Follow Me:
Vaccine divide should not spill into our pews

In this week’s Follow Me, Bishop Terry R. LaValley asks the faithful of the North Country to remember Gospel values as they interact with those who may espouse differing opinions on COVID vaccines.

“We are a welcoming and supportive community of faith. When differences arise, we show patience, understanding and compassion. Let us continue to pray for our families as we meet all the challenges in staying healthy and supporting one another in the midst of this pandemic.”

Pope: Only Jesus reveals the true Gospel

VATICAN CITY (CNS) – The true Gospel has been revealed by Jesus Christ, not by individuals or founders of movements, Pope Francis said during his weekly general audience.

“With the truth of the Gospel, one cannot negotiate. Either you receive the Gospel as it is, as it was announced,” or one embraces something else, he said Aug. 4 to those gathered in the Paul VI audience hall at the Vatican.

“One cannot compromise. Faith in Jesus is not a bargaining chip; it is salvation, it is encounter, it is redemption. It cannot be sold off cheaply,” said the pope, as he led his first general audience since his colon surgery July 4 and after the usual suspension of general audiences for the month of July.

Continuing with a new catechesis series reflecting on St. Paul’s Letter to the Galatians, Pope Francis focused on the apostle’s insistence that the faithful be loyal to the Gospel Jesus preached and not be swayed by new missionaries who “wish to pervert the Gospel of Christ.”

St. Paul understands the need to keep the young community safe from that which threatens its foundations, that is, a new “gospel,” which is “perhaps more sophisticated, more intellectual,” but which distorted “the true Gospel because it prevents (people) from attaining the freedom acquired by arriving at faith,” the pope said, emphasizing the key here was “freedom.”

The true proclamation is “that of the death and resurrection of Jesus as the source of salvation,” he said. “Whoever accepts it is reconciled to God, is welcomed as a true son or daughter and receives the inheritance of eternal life.”

Instead, some of the Galatians seemed to be veering off onto another path: listening to new missionaries who think “by circumcision they will be even more pleasing to Paul,” the pope said. They seem to be “inspired by fidelity to the tradition received from the fathers and believe that genuine faith consists in observing the law.”

St. Paul, therefore, seems unorthodox with regard to tradition, but he knows “that his mission is of a divine nature – it was revealed by Christ himself, to him” as something that is radically and always new, the pope said.

Today, let us continue our consideration of John 6. As you remember, the Gospel readings at Mass on the Sundays of August are all from John 6, the section is called Jesus’ discourse on the Bread of Life. So, each and every Catholic Church throughout the whole world is studying John 6 this month, studying the sacrament of the Holy Eucharist. John 6 is a very important reading of scripture that we, Catholics, gather for Eucharist - a message that we, as Catholics, receive the gift of the Eucharist - a spiritual and sacramental Eucharist - a spiritual and sacramental gift of Jesus. Jesus is our Bread of heaven. Jesus, ever present in the Eucharist, is the living bread who came from heaven. Jesus tells them the true bread from heaven is himself. We recognize that the “bread from heaven” is Jesus coming to us in the Blessed Eucharist. John 6, the section is called Jesus’ discourse on the Bread of Life, and for this we are grateful. Thank you, Lord, for your presence in our Mass, in our sacrament of the Holy Eucharist. In John 6, Jesus helps us to understand so much of his life and message - a message that we, Catholics, believe in the real presence of Jesus in the consecrated bread and wine at Mass – the Eucharist. For us this is our bread from heaven. To receive the gift of the Eucharist is to receive the Lord Himself. As you remember, the word Eucharist is from Greek and means gratitude. Each time we, Catholics, gather for Eucharist, it is a time to express our gratitude to all that Jesus has done for us, and we are a blessed people. We recognize the sacrifice and love that Jesus brought to us. This is a time for gratitude. Each Eucharist is a celebration of gratitude. Jesus is our Bread of Life, and for this we are grateful. Thank you, Lord, for your presence in our Mass, in our sacrament of the Holy Eucharist.

Continuing reflections on John 6

Today, let us continue our consideration of John 6. As you remember, the Gospel readings at Mass on the Sundays of August are all from John 6, the section is called Jesus’ discourse on the Bread of Life. So, each and every Catholic Church throughout the whole world is studying John 6 this month, studying the sacrament of the Holy Eucharist. I hope you have had the opportunity to personally read John 6 this week. If not, then John 6 is your homework.

A large part of John 6 is this discourse of Jesus, his dialogue with a crowd of people. In it, Jesus proclaims, “I am the bread of life.” After the multiplication of the loaves, this crowd of people followed Jesus and the disciples. Then follows this dialogue between Jesus and the people concerning the “bread of life.” The people remember well the story of the Exodus, the story of the Hebrew people journeying through the desert toward the Promised Land. They are saved from hunger by the manna. They see this as bread from heaven. Jesus tells them the true bread from heaven is himself. We recognize that the “bread from heaven” is Jesus coming to us in the sacrament of the Holy Eucharist.

For us, Catholics, we believe in the real presence of Jesus in the consecrated bread and wine at Mass – the Blessed Eucharist. For us this is our bread from heaven. Thank you, Lord, for your presence in our Mass, in our sacrament of the Holy Eucharist.

In faith, we believe in “the real presence of Jesus” in the Sacrament of the Blessed Eucharist. To receive the gift of the Eucharist is to receive the Lord Himself. Through the Eucharist, we receive Jesus as our Bread of Life, and for this we are grateful. Thank you, Lord, for your presence in our Mass, in our sacrament of the Holy Eucharist.

Thanks to the peer pressure from my friends, I’m starting a lot of my days with the word of God on my mind and in my heart. Thanks to the peer pressure from my friends, I’m starting my day in a more prayerful way.

God has blessed me with outstanding people in my life – family, friends, colleagues and acquaintances who love me, support me and help me grow closer to my Lord. I’m frequently reminded of how important it is to have a community of faith working together to help each other get to heaven.

All the cool kids are doing it.
Funeral Mass celebrated for Sister Edward Marie Tesiero

Sister Edward Marie was born in Amsterdam, New York on October 15, 1935 to Sarah (Boyd) and Edward Tesiero. Predeceased by her parents and sister, Marilyn Sickler, she is survived by her Sisters in Community, her brother Edward Tesiero of Amsterdam, and several nieces and nephews.

Edwina Mary entered the community on September 8, 1959. She received the name Sister Edward Marie on May 5, 1960 when she became a novice. She professed her first vows on May 15, 1961 and her final vows on August 27, 1966. As an Atonement missionary for 60 years, she served in parish, catechetical, pastoral and educational ministries throughout her years as a sister. Her first mission assignment was in 1962 at Mt. Carmel, Connecticut.

From there, she ministered in Maine (Limerick), California (Merced, Bakersfield), Oregon (Bandon), New York (Albany, Graymoor, Canajoharie, Amsterdam, Schuylerville, Massena and Morristown), New Hampshire (North Conway), and a three-month stay in Bethlehem, So. Africa.

From 1991-1996, Sister Edward Marie served on the Leadership Team of the congregation and from 2001-06, she was the appointed secretary general. She returned to Graymoor in January 2018. The year before she entered the community, 1958, Edwina received a bachelor’s degree from the College of St. Rose in Albany. In 1970, she studied Theology for one year at Regina Mundi in Rome, Italy, and in 1971, she began studies at St. Louis University, Missouri where she received a master’s degree in Theology in 1973.

From 1975 to 1980, Sister Edward Marie was the directress of Higher Studies for the junior sisters of the congregation. Sister Edward Marie was well known as a catechist and director of religious education in the numerous parishes in which she ministered. Sister once wrote, “My finest and most treasured memories are moments when, as a catechist, I observed surprise and joy come over a child’s (or teen’s or adult’s) face as he or she ‘caught’ and recognized the truth of God’s Presence as real, and in them, and with them in their personal life.”

A funeral Mass was celebrated on July 31. Services were held in the Motherhouse convent chapel at Graymoor. Interment was in the sisters’ cemetery. In lieu of flowers, donations may be sent to: Franciscan Sisters of the Atonement, 41 Old Highland Turnpike, Garrison, NY 10524.

Vaccine division ‘should not spill over into our pews’

As the coronavirus crisis continues, we see widespread divisions arising between those who are vaccinated and those who are not. That division should not spill over into our pews.

While we strongly encourage vaccinations, we need to recognize that there are a variety of reasons why individuals might choose not to be vaccinated. Some have personal health conditions that put them at higher risk of suffering serious side effects of the vaccine. Some are allergic to it. We should respect such concerns.

We are a welcoming and supportive community of faith. When differences arise, we show patience, understanding and compassion.

Let us continue to pray for our families as we meet all the challenges in staying healthy and supporting one another in the midst of this pandemic.

Family on a mission: Sharing faith in Alaska

By Darcy Fargo

COPENHAGEN – “It’s important to give others salvation,” said Anastasia Mangan, 18, of Copenhagen. “It’s a gift that’s given to us, why not give it to others? That’s our mission in life as Christians – getting everyone around us to heaven.”

With that missionary spirit, Mangan, along with her mother, Nicole, and sister Marie, age 16, recently traveled to Alaska with GraceWorks, a Christian not-for-profit organization that hosts mission trips around Alaska.

“We went in July of this year, and we went in 2019 also,” said Nicole Mangan. “We originally planned to go to Nicaragua with Sister Debbie Blow (and North Country Mission of Hope). That trip was cancelled because of the unrest where we were going to land. We still wanted to do something. We started looking around on the internet for short-term missions. We didn’t want a vacation. A lot of the trips out there have you do maybe one little project and the rest is mostly sightseeing. We didn’t want that.”

With GraceWorks, they found an organization that provides direct services predominately to youth in public parks and trailer parks.

“These kids have rough lives,” said Nicole Mangan. “From what we were told, all of them have experienced abuse in some form by the age of 12. They’re left alone all day at these parks. They’re dropped off by parents and hopefully the parents are there to pick up the kids at the end of the day. Some of the kids are kicked out for the day, and the doors of their homes are locked. Some of the kids are dropped off, and the parents never come back. These parks are hubs for human trafficking, since it’s daylight all the time, and the kids are left unsupervised.”

“It’s sad,” added Anastasia Mangan. “You don’t realize how much you’re blessed and how important family is until you go see a child younger than you that has nothing. If you show these kids care and that you want to help them, they cling to you.”

The Mangans noted that services for the homeless youth are lacking in Alaska.

“There’s a women’s shelter, men’s shelter and teen shelter, but there’s nowhere for kids to go,” Nicole Mangan said. “Only the most severe cases end up in care. Most of these kids are just left on their own all day. Some are homeless.”

When the kids are in the public park, GraceWorks provides food, some supervision and lessons about Christianity and the Bible.

“(Volunteers participating in the mission) are hosted at a church,” said Anastasia Mangan. “We go to the parks and play games and spend time with (the kids) to let them get to know you. Our name tags let them know we’re safe. We get to know their names and where they’re from and some information about their circumstances. Then, we have ‘tarp time.’ We put a tarp on the ground or set up on a picnic table, everyone gathers around for snacks and to discuss the Bible and maybe do songs and crafts.”

“In 2019, we were in a park with smaller kids,” said Nicole Mangan. “This year, it was older kids. They were tough. These kids were at the point where they needed to know the truth and decide. Either they can go the worse way, or they can let God change them and have better lives. We told them about salvation. We told them about God. We handed out Bibles and did Bible studies with them.”

“We also share our own testimonies with them,” added Anastasia Mangan. “We didn’t want them to think we had never done anything wrong,” said Nicole Mangan. “We do things wrong too. The kids could relate to that.”

To participate in the mission trip, the Mangans raised funds by selling goods they produced or crafted on their homestead and by performing jobs for others in their community. “Anyone can go to this, and they always need volunteers,” said Nicole Mangan. “They don’t have an age limit or minimum. Kids are able to participate and play with the kids there. Sometimes, kids the same age as the ones in the park are able to be better witnesses than adults can be.”

The Mangans said they plan to return to Alaska for future mission trips. Anastasia and Marie said they hope to help create “drop-in housing,” where youth could have a safe place to stay with structure and expectations.

DOVS: Supporting vocations in the diocese

By Darcy Fargo
Editor

OGDENSBURG – A presence in the diocese for around a decade, the Diocese of Ogdensburg Vocations Society (DOVS) is looking to grow its membership as the organization works to support and foster vocations.

According to the organization’s page on the Diocese of Ogdensburg website, DOVS “is a group of faithful Catholics with the intention of promoting and supporting vocations to the priesthood, permanent diaconate, and consecrated religious life throughout the North Country.”

“Currently, we have 43 members,” said Connie Randall, DOVS president. “We also have patrons – donors who support our mission, but don’t actively participate.”

DOVS members typically gather once a month for meetings, though the pandemic slowed meetings for a time. Currently, because the majority of DOVS members reside in St. Lawrence and Franklin counties, meetings are held in that area. DOVS would like to hold meetings in other parts of the diocese, as well.

“From a diocesan perspective, DOVS isn’t just important as a group that supports vocations, but it’s also a real ministry for lay people to get involved in and exercise their baptismal commitment,” said diocesan Vocations Coordinator Cathy Russell, the group’s liaison to the diocesan Vocations Office. “Everyone in DOVS grows spiritually.”

“I’ve grown in my faith through my participation in DOVS,” added Shirley Therrien, one of the DOVS two vice-presidents. “And I’ve met some really great people.”

As an organization, the DOVS support events and efforts of the Vocations Office, as well as diocesan seminarians, clergy and religious. DOVS have provided snacks and gift packets for middle school vocations retreats; funding for snacks or meals for clergy events, including continuing education; books promoting vocations to area Catholic schools; picnic lunches for seminarians at their annual summer gathering; gifts for newly ordained priests; holy cards praying for diocesan seminarians and vocations; and luncheons for consecrated religious, priests and deacons.

“We get to know the seminarians,” said Therrien. “It’s nice because then we know them when they become priests and may be assigned to our parishes.”

“We’ve been looking at what more we can do for our consecrated religious,” added Randall. “We’re looking at having an event with the Sisters of St. Joseph.”

Randall said the event may include Mass and a Holy Hour, and possibly a speaker and luncheon.

The DOVS also send cards or gifts to priests and consecrated religious celebrating anniversaries or feast days, seminarians celebrating birthdays, and for other occasions and happenings.

Members of the DOVS can be frequently seen volunteering at diocesan events or attending them as a group.

“The DOVS wear sashes that identify them,” Russell said.

The organization also typically hosts a pilgrimage each year to visit sacred sites and pray for vocations, as well as to foster fellowship within the organization. Pilgrimages have been on hold during the COVID-19 pandemic, but the DOVS hope to host pilgrimages again in the future.

The organization also holds an annual event, typically at the Lodge at Camp Guggenheim, exclusively for DOVS members. The event includes prayer, time for fellowship and a guest speaker.

‘Tis a wee bit of Heaven’

In front of a lovely cottage along Lake Ontario there is a sign that reads “Tis a wee bit of heaven.”

As one gazes out over the shoreline to the azure blue waters of the lake, the island and the distance, the message of the sign comes to life.

Whether in your own backyard or on a drive in the area, gazing on the beauty of the riotous colors of the summertime flowers can take your breath away.

The lush corn fields, the green trees and vegetation can fill one with a sense of wonder at the fruitfulness of God’s creation.

The lapping waters of the lakes and flowing waters of rivers in our North Country can refresh our minds and spirits.

The presence of rabbits, chipmunks, deer and woodchucks, along with all kinds of birds, reminds us that we share our “home” with many other creatures.

When watching the national news that reports all kinds of natural crisis from forest fires to floods and droughts, the place we live in seems in contrast more and more like a “wee bit of heaven.”

During this past week we celebrated the Feast of the Transfiguration of the Lord. In the readings, the disciples get a glimpse from Jesus of the amazing delights that God has prepared for us in the time to come. If the goodness of earth around us can fill our senses and heart with gladness, what might the Lord have in store for us? Wherever our footsteps take us during the summer days, let us remember to take off our shoes because we are indeed on “holy ground.”

Where did you find a “wee bit of heaven” this week?

Peru plans for Applefest’s return

Peru — As of now, Peru’s Applefest is going to happen in 2021. The COVID-19 pandemic resulted in the festival’s cancellation last year, but this year the 43rd Annual St. Augustine’s Applefest will occur on Saturday, September 18.

Traditionally a two-day event, the Applefest will be packed into one day of fun.

The parish center will be filled with crafters and will open at 10 a.m. Food booths begin opening at 10:30 a.m., followed by games and raffles.

The community parade leaves the Peru Elementary School at 11 a.m. The Plattsburgh Police Fife and Drum Corps will march and perform.

The rocking On Three Band will perform throughout the afternoon.

There will be several new games for children of all ages, plus apple fritters, fried dough, hot dogs, Michigan burgers, sausages and the Knights of Columbus’ famous chicken BBQ.

COVID regulations in effect on the date of the event will be in place.
New invocations added to Litany of St. Joseph

By Sister Helen Hermann
Sisters of St. Joseph

On May 1, the Feast of St. Joseph the Worker, the Vatican announced that Pope Francis approved seven new invocations to be added to the Litany of St. Joseph. They are:

- Protector of the Redeemer
- Servant of Christ
- Minister of Salvation
- Support in Difficulty
- Patron of Refugees
- Patron of the Afflicted
- Patron of the Poor

Protector of the Redeemer: We can think of many instances in which St. Joseph protected Jesus and Mary. The one that comes to mind is the time he had to leave for Egypt to protect his family from Herod’s massacre of all babies under the age of 2. Even though the flight into Egypt was problematic for St. Joseph, he did what was necessary to make sure that Jesus was safe.

Servant of Christ: We know that Jesus was obedient to Joseph, his foster father. Yet St. Joseph was servant to the divine will and divine plan. His hand guided, but was also submissive. His face protected, but was also attentive. He, the adult was and is at the service of the child.

Minister of Salvation: St. Joseph brings people closer to the good Lord. He is helping them achieve their salvation.

Support in Difficulty: Throughout his life, St. Joseph experienced difficulties, especially when he found out that Mary was expecting a baby and knowing that it was not his child. Joseph worked through this difficulty and every other difficulty he encountered. Likewise, St. Joseph will help us in our difficulties. We encounter violence in our world, in the instances of racism, and in the challenges presented because of climate change and destruction of our common home. We turn to St. Joseph for support.

Patron of Refugees: I think of the children and families who are seeking entrance into our country. They need to know that St. Joseph understands their plight. He, too, was a refugee when he had to take his family into Egypt and make a living for his family.

Patron of the Afflicted: There are so many people who are suffering from COVID. It is not only those who have the virus, but their families as well. It is heartbreaking. St. Joseph will wrap his cloak around them and bring them comfort.

Patron of the Poor: Poverty takes many forms. It is always the poor who are most affected by global warming and unjust practices in our society. The homeless, children from families that are not able to provide for them adequately, the elderly are all in need for St. Joseph’s patronage.

During this year of St. Joseph, we are called to reflect on the many attributes of St. Joseph and ask his help in our daily lives.

Revised Litany of St. Joseph

Lord, have mercy on us, Lord, have mercy on us. Christ, have mercy on us, Christ, have mercy on us.

Lord, have mercy on us, Lord, have mercy on us. Christ, hear us, Christ, graciously hear us.

God the Father of heaven, have mercy on us. God the Son, Redeemer of the World, have mercy on us.

God the Holy Spirit, have mercy on us. Holy Trinity, one God, have mercy on us. Holy Mary, pray for us. St. Joseph, pray for us.

Support in difficulties, pray for us. Solace of the wretched, pray for us. Hope of the sick, pray for us.

Protector of Holy Church, pray for us. Lamb of God, who takes away the sins of the world, spare us, O Jesus. Lamb of God, who takes away the sins of the world, graciously hear us, O Jesus. Lamb of God, who takes away the sins of the world, have mercy on us, O Jesus.

He made him the lord of his household, And prince over all his possessions.

Let us pray:

O God, in your ineffable providence you were pleased to choose Blessed Joseph to be the spouse of your most holy Mother; grant, we beg you, that we may be worthy to have him for our intercessor in heaven whom on earth we venerate as our Protector. You who live and reign forever and ever.
What young people should hear about marriage

Young people today experience various pressures and expectations that can make them anxious. In a recent essay, Professor Timothy P. O’Malley, of Notre Dame’s McGrath Institute for Church Life, crisply describes some of the overwhelming pressures that graduating college students are likely to encounter in commencement addresses:

“They are charged by a voracious appetite for the morning sun—by their very arc of human history before they reach the age of thirty.”

He notes that marriage and family life are seldom part of what commencement speakers at Notre Dame and other institutions of higher education propose to graduates. Students, he says, are “told, sometimes quite explicitly, to bracket out marriage and family life for the sake of their professional careers. And when the marriages and children of prominent commencement speakers are publicly raised on the commencement platform, they are always considered a lesser accomplishment.”

Putting our human accomplishments into proper perspective can be challenging. We can be tempted, like many commencement speakers, to invert the relative order of their importance. In the face of unrelenting pressure to change the world, climb the career ladder, build a nest egg, acquire expensive homes, and travel the globe, we can easily convince ourselves that marriage and children are a hindrance.

But as we approach the end of life, we can often see with greater clarity what matters most.

I remember a chat I had with my father as he was declining in health. He had had a long career as an astrophysicist professor at the University of Arizona. As we were talking about colleges, universities, and the world of academia, I mentioned how impressive his professional accomplishments had been, not only in teaching and research, but also in authoring various notable books with titles like “Radio Galaxies,” “The Catastrophic Universe,” and “Radio Astrophysics.”

“Ah, the real achievement,” he retorted, “what really matters, that would be the children.”

He underlined that the demanding intellectual work and mountains of scientific output were insignificant compared to what he deemed his “real accomplishment” — the gift of his family. After more than 50 years of marriage and raising five children he signaled what authentic satisfaction and human fulfillment had come to look like for him.

The commitments we make and faithfully fulfill are a source of stability and strength, particularly against the backdrop of life’s turbulence and uncertainty. While there are conflicts, boredom, trials, and other challenges, the consequential adventure of marriage and family life offers a fulfilling pathway toward human flourishing.

O’Malley notes that this is a narrative that young people are interested in: “They want to hear how to be happy, and they want this happiness not to be tied to their accomplishments.” They want to be able to say, “I cannot control every dimension of the future, but I can dwell with this person for the rest of my days. I can commit to a common project, to a hopeful future with this man or woman.”

This is an important message for us to pass on to younger generations, especially as they commence post-university life.

In a sense, marriage and raising a family are becoming revolutionary acts in today’s world. They declare something positive and hopeful about the future and push back against the fear and insecurity that plague our human condition. They ground us in something beyond the passing security of worldly accomplishments and challenge us to a higher and more enduring goal.

Gifts — the lily blossom, opening its petals to devour the morning sunshine; the tranquility of the river at sunset; the delicate patterns in a butterfly’s wings.

I think it’s no coincidence that Pope Francis uses the phrase “Praise be to you, Lord!” as the foundation for his landmark 2015encyclical about care for God’s creation, called Laudato Si’. After all, the Earth is His canvas, and He has created for us a stunning masterpiece, a magnificent painting that changes every day with the tides and the winds and the seasons.

To damage it, to pollute it, to fail to protect God’s creation, is to profoundly disrespect the Creator. I think about how I would feel if someone dumped garbage all over one of my paintings. Indeed, disrespecting the environment disrespects all human life, because life is dependent upon the environment for sustenance and survival. As the Holy Father says, “Everything is connected.”

Our common home is falling into disrepair, and much of it can be linked to our “throwaway” culture of convenience and greed. Forests have been stripped to make way for high rise buildings and over-development. We rely too much on fossil fuels like oil, carbon, and gas. Our land, air, and water have all been contaminated.

Pope Francis reminds us that when we don’t responsibly care for God’s creation, everyone suffers, but it’s the poor and vulnerable who suffer the most. Pollution, food and water insecurity, and conflicts over declining resources first affect those on the margins, the least of our brothers and sisters, whom Jesus entrusts to our particular care and concern.

In this November’s elections, there’ll be an amendment to the New York Constitution on the ballot to add the right to clean air and water and a healthful environment for all New Yorkers. That’s something to support, for sure, but each of us has to do our part. Don’t throw your plastic water bottle in the parking lot. Better yet, don’t use the plastic water bottle; use a re-usable container instead. Share important documents (like Laudato Si’) electronically instead of printing them out and wasting all that paper. Recycle. Reduce your water waste.

Not all of us are called to understand the science and specifics of climate change. But each of can take some small steps to change our lifestyle and consumption habits to make a big difference.

Don’t disrespect the Master Painter. Help protect the painting. Praise Him always for the wondrous work of art He has created for us!

Priests urged not to give exemptions for vaccines

WASHINGTON (CNS) – As some Catholics are seeking a religious exemption to the coronavirus vaccine mandates that are becoming more common in workplaces and even some public venues, priests in the Archdiocese of New York have been advised not to get involved in that process.

"There is no basis for a priest to issue a religious exemption to the vaccine," said a memo sent to priests in the New York Archdiocese July 30. An image of the memo was published by a news correspondent on social media two days after it was issued.

An archdiocesan spokesman confirmed with Catholic News Service that this communication was accurate and was sent by Msgr. Joseph LaMorte, archdiocesan vicar general, and John Cahill, archdiocesan chancellor.

The memo not only advised priests not to be involved in issuing religious exemptions but stressed that if they did issue them they would be "acting in contradiction to the directives of the pope" and "participating in an act that could have serious consequences to others."

The archdiocesan leaders wrote that they "occasionally hear from Catholics who have a sincere moral objection to the COVID-19 vaccines due to their connection to abortion. This concern is particularly acute among people who are strongly pro-life and very loyal to the teaching of the faith. It is a serious issue for some people who often seek guidance and support from the church."

They said New York Cardinal Timothy M. Dolan had suggested that "clarity be provided to assist our priests in response to requests of this nature which they are receiving."

The memo distinguished individual vaccine decisions from getting backing by one's parish priest on this issue, stressing that "any individual is free to exercise discretion on getting the vaccine based upon his or her own beliefs without seeking the inaccurate portrayal of church instructions."

"Our priests should not be active participants to such actions," it said.

It also echoed what church leaders have said about the COVID-19 vaccine, noting: "Pope Francis has made it very clear that it is morally acceptable to take any of the vaccines and said we have the moral responsibility to get vaccinated. Cardinal Dolan has said the same."

The direction for New York's archdiocesan priests comes just days before New York's Mayor Bill de Blasio announced that New York City would be the first U.S. city to require proof of at least one dose of a coronavirus vaccine for most indoor events, effective Aug. 16.

"If you want to participate in our society fully, you've got to get vaccinated. It's time," he said during an Aug. 3 news conference.

And the mayor's announcement is on the heels of a July 29 message from President Joe Biden that said his administration will require all civilian federal workers to provide COVID-19 vaccination status or face strict testing measures, social distancing and masking requirements.

Similarly, around the country, particularly amid the rising number of COVID-19 cases and the spread of the Delta variant of the virus, workplaces have been modifying previous decisions on vaccine requirements — going from strongly encouraging, but not requiring them, to saying employees must show proof of vaccination.

One Catholic organization supporting such a mandate for employers is the St. Louis-based Catholic Health Association, which represents more than 2,200 Catholic hospitals, nursing homes and long-term care facilities in the U.S. The group issued a statement July 23 urging "all health care workers to get vaccinated against COVID-19."

Also in July, two Catholic organizations issued statements against imposing a coronavirus vaccine mandate without conscience, religious or medical exemptions.

The Catholic Medical Association said in a July 28 statement that it "opposes mandatory COVID-19 vaccinations as a condition of employment without conscience, religious or medical exemptions.

The Catholic Medical Association said in a July 28 statement that it "opposes mandatory COVID-19 vaccinations as a condition of employment without conscience, religious or medical exemptions," adding that an "individual Catholic's decision to be vaccinated should be informed by the clear and authoritative moral teaching of the church on vaccinations."

And the National Catholic Bioethics Center said in early July that "does not endorse mandated COVID-19 immunization with any of the three vaccines" that have received emergency use authorization from the U.S. Food and Drug Administration.
Top Knight: Charity 'demands' renewed focus

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (CNS) — Supreme Knight Patrick Kelly, the CEO of the Knights of Columbus, told his fellow Knights that their "highest calling" - charity - "demands our renewed focus."

"Where there's pain, let us heal. Where there's grief, let us comfort. Where there's need, let us meet it, in new and creative ways," he said Aug. 3.

The end of the pandemic "is an invitation to action" on "almost every front," Kelly said, calling on Knights to find creative solutions to adapt to the challenges resulting from the COVID-19 pandemic as well as the cultural challenges for Catholics and the societal pressures on their values.

He made the remarks in his first annual report to the Knight of Columbus, delivered during the Knights' 139th annual convention Aug. 3-4. It was held virtually, with key events being broadcast from the Supreme Council's headquarters in New Haven and members from around the world participating online.

Kelly was elected to the Knights' top post by the organization's board of directors Feb. 5. He succeeded Supreme Knight Carl A. Anderson, who held the post for over two decades and retired Feb. 28 upon reaching the organization's mandatory retirement age of 70.

On June 11, Kelly was formally installed in his position during a Mass celebrated at St. Mary's Church in New Haven by Baltimore Archbishop William E. Lori, the Knights' supreme chaplain.

In his annual report, Kelly committed his tenure to strengthening the faith of men and their families and serving others in the face of what he described as daunting health, economic and social challenges.

"Our growth depends on empowering men to be the husbands and fathers that God wants us to be," he said. "It is harder than ever, and for that reason, we must push forward as never before. It will require creative courage."

To put their faith into action effectively, Kelly said, the Knights must be "bold in faith," following the example of St. Joseph.

The day Kelly was installed as the Supreme Knight, his first act was to consecrate his administration to St. Joseph, whom he called "guardian of the family" and "guardian of the truth" in his annual report.

Like Joseph, the Knights must be guardians of the family in a culture that is becoming increasingly hostile to the family, he said.

A documentary about the life of St. Joseph has been produced by the Knights of Columbus and it is scheduled to air on ABC affiliates starting Oct. 10.

The other man whose example Kelly said each Knight should follow is Blessed Michael McGivney, the founder of the Knights of Columbus. Blessed McGivney also lived in a time of families in crisis facing a hostile culture and a church under attack, Kelly noted, but he did not shrink from those challenges.

"In the mold of St. Joseph, (Blessed McGivney) stepped into the breach, with creative courage," Kelly said, adding the priest "listened to the Lord, fought for the family, and devoted himself to our Blessed Mother."

Blessed McGivney successfully rallied the men of his parish to lead lives of charity, unity and fraternity, which are the founding principles of the organization and, Kelly argued, are still the solutions to today's most serious problems of our time.

"By elevating our founder, the Lord has called us to greater depths of courage and faith, and greater heights of charity, unity and fraternity," he said. "In the (2020) beatification of Blessed Michael McGivney, the Lord has not only confirmed where the Knights have been in the past. He is showing us where we must go, in the future."

Kelly said the Knights are called to defend the truth incarnate of Jesus Christ in a time of bigotry and intolerance, in which "key truths - about life, marriage, the nature of the family and the meaning of freedom - are increasingly denied and even vilified."

In an overview of the Knights' legacy of defending life and working to build a culture of life over the years, Kelly said these efforts include playing a leading role in national and state marches for life since those events began and continuing support for legislation that protects the right to life of unborn children.

He also pointed to a growing ultrasound initiative that has placed over 1,400 of the machines in pregnancy resource centers, including one in South Korea that was dedicated in April.

"The fight for life has many fronts," Kelly said. "They all require our creative courage, and the coming year will be pivotal. I look forward to the day when together we march to victory!"

Kelly also noted the Knights' support for the National Eucharistic Revival initiative of the U.S. Conference of Catholic Bishops, which aims to "renew the church by enkindling a living relationship with the Lord Jesus Christ in the holy Eucharist."

The three-year effort will promote added emphasis on the Eucharist at all levels of the church beginning next summer and will culminate in a large-scale national event in 2024.

"Working with our bishops and priests, we will strive to renew belief in the Eucharist and build up the church," Kelly said. "We are a force for unity, and we will prove it by pointing to the source of unity. As 'Knights of the Eucharist,' we proudly proclaim this truth."

Kelly thanked Anderson for his 20 years of faithful leadership, and said the retired leader was a prime example that "faith and courage compel us to be men of charity."

During Anderson's tenure, he said, the fraternal order grew dramatically "in every measurable way."

"Our charitable donations soared by more than 60%. Insurance in force nearly tripled. Membership rose by nearly 400,000 and surpassed 2 million," Kelly said. "And the order expanded internationally for the first time in a century, to Europe and mainland Asia."

NEW YORK (ONN) – Matt Damon plays a man in search of redemption and renewal in the bleak yet touching drama "Stillwater" (Focus).

Directed and co-written by Tom McCarthy, the film succeeds on a personal and cultural level, though its brief forays into overtly political territory are far feebler. Its ambiguous treatment of faith, together with other elements, marks it as fare for grown-ups.

Damon portrays Bill Baker, an unemployed and widowed oil-rig worker from the Oklahoma city of the title. Five years after his college-age daughter, Allison (Abigail Breslin), an exchange student, was imprisoned in Marseille for the murder of her lesbian lover, Lina—a crime of which she insists she is innocent—Bill relocates to the French port city to follow up a new lead in the case.

Stymied by the refusal of Allison’s lawyer, Maitre Leparq (Anne Le Ny), to pursue the fresh evidence, Bill is forced to investigate on his own. Yet he’s a fish out of water in his new surroundings, misunderstanding neither the national language nor the local rules of behavior.

He turns for help to a chance acquaintance, stage actress Virginie (Camille Cottin), a single mother who, with her young daughter Maya (Lilou Siauvaud) in tow, is staying at the same hotel as Bill while waiting to move into a new apartment. The two strike up a friendship and, once Virginie and Maya get settled, Bill moves in with them.

Romance with Virginie looms as Bill, whom Allison regards as a failed father, seeks a second chance at successful parenthood through his nurturing of Maya. But his prospects for emotional fulfillment are threatened by the rashness with which he is willing to act to find the real culprit behind the killing.

The script, penned in partnership with Marcus Hinchey, Thomas Bidegain and Noé Debré, is effective in examining the strained relationship between Bill and alienated Allison. It also captures the clash between the values of the American heartland Bill personifies and those of Europe, though its approach to this topic sometimes feels facile.

Along with his gun ownership, one of the aspects of Bill’s lifestyle that Virginie is keen to run the source by Media Bias/Fact Check (mediabias-factcheck.com), or other fact-checking sites she lists. She cautions that if a story has a strong emotional effect on you, first check on its factualness before sharing it online. This can go a long way toward reducing the onslaught of online "fake news."

And resist the temptation to post content that’s "intentionally inflammatory ... for the sake of the common good."

Garrido also shares the insight that it’s vital for Christians to recognize their own biases. Here she quotes the words of Pope Francis from his 2018 World Communications Day address: "Many people interact in homogeneous digital environments impervious to differing perspectives and opinions. Disinformation thus thrives on the absence of healthy confrontation with other sources of information that could effectively challenge prejudices and generate constructive dialogue; instead, it risks turning people into unwilling accomplices in spreading biased and baseless ideas."

To avoid these online "echo chambers," we can seek to enlarge our social media bubble to include people and sources (fact-checked, of course) that offer a broader perspective. The goal here is not to react, but to learn.

Ultimately, it’s vital to recognize there’s a real person present behind the messages they post on social media. This is a person who feels and struggles and has up and down days, just as I do," Garrido writes. Aim to treat this person with dignity, even when you disagree with their ideas. And remember face-to-face, in-person contact is the gold standard.
Assumption: Mary’s feast, our feast

Today’s feast of the Assumption of Mary body and soul, into heaven, provides all Christians with a model hope in our own resurrection into heaven one day. Mary is also a model of how we are to live our lives through her faithfulness to God’s will, so we too can expect what God planned for all humanity. The first reading from the Book of Revelation pictures a male child as the Son of God, human in every way. He is ruler over all. His mother is a woman crowned with stars.

Despite the attempts of Satan to destroy her, she escapes and is exalted together with her Son. Preserved from sin from her conception, Mary freely assents to God’s request for her to give birth to Jesus. This changes her own plans completely.

Accepting all this, she visits her cousin Elizabeth and sings her great song, the Magnificat. In that song, we see that all the values of the world are turned topsy-turvy, and the poor of the world become God’s favorites.

All through life, Mary put others first, suffers much, and only gradually comes to understand fully who her Son really is. She accepts the role finally as a disciple of the Lord. She even shares in the shattering power of the Holy Spirit at Pentecost. It takes all of us sometimes years to realize our own dignity. We, too, have a destiny for glory. Early on, we know what it is to love, to know joy and sadness, to strive for our needs and wants.

If we grow in faith and trust in God’s promises, and live as children of a merciful God, then we will realize that one day we like Mary will be taken up body and soul into heaven.

Mary, Mother of Jesus and our mother, intercede for us, and ask God to protect us from all the temptations that could keep us from our glorious destiny. This is not only Mary’s feast, but eventually ours.

Called to Serve

Remembering The Baltimore Catechism

Would all of you who studied Latin in high school or college please raise your hands? There are more of you than I expected. That’s great.

Remember Gallia est omnis divisa in tres partes? That’s how Julius Caesar started his personal account of the Gallic Wars. For those of you who did not take Latin in school, the phrase is translated “Gaul is a whole divided into three parts.” It is the first sentence in Commentarii de Bello Gallico, a mainstay in Latin instruction because of its simple, direct prose. The sentence was a flashback. We were required to study Latin in the Catholic High School we attended in the Diocese of Brooklyn/Queens. I say, “we” because Kathy, my wife, and I met in high school. The boys were taught a slightly different way to pronounce certain letters, like “v”. I steadfastly argued the “v” is pronounced as it should be “v”. Kathy was equally certain the “v” is pronounced with the “w” sound, “weni, widi, wici.”

The argument was left unsettled.

The Latin flashback occurred because of something else.

Someone must have been cleaning out some bookshelves the other day and left a bunch of “religious” books on a table at church. Two items jumped out at me.

One was a 1931 pamphlet entitled How To Serve Low Mass. I had to have that. It was before my time but things didn’t change at Mass until the Second Vatican Council, and I am a grateful and nostalgic altar boy.

The other item was a little booklet, circa 1941, entitled The Revised Edition of the Baltimore Catechism with explanations. Oh my! That came home with me too.

For those of you who were never blessed with learning about our faith from the Baltimore Catechism, let me explain something. The Baltimore Catechism was the standard Catholic grade school text in the country from 1885 to the late 1960s. I fit in there somewhere.

The Baltimore Catechism was written as a dialogue. The author would ask a question, 499 of them in all, and then answer the question. The answers “conform(ed) in every respect to the regulations set forth by the Confraternity of Christian Doctrine.”

Who of us blessed with that little text can forget how it started: “1. Who made us? God made us. 2. Who is God? God is the Supreme Being, infinitely perfect, who made all things and keeps them in existence. 3. Why did God make us? God made us to know Him, to love Him and to serve Him in this life and in eternity.”

Sister would quiz us regularly about the catechism. Woe to anyone who did not quote the answer perfectly. The answers survive to this day. Like “343. What is the Holy Eucharist? The Holy Eucharist is a sacrament and a sacrifice; in it Our Saviour, Jesus Christ, body and blood, soul and divinity, under the appearances of bread and wine, is contained, offered and received. 366. What is Holy Communion? Holy Communion is the receiving of Jesus Christ in the Sacrament of the Holy Eucharist.”

Deo gratias! Thanks be to God!

Monk condemned as ‘supporter of terrorists’

Article from FIDES missionary news service of the Pontifical Mission Societies

Mardin Criminal Court has handed down a 25-month prison sentence against the Syrian Orthodox monk Sefer Bilecen, finding him guilty of complicity with terrorist organizations and activities.

The priest, a member of the Mor Yakup monastery in Nusaybin, had been arrested on January 9, 2020 along with two other people, accused of having offered help and cover to members of the People’s Defense Forces (HPG), the military arm of the Kurdistan Workers’ Party (PKK), classified as a terrorist organization by the Ankara government.

The accusation, based mainly on images collected by drones used by the Turkish intelligence services to monitor the life of the monastery from above, attributes to the monk the responsibility of receiving HPG militiamen in the monastery for a few days at the end of September 2018. On January 16, 2020, the monk had been authorized to leave prison pending trial, with the obligation not to leave his residence.

During the trial, as reported by Agenzia Fides, several testimonies had confirmed that the alleged “complicity” contested by the Turkish authorities to the Syrian Orthodox monk consisted in simply offering food and drink to people who said they were hungry and thirsty.

An HPG militiaman arrested in September 2019 by Turkish security forces had also confessed to having visited the Mor Yakup Monastery several times just to eat, drink and refresh.

The monk, Sefer Bilecen himself, in the testimony made public through his lawyers, confirmed that he had given food and water to the militiamen as a pure sign of monastic hospitality, reserved for anyone in need, without imagining that the people welcomed were members of HPG.

“I will give food and water to anyone who comes to my door,” Father Sefer said during his statement. “I have to do it,” he added, “because of my spiritual and philosophical beliefs. And I cannot lie because I am a monk and a priest.”
Diocesan knights make pilgrimage to VT shrine

ISLE LAMOTTE, VT – The day started rainy at St. Anne’s Shrine, but as 12:15 p.m. Mass approached, the showers receded. By Mass time, only a few light showers remained.

Despite the forecast showers, 115 knights, spouses, families, and friends were present as Bishop Terry R. LaValley celebrated the Mass as part of the diocesan Knights’ annual pilgrimage to St. Anne’s Shrine on July 18. Shrine Director Rev. Brian Cummings and Msgr. Dennis Duprey con-celebrated, and Deacon James Chaufty assisted.

Northern Conference Chairman John Delles and his wife Lorna represented the North Country Knights. On behalf of state Deputy Charles Exposito, former state Warden/state Secretary Dr. Charles Robinson presented a $1,000 state council gift to the shrine and a $1,000 gift from the North Country’s Bishop Brzana Knights of Columbus Chapter.

Pilgrimage Coordinator Peter Keenan announced that after more than 20 years of service, this was his last year as pilgrimage coordinator. Peru Council 7273 member Gordon Burdo will succeed Keenan.

Following Mass, the shrine staff served a bountiful summer luncheon, and Bishop LaValley chatted with the pilgrims. Several people attended the pilgrimage for the first time. They said they loved it and would return. The pilgrimage to St. Anne’s Shrine is a day of prayer and a time to renew and make friendships.

Father Cummings and Dr. Robinson asked everyone to keep former state Warden Bill Ose of Adams in their prayers. Unfortunately, health challenges prevented Ose from attending the pilgrimage this year; however, he still organized a busload of 34 pilgrims from the Watertown-Adams area. Bill has organized the busload for 27 years.
