ordained in May 2017, he did not expect that this ministry to the sick would become such a large part of his life. Yet, he says, “This has been a happy and fulfilling part of my priesthood. The elderly population is increasing, so bringing the love and mercy of God to them in the sacraments is very important. It also gives us another way to reach the younger people in their families, to connect them with the Church. So, I did not expect this before ordination. But I am doing it and I love it!”

Items from closed churches going to New Mexico

By Eileen Greenwood
Contributing writer

CARTHAGE — It all began with an entry in eNotes submitted by Father Donald J. Manfred that began, “Items for Use in Parishes: First come, first served!”

St. Henry's Church in Natural Bridge had religious items available at the "low, low price of picking them up!" Following the closing of St. Henry's, many of the religious items were still in very good condition and needed new homes.

The eNotes entry that appeared this past Summer caught the attention of Margaret Woods, a bookkeeper for St. James Minor Church in Carthage, who felt the urge to act. Included in the ad were items such as Stations of The Cross, Statues of the Sacred Heart, The Infant Prague, Blessed Mother and St. Joseph. In addition, there were also several padded kneelers, pews and two altars, one with a tabernacle.

Woods knew of someone in New Mexico who just might welcome the sacramental items. She made contact with her sister Maria, and Maria’s husband Deacon Kenneth Quade, who live in Alamogordo, New Mexico.

“When I saw the ad from Father Manfred, the Holy Spirit told me to call Maria,” Woods said. “I knew how grateful the people would be.”

It took very little time for Deacon Kenneth and Maria to respond with excitement! Yes, they would love to receive those items for several small parishes in the area they are serving in New Mexico. The items would be welcomed and used by several parishes, including a church which had previously burned.

Woods began a mission to help.

Various items from churches that have closed in the diocese of Ogdensburg are currently being collected by Woods, who plans to drive to New Mexico with her husband and the truckload of items. It is a solution that benefits both the recipient and the giver. These church pieces are not just garage sale items, but many have emotional and historical meaning to parishioners of the parishes donating them.

Woods mentioned that when St. Rita's church closed, several statues from the church were returned to the families that donated them. One statue, the Sacred Heart of Jesus, has been restored and is being sent to New Mexico along with a typed, laminated description of where the piece originated and how it had been used. In this way, the historical and emotional value of the piece is preserved and goes with it to its next home.

Deacon Kenneth Quade, brother-in-law to Margaret Woods, served in the Air Force and then studied to be a Deacon in New Mexico. He plans to serve for 10 years in the parish, where they raised their family. He is currently in his fourth year in Alamogordo, New Mexico.

Margaret Woods and her husband, Greg, plan to pay the cost of driving the truck to New Mexico themselves. Considering the amount of work in planning and carrying out this mission. The couple welcomes donations to offset the cost. Donations could be sent to Margaret Woods at St. James Minor Church in Carthage. They also ask for prayers for safe travel.

The Catholic Daughters of Court Dr. Tom Dooley #2183 would like to thank our chaplain, Rev. John R. Yonkovig, for his dedication to our court and our parish. He inspires all who meet him with his energy, creative ideas, and life-changing homilies.

Workshops, retreats offered to parishes, groups

Office of New Evangelization, Young Adult Ministry: ‘Your Bishop's Fund dollars at work’

By Marika Donders
Director, Office of Evangelization

Quite often, I will get asked to do a parish workshop, or a retreat, or just travel to an outlying parish to meet with a parish leadership team to discuss opportunities for evangelization. This is the favorite part of my job as Director of the New Evangelization. The question often arises: So how much will this cost the parish to have you come visit or offer a workshop or a talk? My answer is always the same: it has already been paid for. This is your Bishop's Fund dollars at work.

So, what type of workshops are available for parishes? It really depends on the requirements of the parish. I am always happy to prepare a new talk or workshop that meets specific requests or needs that arise. At the same time, I also have an arsenal of workshops and talks that are suitable for any parish.

For example, every parish would like to be more hospitable to visitors and regulars alike in order to reach out to the community. Therefore, one option is hospitality workshop entitled HOSPITALITY: More than Coffee and Donuts. The thing with hospitality is that it is often deals with the little things that we overlook: things like using insider language, assuming people who have sat in the same pews for years actually know each other, or if someone didn't show up for mass one Sunday, would anyone wonder where he was or if she was okay? Hospitality isn’t rocket science, but it also doesn’t happen automatically. It might actually be harder, because we are dealing with people, and there is no single right answer or silver bullet. It required hard work and intentionality and it can always be done better.

Another set of workshops, The Gifted Disciple, parts I and II, looks at the gifts, or charisms, we have each received at baptism for the building up of the Church. Do you know what your gifts are and are you using them to help others come to know the love of Christ? Is your...

Young Adults from around the diocese participated in World Youth Day in 2016. The event was held in Krakow, Poland. The diocesan participation was organized by Young Adult Ministry, a Bishop's Fund Appeal ministry.
A look at the rich man and the poor man

There are two characters who dominate the Gospel this week—a very selfish rich man named Dives and a very humble poor man named Lazarus.

The scene opens on the street in front of Dives’ front door. There lies the beggar, Lazarus, in tattered clothes that scarcely cover his open sores.

The door opens, and the well-fed guests of Dives emerge, laughing loudly as they depart from their daily banquet. Then Dives comes out. Having bid good-bye to the last guest, he decides to take an evening walk.

Like his guests, Dives steps over the beggar, not even looking at him. He doesn’t kick or abuse him. He just doesn’t pay any attention.

The next scene is some years later. In the upper right, we see Lazarus in heavenly glory, courted by the angels, reclining at table with the patriarch, Father Abraham.

In the lower left, we see Dives, in the torments of hell, looking longingly at the heavenly feast in the distance.

Why is Dives in hell? Not because he is rich, for Jesus, in telling the story, never condemns him for that.

Why, then? Because he never thought to share his riches with this poor beggar who lay outside his door day after day. He never offered him some of the leftovers, never inquired about his health, never offered him employment.

What a difference he could have made in the life of Lazarus. He might have gotten to know him better and given help to Lazarus’ wife and children. Who knows? They might even have become friends!

In the first reading, the prophet Amos paints a similar picture of the wealthy rulers of Israel, lying on their beds of ivory, and drinking wine from bowls, completely oblivious to the near collapse of the kingdom.

Again, God is condemning their indifference, their selfishness, their lack of discipline, and their disobedience to His commandments.

As Pope Francis has repeatedly urged us, our world is in crisis. We all must develop a new boldness in sharing in love both our material goods and the spiritual riches of our precious Catholic faith.

New Evangelization and Young Adult Ministry

Pastor aware of your gifts so that he can ask you to assist in a way that will bear the greatest fruit?

It is when we get to use our gifts, that it brings out the greatest joy in us (and joy is infectious, and that joy will draw others to Christ).

Other talks and workshops include things like the Spirituality of Leadership, situating leadership in the context of faith and tradition; Evangelization and Apologetics which look at the obstacles and objections to both these disciplines and how we might work through these hurdles with some practical do’s and don’ts.

There are seasonal talks such as LENT: Spring Cleaning for the Soul or topical talks such as Social Media and Technology, which is a presentation for parents and grandparents about these new digital tools in our children’s hands and pockets.

In addition to these talks and workshops, I also facilitate retreats, days of reflection and other opportunities to pray, connect with Jesus and reflect on our own discipleship and call to holiness. These can be offered for small groups, such as a women’s prayer group or bible study group, campus ministries or young adults, but especially for parish staffs and volunteers.

When is the last time that your parish staff closed the office and had a day away? We cannot give what we do not have, and so often our parish staffs or volunteers are so busy giving of themselves with their daily to-do lists, that they forget to remain rooted in the love of Christ, who sends us on mission.

It is His work and His mission, and we must remain in Him in order to be fruitful.

Another aspect of my office focuses on Young Adult Ministry for those in their 20s and 30s.

To this end we have offered a Young Adult Retreat at Guggenheim this year, which we hope to expand on in the coming year, as well as promoting young adult groups and events for around the diocese. In this capacity, I also promote the World Youth Days pilgrimage for Young Adults 18 years and older.

The next World Youth Day is in Lisbon, Portugal in 2022. If you are or will be a young adult, keep this pilgrimage opportunity in mind.

Other than workshops, talks, ministry to Young Adults, the Office of the New Evangelization offers resources, collaborates with other departments such as Formation for Ministry, Faith Formation and Family Life and plans and promotes events around the Diocese through the publication of eNotes, promoting the North Country Cursillo movement, and other opportunities for forming missionary Disciples who go out to evangelize the North Country.

If your parish or group would be interested in hosting a workshop, talk or retreat, please contact Marika Donders at Diocesan Office of Evangelization by email: mdonders@rcdony.org or phone 315-393-2920 ext. 1380.

Thank you for your generosity the 2019 Bishop’s Fund Appeal.

Speaker: Found fetal remains shows abortion’s ‘inhumanity’

JOLIET, ILL. (CNS) – The discovery of the remains of over 2,200 aborted babies at the rural Illinois home of a deceased abortionist “tears off the mask of ‘choice’ and reveals the inhumanity of abortion to all of us,” said Eric Scheider, executive director of the Chicago-based Pro-Life Action League. “Even the most ardent defenders of abortion admit how disturbing it is to contemplate this kind of stockpiling of fetal remains,” he said after a prayer vigil outside of the Will County Coroner’s Office in Joliet Sept. 19. “Let this be a moment for all of us to reflect on the violence and injustice of abortion, and commit ourselves to finding better solutions to our personal and societal challenges than to tolerate violence against the most innocent and vulnerable of our brothers and sisters,” Scheider said. The fetal remains were found Sept. 13 at the home of Dr. Ulrich “George” Klopfer, who died Sept. 3. He had performed abortions in three clinics in Indiana — Gary, Fort Wayne and South Bend — since the 1970s but had his medical license revoked in 2016 after innumerable infractions. Indiana Attorney General Curtis Hill Jr. and Illinois Attorney General Kwame Raoul are working together as Hill’s office coordinates an investigation.

Catholic students mix faith and activism at climate rally

WASHINGTON (CNS) — A few hundred Catholic school students from the Washington Archdiocese took their cue, literally, from Pope Francis when they joined thousands of mostly young people at the climate change march in Washington Sept. 20 behind the banner with his words: “Hear both the cry of the earth and the cry of the poor.” The phrase is from the pope’s 2015 ecology encyclical, “Laudato Si’.” “We’re following the pope’s example,” said Perry Wargo, a science teacher from Elizabeth Seton High School, a girls school in Bladensburg, Maryland, pointing to the banner quoting the pope. He led a group of 48 students from his school, joined by dozens more from eight Catholic high schools and one elementary school in the Washington area taking part in the midday march and rally urging government and business leaders, and everyone, really, to take action to stop climate change. The march, like dozens more that occurred around the country and the world Sept. 20, took place three days before world leaders planned to gather at the United Nations for a climate summit.

Pope: Culture of care is essential for the common good

VATICAN CITY (CNS) — With so many changes and huge technological advancements in the field of medicine, health care must always be at the service of the whole individual, including a supportive relationship between patient and medical professionals, Pope Francis said. People facing illness must be accompanied “conscientiously, with intelligence and heart,” recognizing their dignity and fragility, he said Sept. 20 during an audience with members of the Italian Federation of Medical-Surgical and Dental Associations. “By its definition, medicine is serving human life,” which sees the integral whole of the person, including their spiritual-material and individual-social aspects, he said. It is precisely because of their belief in this truth that they are rightly concerned about the “hidden dangers today’s medicine is exposed to,” he said. They must resist temptations — led in part by policies making it legal — to use medicine to support a possible desire for death by the person who is ill, providing assisted suicide or euthanasia,” the pope said. Such choices are not expressions of the person’s freedom when they include the possibility of “discarding” the ill or the false compassion of helping people hasten their death, he said.

Religious liberty and DACA highlight court's new term

WASHINGTON (CNS) – The upcoming Supreme Court term – which starts Oct. 7 – will offer plenty of cases that Catholics will be paying close attention to including: the status of the Deferred Action for Childhood Arrivals and a number of religious liberty cases.

The court also has a lot of hot-button cases in the wings that it hasn’t decided yet if it will take them up such as: a Louisiana abortion law requiring abortion providers to have admitting privileges at local hospitals or if a city or state can require religious adoption services to place children with same-sex couples despite faith-based objections.

The court will look at a consolidation of three DACA cases. President Donald Trump has been wanting the high court to overturn appellate court rulings that have kept in place the DACA program initiated by President Barack Obama in 2012, which has protected nearly 700,000 people brought to this country as children, commonly known as “Dreamers.”

Without action from the high court, the lower court rulings have been kept in place, blocking Trump’s 2017 order to end the program where qualifying DACA recipients receive a work permit and get a reprieve from deportation and other temporary relief.

Federal judges who have blocked ending the program have said the Trump administration needs to provide a clear explanation of why the program should end.

The U.S. Conference of Catholic Bishops in 2017 called the cancellation of DACA “reprehensible” and said it caused “unnecessary fear for DACA youth and their families.” The USCCB, along with several Catholic groups, organizations and religious orders, have since called for a solution to help these young adults.

Elizabeth Murrill, solicitor general of Louisiana, writing Sept. 13 in scotusblog, a blog about the Supreme Court, said: "The federal government should prevail in the DACA cases for one straightforward reason: DACA is unlawful. Courts should not – indeed, cannot – stop the executive from rescinding a plainly unlawful edict that the government never had the power to issue in the first place.”

The DACA cases will be argued Nov. 12.

Another case of interest this year is about a school choice program in Montana that has barred all religious schools, including Catholic schools, from a state scholarship program.

In a Sept. 17 telephone briefing with reporters, Mark Rienzi, a law professor at The Catholic University of America and president of Becket, a nonprofit religious liberty law firm, said last year’s Supreme Court term was the “calm before the storm” as far as religious liberty cases go.

The court’s main religious case last term was the 40-foot Peace Cross, which it ruled in favor of, saying its historical context did not endorse religion. That ruling, Rienzi said, signals where the court is headed, with an emphasis on “fostering a society where people of all faiths can live together.”

In the upcoming term, he told reporters, the court has the opportunity to give clear answers on religious liberty issues, starting with Espinoza v. Montana Department of Revenue, where the court will decide if excluding religious schools, including Catholic schools, from a state scholarship program violates the First Amendment. Montana officials said they left out religious schools because of the state constitution’s Blaine Amendment, which bars public money from going to churches.

The case has a familiar ring, reminiscent of the 2017 case of Trinity Lutheran, a Missouri preschool that had been barred from receiving state funds for playground resurfacing using recycled tires because it was a church property. The court ruled it was unconstitutional to keep the school from using such funds.

Richard Garnett, law professor at the University of Notre Dame, wrote in scotusblog Sept. 17 that the Trinity case was "not really about recycled tires and safe playgrounds and was instead about vouchers, tax credits and scholarships for families who want to send their children to qualified, religiously affiliated schools,” adding that school groups and others filed amicus briefs while tire and playground equipment companies did not.

“Trinity Lutheran, like Espinoza, was about pluralism, opportunity and fairness in education. School-choice programs are growing and expanding across the country, but broadly interpreted Blaine Amendments often deter or block reform,” he added.
Letters to the Editor

Thank you for the potluck celebration

The ladies of The Assumption of Mary Church of Redford, St. James of Cadville, St. Joseph’s of Dannemora and St. Alexander’s of Morrisonville sure know how to have a potluck. Complete with music by the Back Roads Band, games, door prizes, a ton of food and especially a whole lot of friendship and camaraderie, these ladies, including myself, had fun.

Sponsored by the Catholic Daughters of America Court #2663, the Circle of Love Committee, this potluck dinner brought out over 100 ladies, including Sister Deepali Bankar, as well as Father Scott R. Seymour and Father Gilbert B. Menard.

Personally, I got to talk to some of my mother’s close friends from Dannemora. That was special, as Mom has been gone three years.

I met a unique person, Mary Wood Milne, originally from Altona, who used to double date with my Aunt Mae over 60 years ago! We had an interesting conversation. Mary is 90 years young and got a prize for being the most senior attendee.

I also got a chance to talk with Dave Couture, member of the band and my husband’s former co-worker. The Coutures lived next to my parents for eons. So many folks to visit with.

Change is never easy for any of us. But has anything changed? The folks of these four church communities still believe in the same God. He has not changed one iota and loves us all, every day for eternity. We all still believe in the power of prayer (these ladies have a powerful prayer chain), the calming effect of attending mass and that there is something more important than material things, budgets and meetings.

The power is in the people of the North Country who have come together through thick and thin and taken care of each other and those in need regardless of where they attend church.

Hats off to the organizers of this event and to Father Scott Seymour for managing four parishes. Thank you to all the priests who have been given a ton of extra duties. Your efforts have not gone unnoticed. God Bless.

Find healing and forgiveness after an abortion

To those who sit in silence:

Years ago I carried a dark secret, shame and guilt as I sat in the pew. During a Divine Mercy healing mission led by Father Timothy G. Canaan, I cried out how long Lord, will I ever be freed from this suffering and pain.

The Lord answered my prayers for a healing of what I thought was an unforgivable sin. That sin of abortion, which permeates the deepest part of the soul and sends shock waves to those around us.

I was truly blessed to receive His mercy, grace and especially forgiveness through the Sacrament of Reconciliation at the first Rachel’s Vineyard in our diocese. It was the beginning of a renewed gift and journey with Our Lord and Savior that continues even to this day.

This gift is for all to take and receive. He is waiting for those suffering the pain of loss due to a past abortion.

Don’t be afraid to accept His offer, come and receive His balm of healing. You are not alone. You are His and He is yours. Become what He intended for you, renewed in spirit.

The next retreat weekend is Friday, October 18 to Sunday, October 20.

For more information or to register, call or text 518-524-0774 or email cminter@rcdony.org.

Other retreat dates and locations are available. Learn more at www.rachelsvineyard.org

Father Don,
St. Stephen’s Parish, your Pastoral Council, and Brother Knights, appreciate your wise and loving council.

THANK YOU!
Funeral Mass celebrated for Sister Mary Nora Kelley

Hartsdale - A Mass of Christian Burial for Sister Mary Nora Kelley, RSM, was celebrated Monday, Sept. 23, 2019 at Marian Woods Chapel in Hartsdale.

Sister Mary Nora, a member of the Sisters of Mercy, died at Overlook Hospital, Summit, New Jersey, on Tuesday, September 17, 2019 at the age of 89.

She was born to the late James and Mary Kelley in Brasher Falls. She is survived by her brother James, a large extended family and her Sisters of Mercy.

Sister Nora was a joyful person and a gifted storyteller. She was a teacher and an elementary school principal. She taught at St. Catherine Academy in Bronx, NY for many years.

In lieu of flowers, donations may be made to the Sisters of Mercy, 150 Ridge Road, Hartsdale, NY 10530.

Mission discussion planned

MASSENA – Sister Debbie Blow and Sister Cindy Sullivan will discuss their missionary work in Nicaragua and Ecuador in a panel discussion, “Called to Mission: Two Sisters Share Their Stories.”

The event, part of the diocesan celebration of Extraordinary Missionary Month, will be held at 6:30 p.m. on Oct. 24 at Trinity Catholic School in Massena.

There is no charge to attend.

Sister Cindy served in Ecuador for over 40 years as a Sister of Charity of the Blessed Virgin Mary. Sister Debbie, a Dominican Sister of Hope, has led mission trips to Nicaragua with North Country Mission of Hope for 20 years.

NEW YORK (CNS) — The Latin motto from which the compelling sci-fi drama "Ad Astra" (Fox) takes its title assures us that, by persevering through difficulties, we can aspire to reach the stars.

So it's no surprise that this moody film's protagonist, astronaut Maj. Roy McBride (Brad Pitt), has a variety of challenges to face along his journey toward a possible reunion with his father, Clifford (Tommy Lee Jones).

A pioneer space traveler, Clifford disappeared 16 years before the near-future action of the film. He was commanding the Lima Project, an effort to search for extraterrestrial life from the outer boundaries of the solar system.

Now, with energy bursts from Neptune wreaking havoc on Earth and threatening the future of civilization, suspicion has arisen that Clifford—who has long been portrayed as a deceased hero—may not only be alive but may, in fact, be the cause of these cosmic disturbances.

Dispatched to outer space to send Dad a message, Roy undergoes a series of testing adventures while brooding on his emotional isolation and inability to maintain relationships.

He also ponders the conflicting evidence suggesting that Clifford was either a hero or a villain. His uncertainty, which the audience shares, helps to maintain suspense. So, too, does the fact that the real purpose of having him communicate with Clifford is to enable the authorities to pinpoint the latter's location and launch a deadly attack against him. Roy understands this—and is, consequently, emotionally torn about his mission.

By turns an epic and an intimate character study, director and co-writer (with Ethan Gross) James Gray's thoughtfully crafted film evokes numerous classic stories, ranging from Homer's "Odyssey" and Joseph Conrad's "Heart of Darkness" to Herman Melville's "Moby-Dick." And that's not to mention the psychological implication of a son's quest that may prove fatal for his father.

Gray and Pitt capitalize on Roy's verbal reticence to make "Ad Astra" richly visual, Pitt's eyes at times wordlessly but unmistakably communicating what his character is experiencing.

Such moments recall acting techniques that prevailed in the silent era.

The movie also features several brief scenes of distinctly Christian, Catholic-sounding prayer that will intrigue believers.

A pioneer space traveler, Clifford disappeared 16 years before the near-future action of the film. He was commanding the Lima Project, an effort to search for extraterrestrial life from the outer boundaries of the solar system.

Now, with energy bursts from Neptune wreaking havoc on Earth and threatening the future of civilization, suspicion has arisen that Clifford—who has long been portrayed as a deceased hero—may not only be alive but may, in fact, be the cause of these cosmic disturbances.

From a truly faith-filled community, thank you for your sacrifices and leadership. Your examples inspire us all to truly live the Gospel!

St. André Bessette Parish is blessed!
We cannot thank our priests enough

By Molly Ryan, Mission Office

The North Country Catholic honors our hard working, spiritual, joy-filled and always present priests every fall with an issue devoted to their unending efforts. Here in the Mission Office, we like to think that we honor them every day but being reminded to do so and showing our appreciation outright is always a good thing. We call to mind the peace and joy that we all can experience ing our appreciation outright is always a good thing. We watch them go about their work, joined by our spiritual, joy-filled and always present priests every fall to participate in the Missionary Cooperation program. God bless our priests here and everywhere. Let us like to think that we honor and to renew our own faith, nurture hope, and discover love.

The Mission Office would like to especially thank Bishop LaValley and our priests for their prayers and financial support of Mission appeals overseen through the Society for the Propagation of the Faith and Missionary Projects of the Diocese of Ogdensburg. We send prayers to those priests serving in Latakia, Syria and in Mollendo, Peru. As we are about to enter Extraordinary Mission Month, we send our prayers to all the Missionary priests who visit our diocese every summer to participate in the Missionary Cooperation program. God bless our diocesan priests who served in Mollendo, Peru, in their missionary zeal as they continue to hear about the fruits of their labor while there. How blessed we are today to have priests from around the world like India, Indonesia and the Philippines as they share their evangelizing spirit. Their journey with us through Christ is only made better by their experiences and world view. By our baptisms, we are called to Christ to be his missionaries. No one knows this better than our priests. Thank you so much for all you do. For all of us. All the time.

As the Holy Father, Pope Francis, one said of priest appreciation, “Challenges exist to be overcome! Let us be realists, but without losing our joy, our boldness and our hope-filled commitment. Let us not allow ourselves to be robbed of missionary vigor! ("The Joy of the Gospel").

God bless our priests here and everywhere. Let us appreciate them and never take for granted their dedication to our families and our spiritual well-being.

Suggested faith resources: Catholic podcasts

Editor's note: The following is an entry of a weekly blog written by Marika Donders, director of the Office of the New Evangelization. The blog can regularly be found at rcdnyn.org/evangelization/blog.

If you’re looking for good Catholic podcasts, here are a few I have been enjoying on my commute to and from work:

The Cordial Catholic: This is an interview-style podcast covering a wide variety of Catholic topics. It’s hosted by K. Albert Little. The host is a convert to Catholicism from non-denominational evangelicalism, and the interviews are all expounding on why he is Catholic and what it means to be Catholic. Recent interviews include a talk with Pat Flynn about Do Catholics have a personal relationship with Christ; an interview with Dr. Stacy Trasancos about Debunking the Science vs. Catholicism Conflict; and interview with Marcus Grodi about Why Become Catholic. The one with Marcus Grodi, host of the Journey Home Show on EWTN, was very interesting, since he is normally the one asking questions.

St. Dymphna’s Playbook: This podcast by Tommy Tighe, author of the Catholic Hipster Handbook, is about Catholicism and Mental Health. Tighe is a family counselor, and the podcast answers questions from listeners about how to deal with family members and friends who suffer from mental illness, approaches to different treatments, prayer, and about integrating Catholic faith with medical treatment of the illness. The podcast opens the conversation about mental illness and how we can assist in de-stigmatizing it and assist people in getting the help they need.

The John Allen Show: This is a brand new podcast and part of the Word on Fire Institute. The show airs twice a week to discuss news from the Vatican. John Allen is a trusted Catholic Journalist and is the editor of Crux. The first episode aired Sept.18, and covered the upcoming Synod for the Amazon. Allen gives the basic details of the story and then expounds on details of the story.

The Missionary Disciple Podcast: This is a podcast by Catholic Christian Outreach (CCO), a Canadian group whose mission is to evangelize students at university. CCO produces great resources for evangelization, such as the CCO Faith Studies Series. CCO is somewhat equivalent to FOCUS in the US. I started listening to the podcast in the summer, which means that they were on hiatus and re-running past talks from the Annual Rise-Up Conference. These talks were by such people as Father John O’Brien, Michael Dopp, Christine LaBrosse on various topics, such as overcoming challenges in the spiritual life and parish renewal. I am looking forward to new episodes to learn more about evangelizing college students and young adults.

Additionally, there are quite a few podcasts available with Sunday Homilies. Most of you are probably familiar with Bishop Barron’s homilies on the Word on Fire Podcast. At least two of our local pastors podcast their homilies: Father Bryan Stitt’s homilies can be found on the Canton Catholics website and Msgr. Robert Aucoin’s homilies can be found on the Madrid-Waddington Catholics site.
