NEW DEACONS ORDAINED

Through the laying on of hands and the invocation of the Holy Spirit, Bishop LaValley ordained to the Order of Deacon Randy Besio, Gerald Bouchard, Brent Davison, Daniel LeRoy, Michael Lieber Jr., Kenneth Lushia, Roderic Roca, Lee Trudeau, Robert Uttendorfsky, Noel Voos, Mark Webster and Peter Woolschlager on October 2 at St. Mary’s Cathedral.

On October 9, Bishop LaValley will ordain two more men, James Carlin and Leagon Carlin, as deacons. See stories on pages 7 and 15. Additional coverage of the ordinations will be in next week’s edition.

HONORING THOSE WHO SERVE

On September 26, representatives of local law enforcement agencies, fire and EMS departments, and dispatching agencies gathered at Notre Dame Church in Malone as Bishop Terry R. LaValley celebrated the Blue Mass. In addition to providing a Color Guard, emergency responders served as lectors and participated in a wreath-laying and tolling bells in memory of those lost in the line of duty.

- Sister Mary Denise Wilke, RSM - 70 years

Pope: Focus on living as missionaries in October

VATICAN CITY (CNS) – All Christians are called to be missionaries, which at its most basic level involves living in such a way that other people ask what motivates their love and concern, Pope Francis said.

“Jesus asks us all, and you as well, to be missionary disciples. Are you ready?” the pope asked in a video marking the beginning of the church’s annual celebration of Mission Month.

The pope’s prayer intention for the month of October is: “We pray that every baptized person may be engaged in evangelization, available to the mission, by being witnesses of a life that has the flavor of the Gospel.”

The intention and the pope’s video commenting on it are distributed by the Pope’s Worldwide Prayer Network, formerly known as the Apostleship of Prayer.

To be a missionary, the pope said in the video, “It’s enough to be available to answer his call and to live united to the Lord in the most common daily things – work, meeting other people, our daily duties, the chance events of each day – allowing ourselves to be guided always by the Holy Spirit.”

The way a Christian lives should provoke admiration in others, he said. Then they will ask, “How is it possible for this person to be this way?” or “What is the source of the love with which this person treats everyone – the kindness and good humor?”
It's part of living in small towns, I think. As I travel around the North Country, it's not uncommon for me to be identified by my family associations. I regularly hear comments like: "You're Curt's daughter, right?" "Aren't you Charlie Smith's granddaughter?" "Hey! You're Jake's mom!"

And that's before I even consider all the times I'm called my twin sister's name or called "one of the Smith twins."

But it's only been within the last 3.5 years — since I started this job — that I've been called by a new moniker: "Sister John Mary's niece."

Recently, I was invited to be involved in this year's Rite of Christian Initiation for Adults (RCIA) program in this parish. I am sure you remember this program that prepares a person to a deeper understanding of the teachings of our Catholic Church and the teachings of the Lord Jesus. This program often involves some who are not Catholic but are interested in the Catholic Church. Many find this an opportunity to prepare to enter the Catholic Church. I have always enjoyed being a part of RCIA in each of the parishes that I have served. I have found my involvement as personally enriching.

My favorite RCIA memory is Jim's story. I still remember that Saturday morning a rather long time ago when the rectory doorbell rang. Saturday is usually rather quiet, so I was surprised. Jim was at the door. I had met him before, and I knew that he was not a Catholic. He said to me, "I would like to join up." Of course, I replied, "Join what?" He said, "I want to be a Catholic."

So, we sat down to talk. I was certainly pleased to meet someone who would want to be a Catholic. Jim was ready to jump right in and there. So, I had to convince him that we would want him to take his time. The Church wanted him to hear the whole message of the Catholic Church. I wanted him to realize that it would be better if he learned and recognized all that it means to be Catholic.

RCIA is more than an educational program. This program hopes to lead a person to realize that being involved in the Catholic Church would mean a definite change in life. This is about making a decision — a decision for Jesus. This is finding a faith that would radically change a person's whole life. This is about a decision that means a powerful change in life.

Back to Jim. I was curious why he was so definite about his decision. Jim explained to me that he works at the plant in town next to a fellow who is Catholic, and he wants what this fellow has got. Jim has noticed this fellow's faith in so many little things and even big things. I knew who he was talking about, and I knew that this fellow would be rather surprised that he had led someone to become a Catholic. Jim didn't really talk with him, but I know he would have told me that he was just an ordinary Catholic trying to live a good life. This is something for each of us to consider. Can you imagine that you might lead someone to seek entrance into the Catholic Church as you live your Catholic faith each day?
The Lord has been preparing you for ordination, the likes of which we have never seen before. For instance, brothers, you have given Christ-like care and support and then mourned the death of your fellow deacon candidate, Patrick Jank. We keep Mary and their children in our prayers as they mourn the loss of her husband, their father and our friend. Yes, you continue to do the will of God from the heart. It’s been evident in your generous care and heartfelt concern for your classmates and their families who have suffered extraordinary personal health and family difficulties these last few years. Thank you for giving remarkable witness to such compassion and concern for others. The Church is blessed!

COVID 19 continues to be a most unwelcome intruder during your formation, hasn’t it? Yet, you have taken the initiative of using social media for Tuesday evening prayer each week, continuing to this day. You know how essential fraternal support and daily prayer are. Your patience and flexibility have been tested as classes needed to be changed, even canceled, thanks to the pandemic. You rose to the occasion. You did great assisting me at Confirmations throughout our diocese, some of you, more than once, traveling a considerable distance from your home to be there. Although, truth be told, for some of you, at one Confirmation, your care and concern for the physical well-being of your bishop was in doubt. At that solemn Mass, you know that the keeper of the censer left the chain dangling over the hot coals and when your bishop went to grab the chain, an odor of burnt skin filled the sanctuary. But you redeemed yourself. You provided me with proper personal protection equipment: these cotton mitten gloves, to use when certain deacons are assisting me at confirmations in the future. Especially these days, a sense of humor is so important in ministry.

As you know, with the sacrament of Orders, the deacon receives a special “configuration to Christ” through the laying on of hands of the bishop and the prayer of consecration. The deacon is ordained specifically for the exercise of a ministry proper to him that requires a spiritual availability of complete dedication. The deaconate is not a profession, but a mission! As I mentioned earlier – you are a moving force in our local church – men on a mission.

Deacon candidates, like the Apostles, you too must feel impelled to proclaim by word and deed the Resurrection of the Lord Jesus. That’s your charge! You, like the early disciples, must experience the need to do good, to give of yourselves to others in the Name of the Crucified and Risen Jesus - to bring God’s word into the lives of His holy people. The integrity of your ordained ministry, your ability to communicate the Gospel effectively, will depend on your adherence to the faith of the Apostles and your disciplined prayer life.

When discussing Holy Orders as one of the sacraments “at the service of communion,” the Catechism teaches that the two sacraments, Orders and Marriage, “are directed towards the salvation of others: if they contribute as well to personal salvation, it is through service to others that they do so.” My and your holiness is either strengthened or found wanting to the degree that we are engaged in the works of mercy. Our personal holiness depends on and is nourished by our service to others, particularly the most vulnerable among us.

My brothers in Christ, in your diaconal ministry, your wives and the responsibilities that arise from the sacrament of Holy Matrimony do not play second fiddle. The sacred bond that your wife and you established on your wedding day is to be strengthened, not neglected as you fulfill your diocesan responsibilities.

Dear wives, with the Church, I want to express my immense gratitude for the gift of your husbands to the Church’s sacred orders.

Since deacons are ministers of the Word, the Church urges you to constant reading and diligent study of the Sacred Scriptures. As deacons you are called to hear, guard and do the Word of God, in order to proclaim it worthily and effectively. The vocation of the deacon calls you as a child of God, to take the Gospel into your most inmost being and find it worth suffering for. Today you express your willingness to stake everything –on the Gospel. Make your life witness a real YES to the Gospel.

Daily pray the Liturgy of the Hours. This prayer should inform your whole prayer life since deacons, as ministers, intercede for the entire Church. Participate at Mass frequently, even daily, if possible, and spend time in adoration of the Blessed Sacrament.

Possess a deep, filial love and veneration for the Virgin Mary, Mother of God. As you strive to be the servant of the servants of God, turn to Mary, as she continues to proclaim: “I am the handmaid of the Lord.” (Lk 1:38) In the example of her servanthood, see the perfect model of our own call to the discipleship of Lord Jesus Christ and to the service of His Church.

With great pride and gratitude, I join the Church of Ogdensburg confidently believing that your ministry of Word and Charity will bear much fruit. Serve the Church with an ardent love. Go out to all the world and teach all nations. Sing to the Lord a new song; Sing to the Lord; bless His Name!
Sisters celebrate years of faithful service

OGDENSBURG – Bishop Terry R. LaValley celebrated the Marriage & Religious Jubilee Mass on Oct. 3. At that Mass, married couples from around the diocese celebrating anniversaries and consecrated religious celebrating milestone jubilees were honored. Photos of the Mass will be featured in the next edition of the North Country Catholic.

The following sisters marked jubilees in 2020 or 2021 and were honored at the Mass and share their vocation stories:

Sister Diane Marie Ulsamer, SSJ - 50 years

Prior to entering religious life, I was fortunate to have grown up in a traditional German Catholic family. My parents, Robert and Audrey Ulsamer, taught me and my three siblings the value and richness of living the practices and traditions of our faith. Family prayer and worshipping at Saint Boniface Church were integral aspects of our daily life.

In addition, I was privileged to receive a Catholic education from the Sisters of Christian Charity who taught at our parish school. I share this with you because I believe that my vocation was nurtured during this time of my development. It was through family, parish, and the sisters that I began to know and develop a relationship with God.

During junior high school, I began thinking about becoming a sister. I visited the Sisters of Christian Charity often and worked in their hospital as a nurse’s aide my junior and senior year of high school.

Our parish priest encouraged me to look at a variety of other communities. In October of 1968, I came to Watertown to take a look at the Sisters of St. Joseph, mainly because the Sisters were, at that time, involved in ministering to children whose parents were unable to care for them. This ministry intrigued me because most communities I visited were teachers.

I knew nothing about the Sisters of St. Joseph, but on that first visit I knew that this was the community that God was calling me to join. The sisters were spirit-filled, authentically happy, eager to serve the Lord, and very hospitable. That visit was the beginning of my 52-year journey in religious life.

In September of 1969, I entered the community at Mater Dei College in Ogdensburg. I began the formation program for religious life and college courses. After two years, I received my associates degree.

On June 13, 1971, I received the habit and entered the canonical year of study in the community. Religious formation continued for the next six years. During those years as a junior professed sister, I continued my studies and received my bachelor’s degree in education at D’Youville and master’s degree in Early Childhood Education at Nazareth in Rochester. In August of 1978, I made perpetual profession in the chapel at our Motherhouse in Watertown.

For 29 years, my ministry was in Catholic Education. I taught kindergarten through fourth grade, was a music teacher and served three years as principal. Traveling around the diocese, I taught in the following schools: Holy Family in Watertown, St. Mary’s in Ticonderoga, Augustinian Academy in Carthage, Our Lady of the Sacred Heart in Watertown, St. Joseph’s in Malone, Holy Name in AuSable Forks, and Trinity Catholic in Massena. In each school, I was blessed with new opportunities and challenges. Meeting the families around the diocese has truly enriched my life.

In 2001, I left the teaching ministry to serve as the motherhouse superior. At the completion of my term as superior, God directed me toward a new ministry. I became the program coordinator for the Religious Education Program for people with disabilities and the part-time pastoral associate and Religious Education coordinator for Sacred Heart Parish in Watertown. Both ministries offered new challenges and wonderful opportunities to share faith with the elderly, the children of the parish, and my special friends with disabilities. Serving with every individual has been amazing and a journey which has drawn me into a deeper relationship with the Lord.

Throughout the past 50 years, Isaiah 12:2 “The Lord is my strength and my song,” has been a verse that has inspired me. I have been given many challenges, new adventures, and joyful opportunities to live the charism and mission of the Sisters of Saint Joseph. As I moved from one mission to another, there were times when I knew only God’s grace would help me through the day. I have learned that nothing is impossible to accomplish when God is at the center of my day. He has taught me to trust Him, and that sacrifice and suffering are truly a part of the journey. After 50 years as a Sister of St. Joseph, I can proclaim with great confidence and a grateful heart that, “My joy lies in being close to my God.”

Sister Shirley Anne Brown, SSJ - 60 years

“Blessing” and “gift” are the dominant words for the celebration of my 60th jubilee.

The original blessing was my family of origin. Born as the middle child of Catherine and Richard Brown in Fort Covington, I grew up in a family of 10 siblings. This domestic church family was the source of my introduction to God through prayer and sound family life values. It was family that taught me to pray, brought me to the sacraments of youth at St. Mary’s Church, to catechism classes with the Sisters of St. Joseph in the parish and later to boarding school at Immaculate Heart Academy. I graduated from IHA in 1961.

My vocation was born in and nurtured by my family. Blessings continued as I entered the Sisters of St. Joseph in Watertown. It was here that the opportunities for a deepening spirituality were provided along with an appreciation of the charism of the Sisters of St. Joseph. This time provided me with the foundation for the many ways that this charism could and would be lived out in my life in the Church in the years that followed as a vowed member of the community.

I was also blessed and gifted by the sisters with an excellent academic education, with opportunities to study and earn degrees at Potsdam and Plattsburgh State Universities, as well as at Boston College.

Blessings and gifts continue to flow during 50 years of engaging in Catholic education in the dioceses of Ogdensburg and Syracuse. Through the years as teacher, principal and assistant superintendent, I have journeyed with countless students, parents and colleagues.

During the last seven years, I have been blessed by ministry as a pastoral associate and to have the opportunity to enrich the spiritual life of parishioners as they have in turn enriched mine.

For all of the many people who have walked with me on this journey of life, I give thanks for giving me a glimpse into the multifaceted beauty of God in our midst.

Sister Mary Juliana Raymond, SSJ - 60 years

The first daughter of Frederick and Shirley Lynch Raymond, I was born in Ticonderoga and lived in Tahawus, a small mining town in the heart of the Adirondacks.

My family, friends, church and community nourished my vocation. I am grateful!

I attended Newcomb Central School. For grades kindergarten through three, school was in Tahawus, and grades four through 12 were in Newcomb. Classes were small, and great emphasis was placed on local high peaks history, the source of the Hudson River and our Adirondack environment.

My immediate family consisted of my parents, three sisters and a brother. I had grandparents, aunt, uncles and cousins nearby. I was baptized in the church and community nourished my vocation. I am grateful!

I received my bachelor's degree in English and a master's degree in Education at SUNY Potsdam, where I earned a bachelor's degree in English and a master's degree in Early Childhood. Advanced studies included summer courses from the Gesell Institute of Child Development in New Haven, Connecticut.

In the Diocese of Ogdensburg Catholic Schools, I taught first grade for 36 years. For the past nine years, I have served in diocesan Campus Ministry as College Chaplain at Jefferson Community College in Watertown, where I also serve as an instructor in Early Childhood Development.

In addition to teaching at the elementary and college levels, I have been a member of the diocesan Ecumenical Commission; summer faculty at Mater Dei College; elementary school principal; volunteer prison chaplain's assistant weekly for three years during the tenure of the late Father William Connor, MSC, and have participated in many committees in schools, towns and the community.

My early introduction to our earth as gift has been the inspiration for countless nature workshops, as well as gardening, bread making, creative sewing, craft classes and, in recent years, sharing my rich Adirondack heritage by teaching others how to make traditional Adirondack backpacks. My family, friends, Church and community nourished my vocation. I am grateful!

Sister Judy Adams, SSJ – 60 years

Sister Judy Adams is a Watertown native. I served as a graduate of the late John and Jean Adams. Sister Judy attended Bishop Conroy Grade School, St. Mary's Academy and Mater Dei College all in Ogdensburg. She received her bachelor's degree from SUNY Potsdam and a master's degree from Manhattan College.

Sister Judy has taught in many of our Catholic Schools throughout the diocese, and served as principal of Sacred Heart School in Watertown, as well as St. Peter's School in Lowville.

In the past, she was elected to the General Administration Council of the Sisters of St. Joseph.

Sister Judy served in Massena at Trinity Catholic School for many years, as the science and technology coordinator.

Presently, Sister Judy is involved in Prayer Ministry at the Motherhouse in Watertown.

Sister Carol Louise Kraeger, SSJ – 60 years

I was born on a dairy farm in Port Leyden, the third oldest of 10 children. I went to public school, but both parents instilled in us the importance of religion and caring for others.

At 17, I entered the Sisters of St. Joseph. I was in the first group to enter the community at Mater Dei College in Ogdensburg. Along with 14 others, I received the habit on June 24, 1961.

I traveled throughout the diocese teaching in the elementary grades. Then in 2004, I was hired as the parish minister (associate) at St. John's Parish in Lake Clear. I was very happy working with the people of that community, which included 40 to 50 people attending Sunday Mass. In 2017 we had the sad experience of closing the doors of St. John's Church. The church property was sold. The pastor, Father Martin Cline was able to offer a special memorial Mass for the last time at St. John's Church.

In the fall of 2020, I moved from my two-floor, seven-room house – once St. John's rectory – to a studio apartment just three houses down the road from the rectory. Someone once told me, "Don't be sad that it's over, be happy that it happened."

I am very happy and, thankfully, I am still ministering to the people of Lake Clear and Saranac Lake. I visit the homebound, the sick in the hospital and those in nursing homes. I take them Communion and ensure they are cared for spiritually and physically. I am happy to help Father Cline in whatever he may need.

As I get older, I can see how Jesus has been my faithful spouse throughout these years. I feel that He has saved the best 'til last. I have never been happier than now, when I am here serving the people of the mountains in the Diocese of Ogdensburg.

Sister Cecilia Marie Hermann, SSJ – 60 years

I received the habit of the Sisters of St. Joseph 60 years ago. God has been very good to me. He blessed me with a wonderful family. My parents, Adolf and Anna Hermann, five brothers – two of them are deceased – and four sisters (one died in infancy). I have many nieces and nephews that have added a great deal of joy to my life.

My parents provided me with 12 years of Catholic education at Our Lady of the Sacred Heart School and Sacred Heart Academy. I am grateful to my mother and father, to the Sisters of St. Joseph who taught me, and to the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart who were a major influence in my early years.

I am also grateful to the diocesan priests, and the lay teachers with whom I have worked. It has been a blessing for me to live with the Sisters of St. Joseph for 60 years.

My ministry has been Catholic school education. I am happy to pass on to our young people what was given to me. As I said, God has been so good to me! On the occasion of my jubilee, I thank God for His many graces and blessings, and I pray for all the people who have been a part of my life.

Sister Mary Gregory Munger, pictured here giving a musical presentation about vocations to students, celebrates 60 years as a Sister of St. Joseph.

Sister Mary Ellen Brett, SSJ – 60 Years

I was born in Watertown, the oldest of four children to Mary (Tooley) and Kenneth W. Brett. My siblings are John (deceased), Kenneth Jr. and Jane Ted. All of us attended St. Mary's School, St. Joseph's, Gouverneur, St. James, and Mater Dei College.

As a family, we were members of Holy Family Parish. I graduated from Holy Family School and Immaculate Heart Academy.

I entered the Sisters of St. Joseph for a six month trial. In my 60th year as a Sister of St. Joseph, I'm grateful that the Lord captured my heart.

I received my bachelor's and master's degrees in Education from Potsdam State University. I enjoyed my years of teaching in the Catholic Schools in St. James, Gouverneur, St. Agnes, Lake Placid, St. Augustine's, Peru, St. Joseph's, Dannemora and Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, Watertown. I always looked forward to teaching in the Religious Education programs in those respective parishes.

Further education through the Institute for Pastoral Life in Kansas City, Missouri, and the Paulist National Catholic Evangelization (PNCEA) in Washington, D.C., enabled me to minister through the diocesan Offices for Formation for Ministry and Evangelization.

NORTH COUNTRY CATHOLIC

Celebrating 60, 70 years

A highlight of my life was my visit to St. Martin de Porres Parish, Molendo, Peru at the invitation of Father George Maroun, then director of the Society for the Propagation of the Faith. The Peru experience showed me that the happiest people don't necessarily have the best of everything; Peruvians just made the best of everything. This reminder has been a blessing in my current Mission Office ministry.

Several years of my life have happily found me residing at the Motherhouse, ministering to our infirmed sisters. I'm very grateful to be working with St. Mary's, Copenhagen parishioners and community responding to the Lord's surprises that daily come into my life. Everyday is a gift. Just imagine the gifts in 60 years.

Sister Mary Gregory Munger, SSJ – 60 Years

My journey to become a Sister of St. Joseph began in Newark, New Jersey, where I was born and received my early education from the Sisters of St. Joseph of Chestnut Hill, Pennsylvania. I was the oldest of three children. Following my family's move to Alexandria Bay, I attended Saint Mary's Elementary School in Clayton and Immaculate Heart Academy in Watertown.

I entered the Sisters of St. Joseph in 1960, receiving my early college education at Mater Dei College. In subsequent years, I earned a bachelor's degree in Science from SUNY Potsdam, a master's degree in music from Catholic University of America and a master's degree in Administration/Supervision from Boston College.

My teaching ministry spans over 50 years. During that time, I taught science, math and music at the junior and senior high levels in Catholic schools throughout the diocese. I taught college level courses in computer related fields at both Boston College and SUNY Potsdam, and GED courses at the Cape Vincent Correctional Facility.

I served as principal at St. James School in Gouverneur, St. Patrick's School in Watertown and Most Holy Rosary School in Syracuse.

I have served on a number of committees, including the diocesan Liturgical Committee, an Interdiocesan Music Curriculum Committee, numerous Middles States Evaluation teams and currently am a member of the National Religious Vocation Conference. Presently I am Vocation Director for the Sisters of St. Joseph.

I am most grateful for God's call to the Sisters of St. Joseph and to those who have supported and nurtured my vocation especially my family, the members of my community and friends.

Sister Mary Denise Wilke, RSM – 70 years

I was born and raised in Manhattan, NYC. My life in those years was centered in our parish, Good Shepherd nearby and the Paulist Fathers.

I entered the Sisters of Mercy right after I completed high school on September 9, 1957. My parents were accepting, even though it was hard, as I was an only child. My father was not Catholic, but both of them was supportive.

I went to Marymount in Tarrytown for my bachelor's degree and then to Fordham University for my master's degree in Social Work. My first assignment was at St. Michael's Home on Staten Island. It was ahome for 280 children, ages 3 to 18. I loved the children and missed them when I was reassigned to the North Country. I spent five and a half years at Uihlein Mercy Center a new Nursing Home, where I was the first social worker. Following this, I was director of Social Work in our hospital (St. Francis) in Port Jervis, and remained there for 22-1/2 years. At that time, I was elected to leadership in my community, and for four years, I was in charge of senior sisters who were living on the top of Sacred Heart High School in Yonkers. Following this, I had a wonderful sabbatical which included a trip to Ireland and our Foundation House in Dublin. I also went to Rome and had the privilege of Mass in Pope John II Chapel. Such a blessing!

I then returned to the North Country to Uihlein Nursing Home. This time in Pastoral Care. I am in my 19th year.

Those 70 years were filled with many graces and blessings and much happiness. I thank God.
Meet the newly ordained deacons

ODGENSBURG— On October 2, through the laying on of hands and the invocation of the Holy Spirit, Bishop LaValley ordained to the Order of Deacon Randy Besio, Gerald Bouchard, Brent Davison, Daniel LeRoy, Michael Lieber Jr., Kenneth Lushia, Roderick Roca, Lee Trudeau, Robert Uttendorfsky, Noel Voos, Mark Webster and Peter Woolschlager. This weekend, on Saturday, Oct. 9, Bishop LaValley will ordain James P. Carlin and Leagon J. Carlin to the Order of the Deacon at 10 a.m. at St. Peter’s Church in Plattsburgh, New York. James Carlin will serve as a permanent deacon, while his son, Leagon, is a seminarian for the Diocese of Ogdensburg and will be a transitional deacon. That Mass will also be livestreamed at rcdony.org/ordination.

Below, meet some of the men who were ordained to the diaconate.

Full coverage of the ordination will be in the next edition of the North Country Catholic.

Deacon Gerry Bouchard

Family: Married to Michelle Bouchard; two step-daughters, one son, seven grandchildren
Parish: Immaculate Conception in Brownville & St. Andrew’s in Sackets Harbor

How have you changed through your participation in the formation process?
Through the formation process I think I have become a better man, more compassionate, hopefully more patient, and have developed spiritually in a lot of ways.

How will you serve your parish as a deacon?
As a Deacon I will do what my pastor and Bishop ask of me. I am sure I will help out in faith formation in some capacity and assist at Mass, and am prepared for assisting at baptisms, funerals and weddings when needed. Deacons are ministers of charity as well, but exactly what that will entail still remains to be seen.

What are you looking forward to about your new ministry?
I am looking forward to getting better acquainted with parishioners that I will be serving at both parishes.

Deacon Dan LeRoy

Family: Wife, Angie LeRoy; daughters, Soleil, Tamara and Joann; five grandchildren; two great-grandchildren
Parish: St. Paul’s in Black River

How have you changed through your participation in the formation process?
During my time in formation I have learned to wait on the Lord, to be attentive to his voice, and to rest when commands that I do, not just running ahead trying to fulfill his calling before his timing.

How will you serve your parish as a deacon?
Being a small parish I will have the opportunity to serve in many different ways from Communion for the home bound to Baptism’s to assisting my Pastor in whatever way he feels is appropriate so he can be freed up to carry out his calling.

What are you looking forward to about your new ministry?
I am looking forward to serving God through his people. There is nothing in this world more satisfying than to carry out the Lord’s command to Love one another by taking care of each other, no matter who they are.

Deacon Kenneth (Ken) Lushia

Family: My wife, Sandy, and I were married for over 36 years until she died in an automobile accident on March 31, 2009. We have two sons and four grandchildren.
Parish: St. Joseph’s in West Chazy

How have you changed through your participation in the formation process?
This has been a very rewarding experience for me and I have grown to appreciate the Great Love that God has for all of us, and I want to help others to find this Love.

How will you serve your parish as a deacon?
I have had and continue to have a great desire to reach out to and work with the sick and dying (as a hospice volunteer); people in the hospital, nursing homes, home bond, or long term care facilities (as a volunteer Ombudsman); strongly supported for the dignity of life, from conception to natural death.

What are you looking forward to about your new ministry?
I am looking forward to serving the Diocese of Ogdensburg, through the directions of Bishop Terry LaValley and Father Ted Crosby. Father Ted Crosby sponsored and supported me during these years of study for which I shall forever be grateful.

Deacon Noel Voos

Family: Married to Cathy; three sons, Adam, Matthew and Nathaniel; recently learned Nathan and his wife, Shanley, are expecting twin sons in February 2022!
Parish: St. Mary’s in Evans Mills

How have you changed through your participation in the formation process?
The significant change I think was spiritually, learning to trust & relying fully on prayer to seek God’s guiding hand through 4 years of discernment and formation. I found comfort in the prayer of St. Padre Pio - “My past, O Lord, is Your mercy; my present, to Your love; my future to Your providence.” I still do.

How will you serve your parish as a deacon?
Continue to serve as the Religious Education Coordinator; facilitate faith formation/scripture studies; support my brother Knights of Columbus, and at the same time be available to continue to love and support my family.

What are you looking forward to about your new ministry?
Hopefully to become involved in outreach to shut-ins or those confined to home or health support facilities; to find former parishioners who, for whatever reason(s), no longer attend Mass; to be available to other priests in the area to assist at Mass, particularly daily masses. Generally just eager to spread the Gospel to the faithful and to help others gain a better understanding not only of what we profess, but why we profess it.

Honoring those who serve

By Darcy Fargo

MALONE - The rain didn’t dampen the spirit inside Notre Dame Church, as area law enforcement, corrections, fire, medical and dispatch personnel gathered with Bishop Terry R. LaValley and faithful from around the diocese to celebrate the Blue Mass on Sept. 26.

In addition to a color guard of law enforcement joining the processional, the Mass included the laying of a wreath in honor of those who lost their lives serving others, as well as a ceremonial bell tolling. Franklin County Sheriff Kevin Mulverhill and Brushton Volunteer Fire Department Assistant Chief Dominic Barse served as lectors for the Mass.

In his homily, Bishop Terry R. LaValley pointed to the readings of the day, in which Joshua “didn’t want to believe that God could work through Eldad and Medad, those two Israelites who were left behind in the camp,” and Jesus’ disciples “didn’t want to believe that God could work through someone who hadn’t received their own seal of approval.”

“Both Joshua and the disciples of Jesus were guilty of throwing roadblocks in the path of God as God made the divine glory known among His people,” Bishop LaValley said. “We are guilty of doing the same when we insist that God can act only in ways that God has revealed to us, when we think that we have a monopoly on God’s grace or an exclusive recipe for how people should be. We make others stumble over our roadblocks when we say to them in our words and actions, ‘If you will jump through my particular hoop or sign on my particular dotted line, then and only then will I certify you as worthy of my acceptance.’ What violence and just plain meanness we have seen in our streets because of this rugged independence. The women and men we honor today place themselves in harm’s way because we refuse to get along.”

Bishop LaValley noted that we are different, but still loved by God.

“You see, the way that God chooses to work in me may be very different from the way that God works in you, and that’s ok, because we think, speak, act and pray differently,” he said. “God made us to be different, but still accomplishing His good purposes in all of us. And that means that each of us gives glory to God as God works in us.”

Blue Mass Chairperson and Sheriff’s Office Chaplain Father Christopher C. Carrara thanked the involved agencies, volunteers and Bishop LaValley for their participation.

“It’s my privilege to acknowledge and thank all the individuals and groups that assisted in making our 2021 Blue Mass a success,” he said. “In particular, though, I would like to thank Bishop LaValley for his ongoing support of our first responders particularly in establishing and maintaining the Blue Mass, the members of the Blue Mass Committee... and the success of the celebration certainly is attributed to a great extent to local support we receive – members of local planning committee who are extremely generous in logistical support, enthusiasm and support of the Mass.”
New York Bishops express opposition to abortion bill

Following is the text of a letter sent from Timothy Cardinal Dolan and the Diocesan Bishops of New York State to U.S. Senators Chuck Schumer and Kirsten Gillibrand regarding the so-called "Women's Health Protection Act."

Dear Senator,

As the Bishops of the eight Catholic dioceses of the State of New York, we write to express our unified and staunch opposition to S1975/HR3755, the "Women's Health Protection Act," a piece of legislation that would impose upon the entire nation a policy of unrestricted abortion on demand, for any reason, at any point in pregnancy, going well beyond the parameters of Roe v. Wade and subsequent Supreme Court decisions.

We are under no illusions. We know that on the matter of abortion policy, our views are radically disparate from yours. Nevertheless, we believe we have an obligation to speak out as a voice for the unborn, as well as for pregnant mothers who deserve so much more than this bill offers them. This legislation sends a message to women that abortion is their only option and their best hope, that it is something to be promoted and celebrated.

The truth is that abortion is something to be mourned, and it is often the most agonizing decision a woman will ever make. We believe our government should be offering pregnant women all of their options and the support services they need to empower them to choose to carry their babies to term, raise their families with dignity, or offer their child to a home which can appropriately and lovingly care for that child. Our public policies should reflect these priorities.

Here in New York State, our state legislature enacted the "Reproductive Health Act" in 2019, enshrining in state statute a policy of unlimited abortion on demand throughout nine months of pregnancy. We expressed our profound opposition at the time, and we continue to grieve for the mothers and infants harmed by this law.

But a majority of states in this great country have enacted laws to the contrary: policies to allow parents to be notified when their minor daughter is considering abortion; to provide informed consent to pregnant women; to prohibit state taxpayer funding of abortion; to require health and safety regulations in clinics; to require licensure and certification of abortion providers. All of these policies are allowable under Roe and subsequent cases. Yet all such policies would be invalidated in one fell swoop by Congressional passage of S1975. This authoritarian federal overreach undermines the will of the people through their elected state representatives, and does not bode well for our democracy.

Moreover, S1975 may very well nullify New York's strong Civil Rights Law protection for health care professionals who do not wish to be involved in abortion, a law which so many rely upon to exercise their moral values and religious freedom. Is this how we want to repay our heroic health care workers who have served so valiantly throughout the ongoing pandemic?

In closing, we strongly urge you to reject this legislation and work to protect and strengthen the fundamental human rights of mothers and children.

Very Truly Yours,

Pew report: Social hostility toward religion down

WASHINGTON (CNS) — Social hostilities against religious believers and churches dipped in 2019, according to a Pew Research Center report issued Sept. 30.

Government hostilities toward religion, though, remained at their highest level since Pew started conducting this research a decade ago.

In 2019, 43 countries had either "high" or "very high" levels of social hostilities, down from 53 countries in 2018, and down from a peak of 65 countries in 2012, the report said.

On the government side, 180 countries had at least one instance, at some level, of government harassment against religious groups, compared with 175 countries in 2018. But 75 countries had either high or very high levels of overall restrictions on religion in 2019, down from 80 in 2018.

"We do see more fluctuations over the years with ups and downs," said Samirah Majumdar, a Pew research associate and the primary researcher for the study. "Social hostilities are based more on incidents, while government hostilities are based on broad politics that don’t tend to change as much over time."

Government interference in worship ranges from withholding permission for religious activities or prohibiting particular religious practices at any level of government, such as worship activities, wearing religious attire, adhering to grooming customs such as maintaining a beard, conscientious objection to military service, the use of certain substances in worship and following ritual burial practices.

One example cited in the report: "In Slovenia, where animal slaughter without prior stunning is prohibited, Muslims and Jews are not allowed to slaughter animals according to halal and kosher dietary guidelines."

In 2019, 49 countries experienced at least some form of religion-related terrorism, "a record low for the study," Pew said. That compares to 64 countries in 2018, and a record high of 82 in 2014, when the Islamic State was wreaking havoc in the Middle East and Boko Haram was plaguing Nigeria and neighboring nations.

Pew, for the first time, started tracking the use of technology to harass religious practices, "as well as the governmental use of new or advanced technologies such as surveillance cameras, facial recognition technology or biometric data to restrict or surveil religious groups," it said.

In China, Pew said, "the state installed surveillance equipment in churches, mosques, a synagogue and other houses of worship; the government also used facial recognition technology to monitor and collect biometric data on Uighur Muslims and other groups deemed to be potential threats. Authorities in Xinjiang also required Uighurs to install software on their phones to monitor their calls and messages."

Majumdar said the 2022 report would include more detail on online harassment, as it will be able to compare 2020’s figures – the focus of next year’s study – with those of 2019.

Pew looks at 196 countries, and does not exclude the United States, using U.S. hate crime statistics and Justice Department publications on freedom of religion and belief cases, but also at internationally-based sources, Majumdar said.
NEW YORK (CNS) -- Not so much a prequel to "The Sopranos" than a richly textured origin story of Tony Soprano, "The Many Saints of Newark" (Warner Bros.) will be a matter of details first episode of the series, from a career of crime and continuously denied the of the late James Gandolfini, who created the origin story of Tony Soprano, 'The Many Saints of Newark." This, in turn created the pensive adult who, in the first episode of the series, told his therapist that he was convinced his father had an easier life.

This, screenwriters David Chase and Lawrence Konner and director Alan Taylor showed us, was just Tony’s protective fantasy. Tony’s father, Johnny Boy (Jon Bernthal), is mostly absent even when not incarcerated, and the principal male influence in his life is Dickie Moltisanti (Alessandro Nivola), a mobster with frightening lurches into lethal violence. His depressed mother, Livia (Vera Farmiga), is emotionally absent.

The story is set in the late 1960s and early ‘70s in Newark, New Jersey, beginning with the 1967 retting that nearly destroyed the city and laid its endemic racism bare.

Some historical facts are now so obscure that the script compels characters to explain how a numbers racket – an illegal and highly lucrative lottery – worked. This was the basis of the mobsters’ empire in Newark before state-sponsored lotteries were established.

Fighting for a share of the numbers action is Harold (Leslie Odom Jr.), a payment collector for Dickie who starts his own organization, resulting in a gang war.

Women in this saga exist only as doomed characters, including Livia and Giuseppina (Michela De Rossi), the naïve Italian bride of "Hollywood Dick" Moltisanti (Ray Liotta). This being a "Sopranos" story, there is a steady stream of whackings by gunfire as characters expend their usefulness to the plot.

Tony is mostly left to fend for himself with petty crimes such as hijacking an ice-cream truck and stealing high school tests in advance.

When his high school counselor points out to Livia that Tony is, in fact, considered highly intelligent, Livia sighs, "There is a big difference between a smart person and a smart aleck."

And that’s about as introspective as this sad story gets.

The film contains pervasive gun and physical violence, a scene of torture, fleeing upper female nudity, brief scenes of sexual activity, pervasive racial slurs and pervasive rough language. The Catholic News Service classification is A-III – adults. The Motion Picture Association rating is R – restricted. Under 17 requires accompanying parent or adult guardian.

SCRIPTURE REFLECTIONS

‘Why did God make me?’

Many of us still remember the simple catechism question, “Why did God make me?” The answer is fundamental to this Sunday’s readings: “God make me to know Him, to love Him, to serve Him in this life, and to be happy forever in the next.”

The first reading tells us how in more details. “It is not good for the man to be alone. I will make a suitable partner for him.” What follows is how God did this. We must know how to respond to this. God gave us the tools. What kind of a life is He calling us to? It is most importantly in the spiritual order – to use our minds and our wills in the way that follows God’s plan for our happiness. We have to know that plan and follow it. We have to learn wisdom in order to love what He loves. We cannot do this without the help of God’s grace. A good prayer for us is “What do you want of me, Lord?” God will answer our prayers. He has given us His law, His commandments. God didn’t give them without thinking. In His wisdom, He knows that they are essential for both natural and supernatural happiness.

Since we’re flawed and imperfect, we need to share with others our struggles. As we learn from them, they learn from us. We learn from experience what is right and what is wrong – what is good and what is evil. All in all, it’s a lifelong journey toward happiness.

Today’s Gospel probes the unique qualities of both a man and of woman. In Jesus’ teaching on marriage, He knows that physical attraction draws a man and woman together. And He knows that spiritual fatherhood and spiritual motherhood are essential for the kind of marriage that He intended. Both are necessary for the sacrifice needed for mutual growth and support.

A woman has the unique quality of bearing with pain and suffering and sorrow. This is the way God makes her. A woman as a woman can love pour out herself in love, give totally without reserve.

St. Paul tells a husband to love his wife as he loves his own body. “And to two shall be one.” This is meant to last during their natural lives.

God intends only this kind of marriage. If it is obvious that the man and woman either did not intend or are not capable of such a marriage, when a marriage doesn’t measure up to God’s standards, the Church by the authority of God Himself, can grant an annulment.

Called to Serve

There’s no such thing as coincidence

The most common vocations questions are, “how did you guys meet?” and “what made you want to become a ______?”

Here you fill in the blank. The blank word might be priest, deacon, sister, brother, steamfitter, hairdresser... whatever.

Single people have to put-up with the downright offensive statement/question, “Oh, you never got married, huh?”

Most of us probably cannot recall a moment that caused us to choose one way of life over another. Few of us have the experience Saul did on the road to Damascus when God mapped out the future St. Paul’s journey by getting his attention with a two by four.

Our path in life is often a bunch of little things that pile-up to finally reach the light bulb of our future and turn it on.

The prophet Jeremiah wrote “before I formed you in the womb I knew you, before you were born I dedicated you, a prophet to the nations I appointed you.”

Sounds like we were predestined by God. But “sister said” back in my grade school days that we Catholics reject predestination since God blessed man with free will.

We could argue predestination and free will all day. God knows the answer. That’s the point, God knows.

God knew Kathy and I would meet in high school many years ago and still be a couple 58 years later – 51 of them married.

As I write this, the New York Yankees have a two-game lead in the playoff race over the Boston Red Sox. God knows who will get in, but I doubt He is concerned with such matters.

What we do with our individual lives is of more than passing interest to God, I think.

After all, as the psalmist wrote, “It was you who created my being, knit me together in my mother’s womb.”

I hope God blessed the 12 men who stood before Bishop LaValley last weekend to profess their obedience to him, to live a life of prayer and to remain celibate, if not currently married, or if they survive their wife.

God blessed their families too, we pray.

Two other men will respond to the same promises this coming weekend. But the occasion begs the notion that God had more than a passing interest in this one. Saturday in Plattsburgh, Leagon Carlin will be ordained a deacon of the Church as he continues his preparation to become a priest of the diocese. At the same ceremony, Leagon’s father, James Carlin, will be ordained a permanent deacon of the diocese.

Think about all the stars that had to align perfectly for that to happen. As Jethro Gibbs says on NCIS, “there is no such thing as coincidence.”

And think about what is going through Beth’s mind. Beth Carlin will watch as her husband and son become deacons of the Church on the same day. It took more than luck to bring those two creations of God together for ordination. What a day.

“God is good, all the time. All the time, God is good.”

Thanking those who answer God’s call
By Alexis Michael
Secretary/Bookkeeper
Mission Office

The Mission Office would like to thank all of those who answered God’s call to enter consecrated life. Your selfless “yes” to the Lord has blessed so many lives and will continue to bless many more. Consecrated men and women give both tangible and intangible necessities to the poor of the world. They give food and water, but also love and hope.

I would especially like to thank our director, Sister Mary Ellen Brett, SSJ, for her hard work and dedication to the missions and the loving kindness you show every day. The Mission Office would not be what it is without you.

This week, we would like to highlight the life of Saint Theresa of Calcutta and her call to serve the poor. Saint Theresa was born Agnes Gonxha Bojaxhiu in 1910 in Skopje, Republic of Macedonia. She felt the call to consecrate her life at the age of 12 and officially joined the Sisters of Loreto in Dublin and took the name Sister Mary Teresa at 18. She was transferred to India and 9 years later took her Final Profession of Vows.

There she served as a teacher and then principal of a girl’s school in Calcutta, India. In 1946, while riding a train to a retreat, Saint Theresa felt another call, this time to serve the poorest of the poor.

It took a year and a half to receive permission for her to leave her convent, and in 1950 Missionaries of Charity were officially recognized as a congregation.

Saint Theresa established multiple clinics and houses to care for those with highly infectious diseases all over the world and earned many recognitions and awards her work.

She died in 1997 at the age of 87 and was canonized 19 years later in 2016.

Like father, like son: Carlins to be ordained together
By Mary Beth Bracy
Contributing Writer

PLattsburgh – “It will be beautiful to be ordained with my dad,” said Leagon Carlin, seminarian for the Diocese of Ogdensburg. “My mother will be crying from beginning to end, constantly.”

On October 9, Leagon Carlin will be ordained a transitional deacon and his father, James Carlin, will be ordained as a permanent deacon. The ordination will be celebrated by Bishop Terry R. LaValley at the Carlin’s home Church of St. Peter’s in Plattsburgh.

At the suggestion of Bishop LaValley, Leagon’s ordination was delayed for a few months to allow for this opportunity.

SEEDS OF VOCATION

Leagon shared that his “seeds of priestly vocation were planted very, very early.” He was baptized at St. Peter’s and, when he was in second grade, Father Bryan Stitt, then newly ordained, arrived at the parish.

Leagon said he was “struck” by Father Stitt’s “youthful energy... Something in the way that Father Bryan celebrated Mass caused me to believe that there was something more than meets the eye.”

Leagon’s vocation was also nourished by his pastors and regular attendance at Mass, and he experienced significant growth in his faith attending Camp Guggenheim, the diocesan summer camp.

“Guggenheim was really a place of flowering,” Leagon continued. He first attended the camp when he was around 14. By that point, he’d been looking at the priesthood for some time, although he also had another career path in mind.

Leagon said camp was “fun, engaging,” and he was “around people (he) liked to be with,” yet “detached from noise of the world.”

Leagon said he experienced God’s guidance “not in some thundercloud or presence, but in peace of the heart, that the Lord was asking me to give this vocation a try, [to have] an openness and an action to the vocation of the priesthood.”

Growing up, Leagon read a lot about the faith, the reality and teachings of the Church. Guggenheim made those teachings and his relationship with the Lord come alive. He said camp helped him to have a “greater knowledge that Christ was not just an idea but an actual person.”

“That relationship helped bring me out of legalism and into that relational reality with Christ. Without that, my vocation would have been a burden as opposed to a gift.”

“One of the most formative aspects” of his time at Guggenheim, Leagon explained, “was returning to Confession for the first time” since he made his first Confession. “That literally changed my life, the structure and the way that I saw the world. It was the reality of my sins being wiped away and myself being transformed back into the purity that I had as a child. It was a real moment of encounter; it definitely changed my outlook and worldview.”

DIFFERENT PATH, SAME DESTINATION

James noted that his first and main vocation was as a parent and, as his children got older and their needs were fewer, he began serving in the North Country through the Lions Club, Habitat for Humanity, and as president of the local Red Cross.

While he said he saw his volunteer roles as “great opportunities to serve the public,” those roles “never filled the hole that was inside of me. Noise of world doesn’t always allow us to focus on that call.”

When James had an opportunity to go on a mission trip to Nicaragua, he worked at an orphanage in the mountains with religious sisters. He described having a “startling revelation,” while one of the sisters was talking.

“It was as though it was not her looking back at me,” he said, adding he believes Christ told him, “this is where I need you to be, where I want you to be, and this is what I want from you.”

James said he would have been skeptical of such an experience before, but he then realized that God was calling him to into His service.

Service in Church became more important to James, and he became a commissioned lay minister, and then entered the deacon formation program. Leagon’s path went...

from academic to service, James explained, and his went from service to theology and philosophy.

THE ROLE OF FAMILY IN A Vocation

Leagon recalled that from a very early age his parents, James and Beth, especially his father, instilled in him a “real dedication to service.” Even when it wasn’t overtly religious, and he was “more trouble than help,” they let him “tag along” to volunteer. Whether “going to help Nana or a family member, dad was always working in that way for other people.”

From that example, Leagon said he learned that the “only way to live a fulfilled life is to live it for other people. The Church makes it very clear that we should live a life of sacrifice, service for others.”

His experience in Nicaragua – he traveled there with his parents – also helped this to blossom, “rebuilding faith in humanity and in the Church itself... especially the adorable Nicaraguan kids and their real faith and immense joy even though their situation was so low from our perspective.”

James also noted, though, that Leagon helped to reinvigorate his parents’ life in the Church, by keeping them going to Mass and seeing its point in their lives. Seeing what Leagon has gone through in his discernment and studies helped James in his diaconate studies, the father said.

Leagon highlighted the fact that he and his father are experiencing the approach to their ordinations differently.

"Coming up to the diaconate ordination I am reflecting on the permanence of this choice," Leagon said. "It’s a little different for dad, who is married and has made a lot of decisions in life that are irreversible; nothing I’ve done up to this point is irreversible. I could go somewhere else, do something else, start an entirely new path. It is the first thing that I have ever done which is permanent. It is terrifying and inspiring, wonderful in the traditional sense of that word."

Although he and his father “both come from very different paths,” Leagon concluded, they are “coming to this point of permanent decision. The same thing is being asked of us in that moment. This is what we desire and for the Church to accept us as we come. We have the same end: the salvation of souls.”

SAYING ‘YES’ TO GOD

The elder of the two Carlins noted that his initial “yes” to God’s call came with conditions.

“When I told God ‘I don’t want to speak, I just want to serve as I want to serve,’ [He said] ‘I will take you and I will do with you what I want,’” remembered James. “Slowly He works with us on our vocations on a path where we are going to be walking with Him – if you continue to say yes and walk with an open mind and an open heart. I look back and wonder how I got to where I am now. Hopefully to be able to serve Him. God takes us on a journey.”

James said the Diocese of Ogdensburg faith community also nurtured him. The family’s parish, St. Peter’s, brought “comfort, friendship, and faith, along this journey.”

James said wouldn’t be where he is without their pastors and associate priests.

“They have all given beautiful testimony for a life lived in Christ, the parishioners are a wonderful welcoming group,” he said. “And [we are blessed with] the witness of our bishop. Seeing Christ and Holy Spirit allows them to do positive things. It’s beautiful.”

James said he is grateful for the diaconate program. His classmates were ordained Oct. 2 in a separate Mass held in St. Mary’s Cathedral.

"Those men and classes have taken time and basicaly shown us how to live a Christian life,” he said. “Those are my brothers. They strengthen each other through their shared experience and bond together. Without that community of men, I wouldn’t have made it through. I love each and every one. Those men, the quiet times after class, the struggles, them helping you understand things that you didn’t quite grasp, and you helping them understand. We will all be ordained individual deacons, but we are one.”

President of the North Country Mission of Hope, James said he is thankful for his family’s “help throughout this whole process.” His duties require him to be away frequently on weekends, and he said his wife, Beth, “picks up the slack.”

"She made it possible for me to follow this path and vocation," James said. “She never hesitated and carries the brunt of home life. She never complains and always supports anything that I want or am called to do in pursuit of that vocation (or for Leagon).”

Leagon concurred.

“My mother has always been there in her steadfastness in positivity, kindness, and sacrifice,” he said. “She is someone to call and share difficulties with.”

James’ advice to those seeking God’s will is “Always open yourself to saying yes.” It’s “not easy, never a perfect time. But there’s never a time to say no. Allow yourself to say yes and see where it will take you. At least entertain it and give yourself the opportunity to say yes and to see where Christ is taking you: ‘This is what I want with you and how to pursue service in My name.’ Saying yes to God and working on our relationship with Christ will inform and improve every relationship you have in your life: wife, kids, coworkers, [it will have a] positive impact on you and all of your other relationships in life.”

His preparation for the priesthood has also shown Leagon an enriching “Friendship with men that is fruitful and an actual sharing of life, not gushy, but a sharing of the depth of your heart with other men on the same journey as you. It’s not a friendship that is found in many other areas of society between men.” Leagon said that his relationship with the priests of his diocese is a “real source of consolation, friendship and fraternity... [one of the] gifts in my life.”

“Saying yes to God, giving Him the yes that He asks of you will never leave you wanting in reward,” Leagon concluded. “A yes to God’s invitation is always going to make us happier, more fulfilled, more completely ourselves. Don’t be afraid. Human persons are called to relationship with each other. That relationship is a reflection of the relationship we’re called to with God the Father and His Son, Christ incarnate. Entering into that personal relationship with God will have only positive benefits.”

James Carlin and his son, Leagon, serve a Mass together in Port Henry. The two Carlins will be ordained as deacons together on Oct. 9. James will serve as a permanent deacon, while Leagon, a seminarian for the diocese, will continue on in his formation for the priesthood.
