Youth participate in parish ministry

LOWVILLE - Youth at St. Peter’s Church in Lowville, St. Mary’s in Glenfield and St. Hedwig’s in Houseville are taking active roles in ministry, and those roles are both helping the parish and helping the youth develop their faith.

Deborah Mullin, Faith Formation coordinator for the three faith communities, noted that teenagers from the communities are teaching and assisting with Faith Formation, serving as lectors, altar servers, technology assistants and musicians, and aiding with Vacation Bible Schools.

Pope: Change requires input of everyone

VATICAN CITY (CNS) - The world will not overcome the current crisis if only big businesses, financial institutions and the powerful have a voice, Pope Francis said.

“Everyone must be listened to. Everyone – those on the top, those on the bottom,” he said Sept. 23 during his weekly general audience.

“Getting out of this crisis does not mean brushing a coat of paint over the current situation,” he said.

“Overcoming a crisis means changing. And true change comes about with everyone, all the people,” who make up a community, he said to applause.

“Either together or it will not work,” he said at the audience, which was held in the San Damaso courtyard of the Apostolic Palace.

He continued his series of talks on “healing the world” by reflecting on the “principle of subsidiarity,” which emerged in church teaching in Pope Pius XI’s 1931 encyclical “Quadragesimo Anno” on the reconstruction of the social order.

Subsidiarity has been explained as balancing the many necessary levels of society — government, business, family, associations, etc. — and seeking the allocation of resources by higher levels of society to support engagement and decision-making by the lower levels.

Pope Francis said the principle works both ways: from top to bottom and from the bottom to the top, with all levels working in a cooperative, not competitive way, leading to greater unity and working for the common good.

CONFIRMED IN THE SPIRIT

Bishop Terry R. LaValley visited St. Alphonsus Holy Name of Jesus on Tuesday, September 22 to bestow the rite of Confirmation on local Catholic candidates from Tupper Lake, Saranac Lake and Malone. I’m thankful for ‘the now’

Each year, I am so impressed by our Priest’s Appreciation issue of the North Country Catholic. I am so pleased to discover the priests of my diocese, the Diocese of Ogdensburg, my brothers in this priesthood of Jesus, being honored in such a special way. I want to thank the people of the Diocese of Ogdensburg for recognizing and honoring their priests.

I hope that each parish has a Sunday dedicated to Priests’ Appreciation. I hope that you know just how much your priests love their mission to the Lord, Jesus. I believe that you know just how much your priests love your parish, their parish, and are always ready to care about you, the people of the parish.

I believe every Sunday should be a Priest Appreciation Sunday. They need it. Never be stingy with your gratitude. You show that gratitude with your involvement in your parish and by using well the opportunities you have to be Church. As we move forward, you, the people of a parish, will be more and more responsible for the life of your parishes. I am hoping this is the way you will find the unique happiness of being a Catholic during this rather difficult pandemic time.

Sometimes I find Gospel readings at a weekday Mass that I hadn’t thought of in a very long time.

Today, it was a reading from St. Luke. Jesus’ mother and brothers came to see Jesus but couldn’t reach him because of the crowd. Someone tells Jesus, “Your mother and brothers are standing outside, and they wish to see you.” Jesus replied, “My mother and my brothers are those who hear the word of God and act on it.”

Yes, winter will be here sooner than I’d like, but right now, we have a rainbow of colors to enjoy right outside our windows. Right now, we have beautiful warm days and cool nights. Right now, I’m healthy enough to get out of bed every morning and spend time with a family I love, go to a job I love and enjoy activities I love. Right now, I’m sitting in my humble, but warm and safe home, doing something I’ve always loved (writing) and hearing my wind chimes singing in the breeze.

Right now is pretty amazing!

Maybe it’s human nature, or maybe it’s because I’m still relatively young, but I often seem to forget that there’s no guarantee I’ll see tomorrow. I plan for it, but it’s not promised to me. My plans are not always God’s plans.

So, I’m trying this week (and hopefully into the future) to “enjoy the now.” I’m trying to be more grateful to God for the gifts I’ve been given in that now. And I’m thankful to the contributor who gave me that reminder. I pray we can all be thankful for the now together.

Being part of Jesus’ family

Every year, I am so impressed by our Priest’s Appreciation issue of the North Country Catholic. I am so pleased to discover the priests of my diocese, the Diocese of Ogdensburg, my brothers in this priesthood of Jesus, being honored in such a special way. I want to thank the people of the Diocese of Ogdensburg for recognizing and honoring their priests.

I am hoping this is the way you will find the unique happiness of being a Catholic during this rather difficult pandemic time.

Sometimes I find Gospel readings at a weekday Mass that I hadn’t thought of in a very long time.

Today, it was a reading from St. Luke. Jesus’ mother and brothers came to see Jesus but couldn’t reach him because of the crowd. Someone tells Jesus, “Your mother and brothers are standing outside, and they wish to see you.” Jesus replied, “My mother and my brothers are those who hear the word of God and act on it.”

Some might be upset with Jesus. Why doesn’t he drop everything and go see his mother? I think Jesus was teaching us the message, “those who hear the word of God and act on it are my mother and my brothers,” have a vocation — a vocation to be a family — a family with Jesus as part of it.

Each Catholic parish must be a family — praying and working together, trusting each other and being united with Jesus, who must be a part of each family and parish. In this way, we are guided and lead to discover a better way to live well in the Spirit of our Savior.

Jesus cannot be some sort of faraway Lord for us. He’s much more than a statue. He’s more than someone we think of only when we make the sign of the cross. Jesus wants us, each one of us, to develop a relationship with him — a relationship like with “mother or brother.”

To accomplish this, we must form and develop our love for our Lord, Jesus. Only with love can we have a true relationship with Our Lord, Jesus Christ. Love humbles us. In this way, we see Jesus in others, and we discover what it means to “Love our neighbor.” Our parish truly becomes our family, and we realize that our vocation is bringing God’s love to others — even to the strangers that we meet each day.

Love of God helps us realize that our true riches are not within ourselves. It is all about others and what I can do about this love of others — this love of Jesus. This love is about the gratitude to God for all the opportunities that God places in my life to make my relationship with Jesus all that it should be.

Jesus asks us to make a commitment when we recognize how important our relationship with Jesus is. When we truly love Jesus, our family with the Lord becomes so profound. May our parishes be filled with a real relationship with Jesus and with each other. May we be a family filled with love. This is our commitment.
Youth take active roles in parish ministries

LOWVILLE – Youth at St. Peter’s Church in Lowville, St. Mary’s in Glenfield and St. Hedwig’s in Houseville are taking active roles in ministry, and those roles are both helping the parish and helping the youth develop their faith.

Deborah Mullin, Faith Formation coordinator for the three faith communities, noted that teenagers from the communities are teaching and assisting with Faith Formation, serving as lectors, altar servers, technology assistants and musicians, and aiding with Vacation Bible Schools.

“I think we underestimate our kids a lot of the time,” Mullin said. “This also applies for spirituality and faith. Kids are amazing, and they are capable of so much more than we give them credit for. They need to know we take them seriously, that we listen to their ideas and that we value their input.”

Friends David Fayle, 15, of Lowville, and Colin Kempney, 15, of Beaver Falls, teach fourth grade catechism with a volunteer adult supervisor. Fayle also plays piano for the church community on occasion, while Kempney has served as a lector.

“It all started with a call for volunteers,” said Kempney. “Now, I’ve taught Faith Formation for two years. Just coming out of Faith Formation, some of our classes were pretty boring. We know how to make them more fun.”

“Colin needed help,” added Fayle. “So, I taught with Colin. Last summer, I helped (the parish music minister) by playing piano. (The parish) needed volunteers. I love playing piano, and I love teaching. It’s an opportunity to support something I really love.”

Noah Comet, 15, of Lowville, said he first started volunteering to fulfill requirements associated with scouting. He’s volunteered as both an altar server and aiding with Faith Formation.

“Keeping the interest of the kids is the hardest part,” he said. “I help with the kindergarteners once in a while. It’s hard to keep the littlest kids entertained and willingly learning.”

Twins Tucker and Ireland Earl, 14, of Lowville, also volunteer together.

“I started altar serving a couple years ago,” Tucker said. “And I helped with Vacation Bible School not long after. I help with the Sunday (Faith Formation) classes now, mostly helping with fifth grade.”

“I first started with Vacation Bible School,” added Ireland. “I was so much fun! I really liked it, so when my mom ended up teaching First Communion, she asked me to help teach that. I also sometimes sing with the choir, and I used to altar serve.”

Ireland Earl said the young students respond well to their youthful teachers.

“Our age can be an advantage,” she said. “It’s easier to connect with the kids. We know what they’re thinking, since we just went through it ourselves. Since it’s not actual school that’s required by the state, I think some kids feel like (Faith Formation) is just one more thing their parents are making them do. We try to make them want to be there.”

“I have two younger siblings,” added Olivia King, 15, of Lowville, who has served as an altar server, lector, choir member and Vacation Bible School volunteer. “I think that also helps me know how to talk to and deal with kids who are younger than me. I know what I should and shouldn’t say.”

“You have to talk to kids, not at them,” added Kempney.

Madison Rhubert, 14, of Lyons Falls, has volunteered as an altar server, choir member, Faith Formation volunteer and has assisted on running the parish PowerPoint, which is being used in place of missals during the pandemic. She also helps train younger altar servers.

“I’ve had to train four other kids, including my sister,” she said. “I had to show them how to put on their robes, and I have to teach them what to do and when. One of the hardest parts can be working with them to get them to be patient. Some get tired of sitting and want to do something.”

While the youth said they feel like adults in some of the ministries, they said they feel their service is appreciated.

“The choir, I’m not sure they were used to kids being there at first,” said Ireland Earl. “But everyone is friendly.”

“When I play piano, I hear a lot of adults and older people say they like to see the younger people involved,” added Fayle.

In addition to making them feel more engaged with their faith community, the youth said they feel like volunteering, especially teaching, has helped them learn about their faith.

Several of the youth said they have really enjoyed learning about the faith from the YouCat, a version of the catechism that’s written for youth.

“We used to give our confirmation students a bible at their confirmation,” said Mullin. “I did a survey with parents and asked how often the teens used the Bibles they received. Needless to say, it wasn’t the response we wanted to hear.

Father (James W.) “Jay” (Seymour) asked if we used YouCat. I had never heard of it, so the answer was ‘no.’ I ordered one, and both myself and the confirmation catechists were impressed with it. We now give each student a youth bible and the YouCat at the beginning of the first year of confirmation preparation.”

“It’s easy to read, and it breaks down the Scripture and teachings really easily,” said Fayle.

The youth feel more informed about their faith after reading the YouCat and participating in the confirmation program, they said.

“Before I started confirmation classes, I didn’t really listen to the readings at church,” said King. “Our confirmation classes required us to write reflections about the readings every week. It’s made me realize how enlightening the readings are. I’ve been listening more since. And it’s helpful to pass that on. Now, my sister is going to be confirmed. I get to help her through that.”

“I’ve had conversations with kids at school who ask about my religion and why I believe the things I believe,” added Ireland Earl. “It’s been really helpful learning more of the ins and outs. It’s made it easier to respond to some of the misconceptions.”

“There are like seven churches within a mile radius here,” added Kempney. “There are a lot of people who believe differently than we do.”

“People our age seem a lot more open minded,” said King. “We’re trying to become leaders, so we can bridge the gaps, like Pope Francis says.”

Several youth volunteers from St. Peter’s, St. Mary’s and St. Hedwig’s, including Brody Brown, Anna Exford, Lily Exford, Anabella LaPuma and Stephanie Beyer, were unable to participate in the interview.

“I’m hoping as students become confirmed, more and more will want to stay connected to parish life and be a part of educating the younger ones going through Faith Formation classes, Vacation Bible School, lecturing or choir,” said Mullin.”
Adapting ministry to a world in pandemic

OGDENSBURG – When the coronavirus pandemic shut down gatherings across the North Country and the state, ministries of the Diocese of Ogdensburg were forced to develop new ways to connect with others and help them stay connected with their faith, and the adaptations have created new opportunities.

“When COVID hit, I was scheduled to do a workshop on charisms for Formation for Ministry,” said Marika Donders, director of the New Evangelization.

“Participants take a test to learn their charisms, I do a presentation on what the charisms are and how they’re used in ministry, and there’s typically small-group discussion. When we went into lockdown, we decided to do the workshop using videos and Zoom (an online meeting system). I recorded the presentation – that was a learning experience in itself. We sent the video to the participants to watch beforehand. In the Zoom meeting, we broke into small groups according to the charisms for discussion.”

Donders also participated in online Alpha, a program of evangelization that targets the “unchurched,” those who are no longer practicing their faith or who have never practiced a faith. The program was organized by St. Peter’s Parish in Massena.

“I first thought it was never going to work – the program relies on a dinner and face-to-face interactions,” she said. “But it was amazing how quickly people opened up in the small groups online. Usually, with the in-person Alpha, it takes three to four sessions for people to really start opening up. People were going deep in the first sessions. Some people were more comfortable online. It also allowed people to participate who might not have if they had to drive to Massena and then drive home after. We’re now doing a small diocesan Alpha online.”

Building on that experience, as well as an in-person experience, Donders then went online with The 99 Masterclass, a program that trains parish leaders in discipleship and evangelization with the goal that they’ll conduct a parish program.

“We had participants from four parishes and participants from the Diocese of Syracuse,” Donders said. “We found that to be one of the biggest advantages – geography and distance doesn’t matter.”

“Spatial large distances using technology has been helpful in her role with the Cursillo movement, as well, Donders said.

“We have Ultreyas – monthly meetings,” she said. “We were able to do those virtually. Now that things are starting back up, we’ve been doing a hybrid version. We’re meeting in-person in a large hall with social distance and masks, but people are also using Zoom to join the meeting. Some people are not comfortable going back to in-person meetings yet, and some would otherwise not be able to participate because of the distance they’d have to travel. People from Watertown or Plattsburgh could join our meetings in Massena without driving two hours.”

Stephen Tartaglia, director of Family Life, said technology also allowed him to continue his ministries during the coronavirus shutdown.

“The first thing was working from home,” he said. “(Diocesan Information Technology Director) Ian Fawcett really had us set up well for that because of the technology he had made available to us in terms of the laptops and (software programs), and because of how we’ve been trained. All our documents were accessible, and we were able to continue our work.”

Tartaglia also explained that programs such as Pre-Cana had to be modified for online delivery.

“Marriage preparation didn’t come to a halt,” he said. “Instead of doing in-person presentations, we were giving the engaged couples content to watch and workbooks to complete, then they’d connect with our Pre-Cana presenters and discuss their answers.”

With Family Guggenheim canceled for the season, the Family Life Office also opted to host a virtual Family Life Conference, “Iron Sharpens Iron.”

“Not having Family Guggenheim was a big heart breaker for us,” Tartaglia said. Technology can’t replace the real thing, but we wanted to offer an opportunity for families – especially the families who typically attend camp – to connect with one another, learn and pray together, and let’s see what families are doing and have them connect.”

Using tech to connect

In addition to adapting to new ways of delivering ministry, those involved in ministry were also forced to adapt to new ways to live their faith during the coronavirus shutdown and ongoing pandemic.

“As a family, we discovered ibreviary,” said Stephen Tartaglia, director of the Office of Family Life. “We’ve been praying night prayer together with ibreviary. We broadcast it to a big screen, and everyone includes their own intentions. It’s easy, and it’s a skill and prayer format I wanted my kids exposed to. This facilitated it for us.”

Ibreviary is an online program and phone application that presents the Liturgy of the Hours in a simple, easy-to-follow format.

“I have the (Breviary) books, but this is easier to share, and it’s very simple to use,” Tartaglia said.

He also noted that his family continued to participate in Mass even when churches were closed.

“We had the stay-at-home Masses,” he said. “My family very much disliked not being able to go to Communion, but we went to Mass online, and we really participated in the Mass in tribute videos of skill shares or of the family doing something fun.”

The idea to have families share videos featuring their skills and fun came originally from skill share videos suggested to Tartaglia and diocesan staff by the diocesan Information Technology Department, as well as a conversation Tartaglia had with Youth Ministry Director Tom Semeraro.

“I was watching skill share videos with my wife and kids, and we learned things like photography, origami and cooking,” he said. “Tom Semeraro talked about how other families were doing similar things. There were just a lot of connections.”

The Virtual Family Life conference facilitated other collaborations, as well.

“Education, Youth Ministry, Evangelization, the chancellor, Respect Life, Natural Family Planning, Vocations and Faith Formation all participated and made contributions,” Tartaglia said.

Despite the successes and collaborations that were facilitated using technology, there were challenges, as well.

“It was our first virtual conference, and we didn’t have video professionals, so that was a challenge,” Tartaglia said. “And we’re competing with all these major names – Marriage Summit and these publishing companies are all having online events.”

“With videos and Zoom or Teams (another online platform) meetings, you’re only seeing faces,” added Donders. “You’re not seeing body language or seeing people’s eyes. It’s harder to tell if people are engaged. Also, it takes a lot more energy to hold an online meeting. Instead of just focusing on the presentation, you have to worry about the screen sharing correctly when it’s supposed to and the sound quality and figuring out who has a dog barking in the background and needs to be muted. You have to balance the presentation and the technology.”

Regardless of the challenges, the learnings from the lockdown period may prove advantageous into the future.

“We’ve learned a lot quickly because we had to, and we made changes very quickly,” Donders noted. “And it’s nice to have another tool in our toolbox. This diocese is so huge geographically, it’s nice to have the option of online presentations. To me, it’s preferable to be in person, but if, for example, we can do a workshop online with people from Port Henry and people from Carthage, then we can have follow-up discussions face-to-face. I don’t think it’s an ‘either-or situation’ with in-person or technology. I think we look at a ‘both-and situation’ moving forward.”

nearly the same way. We did all the stand, sit and kneel, and we all dressed up. I read an article at one point and someone talked about ‘watching Mass.’ We didn’t want to just watch. We participated. We prayed Mass.”

Tartaglia also noted that virtual platforms allowed him to continue participating in an Exodus 90 men’s group. Exodus 90 is a men’s program that includes a regimen of daily prayer, asceticism, and fraternity to reinvigorate their devotions to Christ and bring them back to the foundations of their faith.

“We were all still able to access the readings, connect through video or Zoom or phone calls and stay connected, even when we couldn’t get together in person,” Tartaglia said. “And we still had the ascetical portions. We didn’t just rely on the technology.”

Tartaglia noted that there are also a number of online platforms to help people continue to learn about their faith, even when they can’t attend classes in person.

“Major conferences moved online, and a lot of them were free,” he said. “So instead of having the expense and time associated with travel and attending a conference in person, we could hear the speakers from our homes and participate with little or no cost.”

While there are many online resources available, Tartaglia noted that technology doesn’t take the place of working to develop our spiritual lives.

“Technology facilitates communication, but technology did not replace putting in the work,” he said. “We have to find ways to make sacrifices and participate, not just watch and absorb.”

‘Praise be to you, O Lord...’

This coming Sunday we celebrate the feast day of St. Francis of Assisi who was made the patron saint of ecology by St. John Paul II in 1979. Early in Francis’ life he heard the Lord say to him, “Go repair my Church.” At that moment Francis thought he was being called to repair the small church San Damiano, outside of Assisi, which was in need of repair. Later in his life Francis realized that what God was asking him to do was to repair the entire Church San Damiano, outside of Assisi, which was in need of repair. Later in his life Francis realized that what God was asking him to do was to repair the small church San Damiano, outside of Assisi, which was in need of repair. Later in his life Francis realized that what God was asking him to do was to repair the small church San Damiano, outside of Assisi, which was in need of repair.

During this month of October, we will celebrate Respect Life month. It is reminder of our call as followers of Christ to cherish human life from conception to death. This begins with the challenge to protect the life of the unborn so that they may have an opportunity to enjoy life. Our challenge does not stop there though. That is just the beginning. We must ensure that the child has a home to live in... This “home” needs to ensure that the child will inherit a place where she/he will have access to clear air, pure water and rich land that will produce healthy and nutritious food.

The observance of Respect Life month calls us as Christians to extend the protection of life to include the quality of life in our “common home” that we share with everything that lives and breathes and has its being in Christ. The goal of the Season of Creation that ends on October 4 is for each of us to renew our relationship with our creator and all creation through celebration, conversion and commitment. Don’t forget to bless your animal today; even if you don’t have a pet, send a blessings to the creatures that inhabit your backyard and sky. Check: Blessings of Animals-Franciscan Media.

CHEVROLET
Family Life serves families in all stages

By Stephen Tartaglia
Director of Family Life

I would like to take this opportunity to thank everyone who contributes to the Bishop’s Fund Appeal. The Family Life Office is one of the ministries supported by the Bishop’s Fund. Your contributions enable us to provide valuable services that strengthen and support families throughout the Diocese of Ogdensburg.

The Family Life Office supports families in a variety of ways throughout all stages of the family life cycle. The support for families begins with Pre-Cana, helping men and women prepare for the sacrament of matrimony and their new life together.

After the wedding ceremony, married couples continue to benefit from support. We offer marriage enrichment programs and resources. Currently we offer the Beloved: Finding Happiness in Marriage video series for both Pre-Cana and marriage enrichment. This video series features prominent speakers and theologians including: Dr. Edward Sri, Jason and Crystalina Evert, Patrick Coffin, Greg and Julie Alexander, Christopher West and Leah Darrow.

The Family Life Office promotes and leads a variety of spiritual enrichment programs to support men and women in different circumstances. One program we offer, Exodus 90, is an intense 90-day spiritual exercise for men characterized by prayer, asceticism and fellowship. The purpose of this program is to help men be free of the “idols” which enslave them and prevent them from fully loving God and their family.

Feedback we’ve received from many of the participants’ wives indicates that the program is extremely effective, that the husband is more present and responsive to the family as a result of their participation in the program.

As the family grows through the welcoming of children, needs can intensify.

The Family Life office is leading the Walking With Moms in Need initiative introduced by the USCCB Committee for Pro-Life Activities, which aims at highlighting the pregnant and parenting moms in our parishes, identifying resources available within our local communities and connecting these women to the resources they need.

One of the most special and joyful times of the liturgical year for families is Advent.

Celebrating Advent well is an excellent and effective way to counteract the secular influence and leads to a proper celebration of Christmas.

The Family Life Office maintains Advent webpages full of resources and information on the Diocesan website which support families in their efforts to celebrate Advent well. The webpages are active each year from November 1 through the second week in January.

There are a lot of families that are struggling and suffering. The Family Life Office offers support for families that are suffering.

We offer Grief workshops for those who have lost a loved one. For separated and/or divorced families, we offer the Surviving Divorce for Catholics program, which is a series of 12 meetings...
The Sisters of St. Joseph are grateful to the priests who celebrate daily Mass at the Motherhouse. We especially thank Fr. Leo Wiley, Fr. William Muench, Msgr. Paul Whitmore, Fr. Deepak Baru, Fr. Mickey Demo, and the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart, for their priestly presence among us.

Father Jazmines

If you had not come we would be orphans.

Thank you for putting your retirement on hold to be with us at St. Mary’s and St. Paul’s. You have to admit it has been a “very different year” for all of us.

that include video presentations and conversation focused on topics relevant for separated/divorced Catholics and their families.

The Family Life Office offers the annual Marriage/Religious Jubilee. The Jubilee draws together entire families to a Mass celebrated by Bishop LaValley at the cathedral in Ogdensburg each September.

The event recognizes and celebrates the love and commitment of men and women who have said yes to God in their respective vocations. Married couples renew their wedding vows. Consecrated religious celebrating special anniversaries are honored.

The Family Life Office also sponsors other marriage and family enriching events, such as the annual Ignite Conference held in the Diocese of Syracuse, and Women’s conferences, such as Women of Grace. In addition, the Family Life Office sponsors the Family Guggenheim program, weekend spiritual retreats for entire families held at Camp Guggenheim twice in August and once in October.

One of things that makes Family Guggenheim program so effective is that it is based on the concept of families ministering to other families as they spend time together. In a sense, the ministry flows from the idea expressed in Proverbs 27:17, that people learn from one another as iron sharpens iron. This usually happens best when families get together at in-person events. While the pandemic has prevented most of these in-person events for the time being, the Family Life Office continues to offer opportunities for families to encounter and learn from each other in a virtual way through the Iron Sharpens Iron program.

The kick-off to the program was a free Virtual Family Life Conference held in late August. The conference featured ten formal presentations. It included opportunities to pray together, to play Bingo, to watch and discuss a family movie. It also included several informal recordings submitted by families from around the diocese, doing a variety of activities including skill shares, a book review, performing skits, singing songs, playing instruments, telling jokes, etc. All of these recordings can be accessed on the Iron Sharpens Iron webpage at rcdony.org/vflc, where we continue to accept and display recordings of families.

If you are interested in sharing a recording of your family, please contact Steve Tartaglia at startaglia@rcdony.org or 315-393-2920.

Father Christopher J. Looby and the parishioners of St. Mary’s Church in Ticonderoga welcomed into our family of faith the Bassett Family! Harry and Francine Bassett were baptized, confirmed and received First Eucharist at the 9 a.m. Mass on Sunday, Sept. 6. Their daughter, Winnie, was baptized with them. “This is our faith and we are proud to profess it with you through Christ our Lord!”
OGDENSBURG—Faith brought Jesse and Stacey Sovie of Ogdensburg together, and their faith continues to help them sustain their marriage.

"Stacey and I met through the online dating site CatholicMatch.com," said Jesse. "Looking back, we can both reflect on how each of us knew how important our faith was to us and how important it was in finding our future spouse. So, three years of marriage and two kids later, it really shouldn't be a surprise to see how much faith meant to each of us. But having said that, I am still astounded and amazed at God's working through the online dating site CatholicMatch.com, " said jesse. "A beautiful and priceless gift — a gift that I still remain so grateful to God for."

Both Jesse and Stacey, members of St. Mary's Cathedral Parish, were raised in the Catholic faith, but both can point to moments when they realized the importance of that faith.

"Though my faith has been a part of my life from the very beginning, it wasn't until after she was gone that I realized that she had instilled it in me. It was something that she had nurtured in me. That's when I started to notice her true devotion to our Lady and to our Lord. As a high school teen, I made it a point to start nurturing my faith a bit more, and now it is a part of my life that I could never live without. To this day I still marvel at how much she had influenced my faith in God."

"I was born and raised in a faithful Catholic family," added Jesse. "We went to Mass every week. We said Grace before meals and said prayers before traveling. I served as an altar server when I was younger. Faith was just a part of our family life from the very beginning. But I would have to say my conversion experience or moment happened back when I was around 21. Between 2010 and 2011, I thought I knew my faith through and through, but I still felt like it was lacking. In retrospect, I can see how God gave me the grace of awareness back then, as around that time I began to realize how little I actually knew about my faith. I had an interest back then in joining a Bible study, thinking that would help me learn more. That thought process eventually led me down the trail of enrolling in the Formation for Ministry - Commissioned Lay Minister Program. Upon enrolling in that program in 2011, the knowledge, experiences and friendships I gained were priceless. Upon being commissioned in 2013, I began working in a variety of ministries that have been so rewarding and nourishing for my faith. Like any conversion, it doesn't end, and it simply continues on as one ongoing journey."

Stacey said she continues to nurture that faith by attending weekly Mass and by praying the Rosary with Jesse. She said she hopes to start including her young daughter in this practice, and she also hopes to resume an earlier practice of attending daily Mass.

"As our daughter gets a little older, we would like to make it a tradition of doing a family rosary together," she said. "Before our son was born, Jesse and I would take turns going to daily morning Mass. On days (Jesse) went to morning Mass, I would make a point to go to noon Mass with our daughter, Rebecca. Times are a bit more difficult to accomplish these goals, but I would eventually like to get back to this routine."

Jesse noted the couple also says Grace before meals and take that moment to thank God for the gifts He's given them. Jesse also points to his participation in men's groups as important to helping him grow in his faith.

"Being able to meet up with and be surrounded by faithful men every week has been an amazing and crucial experience in my faith journey," Jesse said. "Our men's group name MSM – Men Sharpen Men – is based on Proverbs 27:17 which states, 'Iron sharpens iron, so one man sharpens another.' Our experience as a group relates that truth. At the beginning of this year, we as a group decided to embark on a spiritual journey of undertaking the program Exodus 90. The program consists of dedicating time each day for prayer; meeting as a fraternity every week; each man pairing up with another to serve as an anchor for each other. In addition, each man is required to give up a variety of daily things over the course of 90 days, as each seeks to cut out distractions, addictions, and certain comforts which hinder us from seeking God on a deeper level. It certainly was no small undertaking, but it was absolutely worth it!"

That faith has been critical in helping them through challenging times.

"My faith has been my cornerstone of my life and has helped me through many challenging times but one time that specifically comes to mind is my first pregnancy,” Stacey said. “My husband and I were so excited when we realized that we were going to have our first baby. It was the beginning of a new year and I thought it was all going to be a cake walk. Little did I know that for the next five months, I would be sick as a dog and wouldn’t be able to leave my bed or eat anything but dried toast, apple sauce, bananas and sip ginger ale through a straw.”

Stacey was so sick during her pregnancy, she had to go to the emergency room for IV fluid on more than one occasion.

“I was so tired and scared that something horrific would happen to my baby from me being so sick,” she said. “I also remember thinking that I wasn’t sure I could handle another pregnancy if it was going to be like this. I wasn’t that strong.”

Despite the challenges, Stacey said she saw God’s grace, especially when she gave birth to a healthy baby girl.

“Throughout that time of being so scared, my mom and Jesse were by my side telling me that God had a plan and that He wouldn’t give me more than I could handle,” she said. “God was there through the most difficult times of feeling so helpless, He was there when I wasn’t sure I could handle the pain, and He was there when I held my beautiful baby girl for the first time. It was the greatest reward that one can receive and the most beautiful miracle.”

Jesse said his faith also helped him through the death of his brother, Lance Corporal Nicholas “Nic” Sovie, who was killed in a helicopter crash in 2006 while serving in the U.S. Marine Corps.

“I can still think back to that moment when we were notified of the crash and ultimately to the news that he was killed in the crash,” Jesse said. “I cannot begin to imagine trying to deal with, process or recover from that moment without the aid of my faith. Even in the midst of the darkest grief of loss, we could see God’s light. We could feel His presence with us. Even in the saddest moment, we all knew and felt that we would see Nic again. Death has already been conquered.”

Jesse and his family were also comforted by knowing Nic had become closer to God in the months leading up to the crash.

“In his last months, Nic started going to church whenever he could,” Jesse said. “He would also listen to various church songs and hymns that he was used to hearing back home at his home parish. More than all that though, Nic grew within his own faith. He told my Mom that with each flight things made, he entrusted each one to God, knowing that God was in control and was present. Faith not only helped carry us through that challenging time of losing Nic, but it also helped draw my brother Nic closer to God before God ultimately decided to call him home.”

“As they move through life and overcome challenges together, the Soviets say they do so with the help of God and acknowledging His graces. ‘(Faith) helps put things in perspective and to help understand why things happen the way they do,’ Stacey said. ‘I’m not saying that accidents or unfortunate events don’t happen but, believing in God and having faith that He has a bigger plan for us does make getting through the tough times a little bit easier to bear. It makes living life a little easier to manage – to have something solid to lean on, even though you can’t see it physically. The truth is, though, that you can see it. God is there in the simple things, the little miracles in life. My faith in God is confirmed and strengthened with the struggle of a baby, the soothing sound of the water or the wind in the trees. If we could just slow down our lives to notice and appreciate the tiniest details in our surroundings, we would realize that there is something much greater, something so great that only one’s faith can gain strength from it. My faith in God helps me every day – in the simplest of tasks and in the largest of struggles. He truly is my strength each day.”

Trump announces U.S. Supreme Court nominee

WASHINGTON (CNS) – Eight days after the death of Supreme Court Justice Ruth Bader Ginsburg, President Donald Trump announced Sept. 26 that Judge Amy Coney Barrett, a judge on the Chicago-based U.S. Court of Appeals for the 7th Circuit, is his nominee to fill that seat.

The president said he was honored to nominate Barrett whom he described as "one of the nation's most gifted legal minds" to the court and praised her for her loyalty to the Constitution.

This should be a "straightforward and prompt confirmation," he added before a small crowd seated in the White House Rose Garden. "The stakes are incredibly high," he added.

Barrett, for her part, said she was "humbled by the prospect of serving in the Supreme Court," and said if she were confirmed, she would always be mindful she would be following in Ginsburg's footsteps.

Noting she would be in a group of nine as a justice, she said this is something she is very used to, with her husband and their family of seven children.

She also stressed that if confirmed she would "assume the role to serve you," the American public, and she has no illusions that the road ahead will be easy.

Trump's pick is not a surprise. The 48-year-old Catholic and law professor at the University of Notre Dame was reported to be on the president's short list of nominees just hours after Ginsburg's death.

The news drew immediate reaction from both sides of the political spectrum and Catholics were similarly vocal in either support or alarm over Trump's nominee choice.

Brian Burch, president of CatholicVote, an independent political advocacy group, said in a Sept. 26 statement ahead of Trump's formal announcement: "Catholics are thrilled with the expected nomination of Judge Amy Coney Barrett and believe she represents the best choice to protect the rule of law and our constitutional rights." He added that she "deserves a speedy confirmation process and a Senate vote as soon as possible."

Catholics expressing concern about Trump's pick stressed unease with her stance on a number of issues. For example, John Gehr, Catholic program director for Faith in Public Life, a Washington-based advocacy group, said in a Sept. 26 tweet: "Being 'pro-life' isn't a single issue. Many Catholic voters are worried that Amy Coney Barrett could undermine health care access, workers rights, environmental protections and other moral issues central to church teaching."

Barrett is not an unknown. Two years ago, she was viewed as a potential candidate for the nation's high court after Justice Anthony Kennedy retired, and the slot that was filled by Justice Brett Kavanaugh. At the time, Trump reportedly told advisers that he was "saving" Barrett if Ginsburg announced her retirement during his presidency.

In 2017, Barrett was nominated by Trump to serve on the 7th Circuit in Chicago and she garnered support from some for her responses to the line of questioning she received in her confirmation hearing from Senate Democrats that focused on her Catholic faith.

Sen. Dianne Feinstein, D-California, told her: "The dogma lives loudly within you, and that's a concern," to which Barrett responded: "It's never appropriate for a judge to impose that judge's personal convictions, whether they arise from faith or anywhere else, on the law."
In final drive, campaigns go all out for the Catholic vote

CLEVELAND (CNS) – It’s a little more than five weeks from Election Day and the campaigns of Democrat Joe Biden and Republican President Donald Trump are making a final push for Catholic votes.

Through online events, phone banks aimed at Catholic-heavy counties and specific digital messages and emails citing each candidate’s appeal to Catholics, the campaigns are ensuring that voters who make up the country’s largest religious group know where Trump and Biden stand on key issues.

The Catholic vote is significant. Catholics make up about 23% of the population.

Current estimates are that upward of 80% of Catholic voters have made up their minds, with the count being evenly split between the two major candidates.

That leaves a minority of Catholic voters up for grabs, according to political observers, who estimated that 10% to 20% of Catholics have not yet made up their minds about which candidate will get their vote.

Even then, it is Catholics in a handful of swing states who are being targeted, said Vincent Stine, adjunct professor of political science at George Washington University.

Key battleground states with significant Catholic populations include Florida, Iowa, Michigan, Minnesota, Ohio, Pennsylvania, and Wisconsin. Stine told Catholic News Service.

Stine said that in nine of the past 10 presidential elections, Catholics have sided with the winner, illustrating how the country’s largest religious group is truly a swing voting bloc, making them of particular interest to the major party campaigns.

That said, the Catholic vote is not monolithic. A survey by the Pew Research Center conducted from July 27 to Aug. 2 shows that 59% of white Catholics planned to vote for Trump and 40% for Biden. Meanwhile, among Hispanics, 65% planned to vote for Biden and 33% for Trump.

Two-thirds of Catholic registered voters are white while about 25% are Hispanic, according to data collected by the Pew in 2018 and 2019.

It’s unlikely that having a candidate who shares their religious beliefs will sway Catholic voters to a great extent. A February 2020 Pew survey found that about 62% of Catholics said it is very important to them to have a president who personally lives a moral and ethical life and that they are not necessarily seeking a president who shares their religious beliefs.

Both major campaigns run operations focusing on outreach to Catholics through initiatives respectively known as Catholics for Trump and Catholics for Biden.

Catholics for Trump was introduced in April. It has six co-chairs: former Speaker of the House Newt Gingrich; Republican consultant Mary Joe Matalin; Mick Mulvaney, former acting White House chief of staff; Alfonso Aguilar, president of the Latino Partnership for Conservative Principles; and Matt Schlapp, chairman of the American Conservative Union. The board includes 28 other prominent Catholics.

CNS scheduled interviews with Schlapp three times in late August and early September, but Schlapp did not return calls.

“Catholics for Trump will energize and activate the Catholic community in re-electing President Donald J. Trump by sharing the many successes of the Trump administration,” the group’s mission statement says. “Re-electing President Trump will ensure continued victories in pro-life issues, judicial appointments and religious freedom.”

Catholics for Biden held a kickoff event Sept. 3.

Josh Dickson, national faith engagement director for the Biden campaign, said the outreach to Catholic Americans is focusing on how the former vice president’s Catholic faith aligns with the common good and “their common values.”

As a Catholic, Biden supports legalized abortion. He has said he accepts the Catholic Church’s teaching “in my personal life” but that he refuses to impose his belief on others.

If elected, Biden also plans to bring back a version of the Hyde amendment, which bans the use of federal funds for abortion except when a woman’s life is in danger. Until the 2020 primary season, Biden had supported the amendment.

According to Dickson, Biden “has a comprehensive view when it comes to women’s health” and that he supports expanding access to health care for women. “He has an approach that doesn’t take abortion or any other issue lightly,” Dickson said.

In determining who they will support for president, Dickson said he believed, the majority of Catholics are multissue voters who are concerned about racism, health care, the country’s response to the coronavirus pandemic and the economy in addition to abortion.
Pro-life leaders welcome Trump's 'Born Alive' order

WASHINGTON (CNS) – President Donald Trump's Sept. 23 announcement that he will issue a "Born Alive Executive Order" will "provide necessary legal protections for some of the most vulnerable in society," said Jeanne Mancini, president of the March for Life Education and Defense Fund.

"These steps had to be taken," she said, "because some Democrats in the Senate promised to block legislation that mandates basic medical care for children who survive an abortion – an extremist view shared by vice presidential candidate Kamala Harris."

Mancini made the comments in a statement she issued shortly after Trump announced the order in his remarks during the annual National Catholic Prayer Breakfast, which this year could not be an in-person event because of the pandemic and was livestreamed to over 10,000 registered participants.

"We believe in ... the eternal truth that every child, born and unborn, is made in the holy image of God. .... I will always defend the sacred right to life," the president said. His executive order will "ensure that all precious babies born alive, no matter their circumstances, receive the medical care that they deserve. This is our sacrosanct moral duty," he said.

Trump's opponents and some obstetricians and gynecologists say existing law that already provides protections to newborns, whether born during a failed abortion or under other circumstances.

Sen. Ben Sasse, R-Nebraska, the lead co-sponsor of the Born-Alive Abortion Survivors Protection Act, S. 311, has said current law does not provide enough protections. His bill would protect newborns who survive abortions by requiring appropriate care and admission to a hospital. On Feb. 23, a Senate vote to advance the bill failed.

In other reaction to Trump's planned executive order, said Carol Tobias, president of National Right to Life, "protects the youngest of patients and ensures that their right to life is defended to the greatest extent of the law."

Kristan Hawkins, president of Students for Life Action, called it "a humane response to a struggling infant gasping for air." "The fact that Democrats in the House and Senate have blocked efforts to provide legal protections for babies born during botched abortions should horrify all Americans," she said, adding that "one of the sleeper issues of this election cycle is infanticide, which is allowed under our current laws."

The Guttmacher Institute estimates that out of about 926,000 annual abortions, about 12,000 take place after viability, or after 20 weeks, she said.

"The radical reality of Roe is that abortion is legal in the U.S. through all nine months, sometimes with taxpayer funding, and it offers no legal protections for babies born during botched abortions," Hawkins said.
Prayer to add to the Rosary

Submitted by Sister Helen Hermann, SSJ

Pope Leo XIII asked that this prayer be added to the end of the Rosary, especially during the month of October, which is dedicated to the Rosary:

To you, O blessed Joseph, do we come in our tribulation, and having implored the help of your most holy Spouse, we confidently invoke your patronage also.

Through that charity which bound you to the immaculate Virgin Mother of God and through the paternal love with which you embraced the Child Jesus, we humbly beg you graciously to regard the inheritance which Jesus Christ has purchased by his Blood, and with your power and strength to aid us in our necessities.

O most watchful guardian of the Holy Family, defend the chosen children of Jesus Christ; O most loving father, ward off from us every contagion of error and corrupting influence; O our most mighty protector, be kind to us and from heaven assist us in our struggle with the power of darkness.

As once you rescued the Child Jesus from deadly peril, so now protect God’s Holy Church from the snares of the enemy from all adversity; shield, too, each one of us by your constant protection, so that, supported by your example and your aid, we may be able to live piously, to die in holiness, and to obtain eternal happiness in heaven.

Amen.
Some thoughts for Vineyard Sunday

Some years ago, I had the privilege of visiting Assisi. I’ll never forget the rich panorama of fertile vineyards that surround the town from the valleys below. No wonder God used the image of a vineyard in describing the chosen people of Israel. In today’s first reading, Isaiah describes how his friend, God, went to elaborate pains in constructing his vineyard, with ditches and a tower for protection, and a winepress for squeezing out the precious grape juice that would become delicious wine.

How disappointed God was when all that the vineyard produced was wild grapes, unfit for a good yield. All that work and loving care came to nothing! While Isaiah wrote, the Assyrians were pounding at the gates of Jerusalem, about to destroy it, as God promised to tear down that vineyard and let it revert to pasture-land.

Jesus in the Gospel uses the same image of a vineyard to describe Israel, but now he focuses in on the unfaithful people who, by their sin and failure to listen to the prophets, have brought God’s anger down on them. Jesus’ reference to the killing of the King’s only Son was not lost on the Pharisees. They had already decided to kill this Jesus who claimed to be the son of God. Jesus’ words enraged them, and their hearts were further hardened against him.

There is an axiom in law which states that the greater the person offended, the greater the offense itself. Since God himself was the victim, the offense against him was beyond measure. In addition, while the Pharisees reject Him because of their hardness of heart, Jesus himself is wounded beyond measure with a broken heart. We will never understand the immensity of God’s love for us. To offend the Lord is worse than any possible offense given to human beings, whether a president or a homeless person.

This week we need to think about the vineyard which the Lord has given us to tend – our spouses, our children, those in our workplace that we’re responsible for. On the day of God’s judgement, we’ll be held accountable.

How well have we cultivated our faith? Has it produced the good works that come from faith? “By their works shall you know them...” What are the good works? Prayer, caring for the poor, cultivating our relationship with the Son of the vineyard’s owner. The closer we come to putting on Christ, the easier it is to put on love for God and for one another, humility – not lording it over anyone, courage in proclaiming that we’re Catholic Christians, and boldly stating what we believe in. This month is Respect Life month. Are we convinced that life-issues are at the top of the list of priorities in our society, and are we courageous in proclaiming those values?

This month is also the month dedicated to Our Lady of the Rosary. The rosary. Will the under-taker have to buy a new one for our casket or will our own be old and shabby from use?

These are just some thoughts for Vineyard Sunday. God is still in charge of his vineyard. Let us stir up our courage, do the best we can and trust in the Lord.

Deacon candidates prepare to share Scripture

“Let’s review!” I can recall those words from various grade school, even high school teachers in years gone by. “Let’s review” usually meant one of two things (both in some cases). We were about to embark on new material, or we were about to have a quiz. The former piqued our interest, the latter sent shivers down our spine.

No quiz today! But let us review. All priests are deacons. Not all deacons are priests. The Second Vatican Council, way back in the 1960s, “renewed and encouraged the order of deacons throughout the entire Catholic Church.” All men on the journey to ordination as a priest will be ordained deacons first. That has been the case since the church codified the formation of men for the priesthood. The renewal of the permanent diaconate took place when Pope Paul VI issued his apostolic letter, Sacram Diaconatus Ordinem. In a different apostolic letter, Ministeria Quaeadam, the pope instituted the ministries of reader and acolyte. All men preparing for ordination are first installed as readers and then acolytes.

The 14 men who have been in formation for ordination as permanent deacons will be instituted into the ministry of reader by Bishop Terry LaValley this Friday evening (October 3) at Wadhams Hall in Ogdensburg. This is another of the significant steps for these men on their journey to an ordained life of ministry of the word, sacrament and service.

You may wonder what the difference is between an instituted Reader and the readers who share Scripture with us each weekend from the pulpit. The major difference is preparation. In our diocese, these men have studied scripture and how to share it with us at Mass. Once instituted as readers (lectors), these men should “carry out their office at least on Sundays and festive days (Holy Days), especially at the principal Mass of the day.” They should wear an alb when reading. An alb is the white, full-length vestment priests and deacons wear.

The pastor decides when an instituted reader will exercise his ministry, so this new role does not mean lay readers in parishes with an instituted reader are out of work. However, it is good for the instituted reader to share the sacred Scripture, except the Gospel, during Mass from time to time. It will help the future deacon become more comfortable in his vestments and standing at the ambo (lectern). These men have received extensive biblical formation over the last three years. As readers, therefore, they can share with the listeners the scripture in context and “perceive by the light of faith the central point of the revealed message.” People at Mass deserve readers who will share the scripture with knowledge, good diction, clear articulation, and sufficient volume. The Mass readings and the teachings found in them is one reason we come to church. The instituted reader will hopefully command all these gifts. We congratulate these men for this important moment on their journey.

Deacon Kevin Mastellon ministers in Watertown. He is the Director of Permanent Deacons for the Diocese of Ogdensburg.
Mission Sunday: Here I Am, Send Me

This year’s theme for World Mission Sunday is “Here I Am, Send Me.” Every parish in the world can participate, united, in this special Eucharistic celebration. Every parishioner is a missionary, sharing our love for Christ’s Gospel with one another, supporting the Church most in need.

Here I Am, Send me to Africa...
Where those who are sick are provided loving care at 6,500 Catholic hospitals and clinics, where 19,000 young men are preparing to be priests, to uplift the poor, celebrate the sacraments, reach out to children and families and comfort the sick and dying.

Here I Am, Send me to Asia...
Where catechists travel to remote areas to bring the good news of God’s great love to families there.

Here I Am, Send me to Latin America...
Where 3,500 religious bring the Lord’s mercy and peace to those in need of so much.

Here I Am, Send me to the Pacific Islands...
Where 3,500 religious bring the Lord’s mercy and peace to those in need of so much.

Here I Am, Send me to Europe
Where new churches are being built to welcome faith communities, renewed after years of persecution.

Here I am, Send me Lord! Pray for the Church’s worldwide missionary work!

Catholic voters asked to consider array of teachings

By Mike Matvey
Catholic News Service

ALBANY (CNS) – The envelope read: “There is a war on Catholics and Faith in God.”

Inside the mailer was “The 2020 Elections Catholic Voter Survey,” distributed by the organization CatholicVote, which wants to poll “1,000,000 eligible Catholic Voters ... on the Left's War on Catholics and Faith in God.”

When completed, the report will be distributed to President (Donald) Trump and his top advisers ... members of Congress ... radio talk show hosts,” the mailer said.

CatholicVote is seeking information as well as donations. But the mailers that many Catholics in the Diocese of Albany and elsewhere have received have left them with more questions than answers: Was this survey put out by the Catholic Church? Was it approved by the diocese? Is the church telling us who to vote for?

The questions point to the difficult and demanding job Catholics have when faced with how to decide whom to vote for in an election. Some want their bishops and pastors to come out and tell them who should get their vote. However, such a step is not something the Catholic Church can do, as the U.S. Conference of Catholic Bishops' explains in its quadrennial document "Forming Consciences for Faithful Citizenship: A Call to Political Responsibility.”

"Obviously, the church is a tax-exempt entity and so we are governed by the IRS rules and guidelines. We can't get involved in partisan politics, which means we can't endorse one candidate or oppose another candidate,” Kathleen Gallagher, director of pro-life activities for the New York State Catholic Conference, said.

"That is the beauty of it, that the church gives it to us with our free will to form our own consciences and use our own prudence and good judgment to make these difficult decisions,” Gallagher told The Evangelist, newspaper of the Diocese of Albany.

CatholicVote is a non-profit, political advocacy group that is independent of the church. The organization in mid-September launched a $9.7 million advertising blitz in swing states in support of President Donald Trump’s re-election.

Other efforts are underway to turn out the Catholic vote for Democratic presidential candidate Joe Biden, himself a Catholic. They include Catholics for Biden, Catholic Democrats and Vote Common Good.

“There are a lot of groups out there that put the word Catholic in their name but people have to dig deeper than that because they don't officially represent the Catholic magisterium or the hierarchy of the Catholic Church,” Gallagher said.

To guide discernment on voting, Gallagher pointed Catholics to the bishops' "Faithful Citizenship" document, which incorporates the tenets of Catholic social teaching to guide an individual's moral framework when it comes to choosing a candidate. Notably, it does not tell anyone who to vote for and explains that "as Catholics we are not single-issue voters.”

"We are urged and called to examine all of the issues, the broad gamut of issues. But all issues are not of equal moral weight, right? Some issues have a special claim on our conscience, the bishops say. And abortion, they call it a preeminent priority. Why do they do that? They do that because abortion threatens life itself,” Gallagher said.

"So, of course, we have to give strong moral weight, but at the same time our bishops say that's not an excuse to dismiss other issues," she continued. "No issue is optional for the Catholic voter. Assistance to immigrants and promoting racial equality and all of these issues that are on the front burner right now, we have a responsibility to examine. Where do the candidates stand on these issues, what are the party positions on those issues?"

If that isn't dizzying enough, the temperament and mentality of the candidate should be added into the decision.

"Our bishops also say character and integrity of candidates counts,” Gallagher said. "We should put that into the mix as well, not just their positions on the issues.”

In an extremely polarized world, where both sides are predicting catastrophic results if either Trump or Biden is elected and where social media is filled with hate and misinformation, it is difficult not to look at the issues with a biased eye.

"We all have a political lens that colors how we see the world. But our faith says try to look through your faith lens first," Gallagher said.

"But I think if we keep in mind, as Catholics, as Christians, we should put the most vulnerable, the most defenseless, the most oppressed people in the forefront. We have to think of others more than our own pocketbook, more than our own selves,” she said.

She also pointed to the Catechism of the Catholic Church as providing additional guidance.

"The catechism tells you there are three main responsibilities of Catholic citizens and they are: to pay taxes, to defend the country and to vote,” Gallagher explained. "All of those responsibilities are really putting the emphasis on the other guy ... Our faith says we are doing it for our brothers and sisters.”
