Update on Child Victims Act lawsuits

Bishop Terry R. LaValley issued the following letter regarding the lawsuits filed under the Child Victims Act:

“I want to give you a brief update on the lawsuits filed against the Diocese of Ogdensburg under the Child Victims Act. Last Friday marked the close of the ‘window legislation’ which suspended the statute of limitations and allowed individuals to file lawsuits alleging sexual abuse no matter when the alleged abuse occurred.

During the two-year window 122 lawsuits have been filed against the Diocese. These lawsuits allege abuse from the 1940s, 50s, 60s 70s, 80s and 90s.”

God’s law is meant to bring freedom, pope says

VATICAN CITY (CNS) – The purpose of the law in Christian life is not to forcibly subjugate others, but to teach men and women the way to obtain true freedom in Christ, Pope Francis said during his weekly general audience.

The ‘function of the law is certainly positive but limited in time,” the pope said Aug. 18 to those gathered in the Paul VI audience hall at the Vatican.

“It cannot extend its duration too far, because it is linked to the maturation of individuals and their choice of freedom,” he said.

The pope continued his series of talks on St. Paul's Letter to the Galatians and focused on St. Paul’s assessment of the role the law plays in Christians' lives.

St. Paul, the pope said, compares the law to a disciplinarian, which “is a beautiful image that deserves to be understood in its correct meaning.”

In the apostle’s view, he explained, the role of the law was changed after Christ's death and resurrection. In his Letter to the Galatians, St. Paul wrote that “before faith came, we were held in custody under the law, confined for the faith that was to be revealed.”

The pope said St. Paul's use of the expression “under the law” implies “the idea of a negative servitude, typical of slaves.”

“The apostle makes it explicit by saying that when one is ‘under the law,’ it is as if one is ‘watched’ and ‘locked up,’ a kind of preventive custody. This period, says St. Paul, has lasted a long time and is perpetuated as long as one lives in sin,” he said.

St. Paul expands not only on the law's role of 'making people aware of their own sin” but also its capacity to "end up stimulating the transgression.”

Yet, for the people of Israel, the law – known as the Torah – was “an act of magnanimity by God toward his people” that protected, instructed, disciplined and supported them "in their weakness,” the pope said.

Pope Francis said that for Christians, the law serves the same purpose until "one has come to faith,” then it "must give way to another authority.”
Is it a healthy relationship?

“According to the definition of a healthy relationship/ friendship,” I wrote in a message to my best friend. “Their definition of a healthy relationship is one where the involved parties can have conflicts or disagreements and can voice painful truths, and the relationship isn’t broken and still functions.”

I love my best friend. While she’s not “religious,” she exhibits Christian love better than almost anyone I know. She’s insightful, she’s caring, she’s generous almost to a fault, she’s hyperantically funny, and she loves strongly and with little or no thought of what she’ll get in return.

That having been said, my best friend and I sometimes drive each other nuts.

We sometimes disagree. We sometimes inadvertently hurt each other’s feelings. We sometimes have difficult conversations about the ways we can better support one another or at least avoid hurting one another.

Even when we’re driving each other batty, we love each other deeply, and we can be totally honest with each other.

Frankly, I can’t imagine my life without her in it.

Thinking about our friendship, especially after interviewing the newly ordained Father Pier Giorgio of Christ the King (see the full story on Page 4), got me thinking about my relationship with the Lord. The new priest spoke of his draw to the Carmelite charism and his desire to be “a friend of Jesus.”

While I can say to my best friend, “this situation really upset me, and I’m hurting,” I struggle to say similar things to our Lord.

While I know in my head that Jesus loves me no matter what I do or say, including if I’m hurt, upset or struggling, I don’t necessarily act like I believe that in my heart.

I have a habit of keeping our Lord at a bit of a distance, I’d say.

With that in mind, I’m going forward this week (and hopefully longer) trying to focus on growing my friendship with the Lord and sharing every part of myself with him, including the difficult parts, and the parts that are hurt and struggling.

Because I’d like to have a healthy relationship with Jesus, too.

‘Will you also leave me?’

Today, a little more about John 6 and Jesus’ discourse on the bread of life. Jesus describes his love. He longs to come to us, to be part of our lives, to become for us the nourishment and strength that will fortify us to live as true disciples of the Lord.

John 6 closes with the story of disciples who have listened to Jesus but are not willing to accept his message and no longer are willing to walk with him. However, the apostles remain. It is Peter who announces his faith in the Lord. He speaks for the faith of his friends, the other apostles. “Master, to whom shall we go? You have the words of eternal life. We have come to believe and are convinced that you are the Holy One of God.” (John 6:68)

Today, John 6 invites each one of us to renew our faith. On the day of this story, would we stand with Peter and would our prayer be his? Each Sunday in a dramatic proclamation during Mass, we declare our faith in Our Savior as we say together the Creed.

Each of us must make our faith own. We have to find meaning in its through personal experience if it is to come alive for us. Our challenge is to recognize exactly what we mean by the word “faith.” It is not in the first place the acceptance of a set of beliefs. Instead, it’s a belief in and commitment to the person of Jesus.

Can I stand with Peter in my life as a Catholic? I believe that this is possible when I stand with others before the Lord as a Christian, as Church. Being Church means we are united in Spirit and love with the Lord Jesus. For more and more people, faith is no longer something inherited and taken for granted, but the result of a personal decision. They live as members of a community of believers whose common faith strengthens the faith of each individual.

The Lord Jesus is the one who strengthens our faith, but we also need to confirm one another. Our presence at the Sunday Eucharist can make both of these things happen.

Each Sunday, parish communities come together to pray and celebrate the Holy Eucharist. The very word Eucharist indicates that we are present with us in a special, sacramental way.

We are invited, all of us, to receive in Holy Communion the Body and Blood of the Lord, consecrated as we pray together. Jesus wants to come to us and to be one with us. We do not receive Holy Communion as a reward for doing something, for living a good life. Rather the Lord Jesus truly wants to be part of our Christian life, guiding and strengthening us to live as true disciples of the Savior. Each Sunday, we take the Lord Jesus with us out into our homes and streets to be the power to live well and to do all we can to transform the world into a place of love and peace.

So, as we pray today, the Lord asks us, “Will you also leave me?” just as he asked the apostles on that day. It’s not the Lord who leaves us, but we who may leave him. We need to make our own Peter’s profession of faith. Every Sunday we get a chance to do so. We need the Lord to strengthen our faith. Lord, confirm my decision to stay with you.
My dear Brothers and Sisters in Christ,

I want to give you a brief update on the lawsuits filed against the Diocese of Ogdensburg under the Child Victims Act. Last Friday marked the close of the “window legislation” which suspended the statute of limitations and allowed individuals to file lawsuits alleging sexual abuse no matter when the alleged abuse occurred.

During the two-year window 122 lawsuits have been filed against the Diocese. These lawsuits allege abuse from the 1940s, 50s, 60s, 70s, 80s and 90s. There is only one case that alleges abuse in the last 25 years, after we put into place more rigorous safe environment policies. Our response to these claims has remained constant. We apologize to and seek to compensate those who were victimized by sexual abuse. These lawsuits are in the hands of our attorneys, and we will seek to resolve them fairly and promptly.

While many of the lawsuits state claims that may be meritorious, the Diocese is also named as a defendant in cases claiming abuse by priests, teachers, men and women consecrated religious, and scout leaders over whom we had no control. As you might expect, there also are some lawsuits where we believe the evidence will show that the accused individual did not commit the abuse alleged. We have a few cases that do not name the offender but simply allege general abuse. We will do our best to see that all claims are resolved on their merits.

We remain committed to our safe environment policies and practices. We have implemented background checks and safe environment training to protect children and prevent abuse from taking place. All allegations of abuse are reported to civil officials, the accused is confronted with the allegation, the matter is investigated and is reviewed by an independent lay Review Board, and any credibly accused clergy is removed from ministry. We have a Victim Assistance Coordinator who offers counseling and assistance to victims.

The past two years have been a challenge for victims and their families, for our priests, consecrated religious and parishioners. Added to the filing of these lawsuits was the anxiety and hardships caused by the Coronavirus and the pandemic emergency. I want to thank and commend the clergy and faithful of our diocese for your perseverance and generosity during this trying time. I ask you to continue to support your parishes and the work of the diocese. We must continue our mission in good times and in bad. Your continued support is essential.

Please continue to pray for victims of sexual abuse, and for our diocese in the days ahead. We will keep you advised as we move forward in an attempt to resolve these lawsuits while continuing to serve the needs of the people of the North Country. Asking God to bless you abundantly, I am

Faithfully yours in Christ,

Most Reverend Terry R. LaValley

LAKE PLACID – Father Pier Giorgio of Christ the King, born Alexander Pacelli, was ordained as a priest of the Discalced Carmelites Friars of the Province of the Immaculate Heart of Mary after a long journey that traveled through Lake Placid, Camp Guggenheim and the Diocese of Ogdensburg.

He was ordained by Cardinal Lars Anders Arborelius, also a Discalced Carmelite, at the Basilica of the National Shrine of Mary, Help of Christians at Holy Hill in Hubertus, Wisconsin on July 18.

“It has been a long process, but on the other hand, it’s been a confirmation of what God is already doing in my life,” said Father Pacelli, age 33. “In the abundance of what he’s given me already, this is super abundance. Supernatural graces come from ordination. It’s the next part of his love in my life.”

After growing up in Saratoga County, Father Pacelli had a conversion experience in college that soon led him to discern a calling to the priesthood.

“I think many people who read the North Country Catholic will remember me as a seminarian for the Diocese of Ogdensburg,” he said. “My parents moved to Lake Placid a few months after my conversion experience. I’d go home to Lake Placid when I was in college. My only experience of the priesthood was diocesan priests. I went to seminary knowing almost nothing; I had only been confirmed 15 months or so prior.”

In addition to growing in his knowledge of the faith, his time as a seminarian with the Diocese of Ogdensburg also helped him find Catholic fellowship.

“I learned so much, and I gained relationships I still have to this day,” Father Pacelli said. “I worked at Camp Guggenheim for three summers. That’s where I made my first Catholic friends, and they’re still some of my best friends. The Diocese of Ogdensburg is a huge part of my vocation, as is St. Agnes in Lake Placid. Father (Joseph) Morgan and Father John Yonkovic – two powerhouse priests in my book – were great witnesses to me in their witness and generosity. Working at Guggenheim, I got to know Father Scott Belina and Father Bryan Stitt.”

Father Pacelli said he was also able to grow in his vocation during his time of service in the diocese, including time at St. Alexander’s in Morrisonville and St. Peter’s in Lowville, St. Mary’s in Glenfield and St. Hedwig’s in Houseville.

It was also in seminary where he was first exposed to priests serving with various religious orders.

“There were religious priests on the faculty,” he said. “That’s when I came to know the idea of charisms.”

While he encountered Dominicans, Franciscans and priests of other orders, Father Pacelli said he felt particularly called to the Discalced Carmelites. He also had a family connection to the order.

Father Pier Giorgio of Christ the King, OCD, born Alexander Pacelli, is pictured after his ordination with former Guggenheim staff members Michael Knapick, Sam Racette (Saranac Lake), Christian Bobak and Emma Knapick.

Mass of Thanksgiving

Father Pier Giorgio of Christ the King will celebrate a Mass of Thanksgiving at 10 a.m. on Aug. 29 at St. Agnes Church in Lake Placid.

“When I was a seminarian, my mom was doing formation with the secular order of Discalced Carmelites at St. Bernard’s in Saranac Lake,” he said. “My mother’s journey back to the Church preceded mine by a few years. When I was in high school, statutes of St. Therese, the Little Flower, started to appear in our house. When I got to seminary, the first book I read on my own was ‘Story of a Soul.’ I started learning about St. Therese and St. John of the Cross. I kept seeing a unified spirituality of friendship with God. That’s what my last yearning was for – friendship with Jesus. That was my first sort of call, ultimately – I was called to be a friend of Jesus. My vocation is to be a friend of Jesus. That’s what the Discalced Carmelites say they’re about. I haven’t been disappointed yet. I continue growing in that relationship with Jesus. It’s not perfect, but it’s beautiful and powerful and that it continues to increase.”

Additionally, when he first visited the Carmelites in Wisconsin, he said, “I felt at home.”

Father Pacelli said, “The friars get moved around a lot. I’ve been a Carmelite seven years, and I’ve lived in three different places – Wisconsin, Washington DC and Oregon. Throughout those moves, Carmel – the mystical home – exists no matter where the monastery is.”

Father Pacelli said he will remain in his current ministry now that he’s received holy orders.

“The main thing that’s different is that I’m on the other side of the altar now,” he said, laughing. “My ministry will essentially remain the same. I’m an editor. I work for our publishing apostolate, and I’ll continue doing that work.”

Additionally, Father Pacelli assists with weekend Masses at the National Shrine of Mary, Help of Christians at Holy Hill in Wisconsin.

“I’m also studying part-time for a master’s degree at University of Wisconsin,” he said. “I have a lot on my plate. And because a lot of my apostolate is working in an office, I get the opportunity to travel a lot. I don’t have schedule commitments like a lot of priests have, and that frees me up to do things for which priests are normally difficult to find. I just recently served as chaplain for FOCUS, working as a spiritual director and confessor and saying Mass for 50 college undergrads from all over the country participating in a summer program in northern Michigan.”

Father Pacelli’s travels are also bringing him back to the North Country.

On Aug. 29, he’ll celebrate a Mass of Thanksgiving at St. Agnes in Lake Placid at 10 a.m. He also plans to celebrate a Mass with friends from Camp Guggenheim during his time in the area.

“The Diocese of Ogdensburg still has a special place in my heart,” he said. “Long term, I’m also planning to visit the places I was assigned as a seminarian.”

‘Better to light one candle’

Most of us are familiar with the quote “Better to light one candle than to curse the darkness,” used by Father James Kelly, the founder of The Christophers, in 1945 at the end of World War II. His hope was to inspire people to discover their God-given talents and utilize them to make the world a better place. He spoke these words to a people who knew what it was to live through a time of crisis. This advice may be exactly what we need to hear in today’s world.

Amidst the turmoil of war and civil unrest, the continued threat of COVID, wildfires, hurricanes, floods and droughts, we hear the intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change (IPCC) report from the leading world climate scientists. The UN report describes it as ‘Code Red’ for human driven global heating. (For more details of this report, do a web search for: IPCC report.)

At this moment we may feel overwhelmed, helpless and tempted simply to ‘throw in the towel’ and do nothing. However, this is not the response of our Church. Beginning on September 1 through October 4, Catholics around the globe are being invited to join in the Season of Creation. The theme this year is “Restoring Our Common Home.” The global Christian family is called to awaken to the urgent need to heal our relationships with creation and with each other and to encourage our parish communities to do the same, “for we know that things can change” (Laudato Si’ 13)

In the next few weeks, some of the ways that Catholics are finding to “light one candle in the darkness” and bring the light of Christ’s self-sacrificing love to the world around us will be shared here. As we prepare to join in this Season of Creation on September 1, consider one simple act you can do today that will bring healing to our earth; as simple as turning off lights and electronics when not needed, replacing older light bulbs with energy efficient ones and/or using reusable water container.

Vaccination is act of love, pope says in ad campaign

VATICAN CITY (CNS) — When each individual makes a small act of charity, like getting the COVID-19 vaccine, every gesture added together can transform the world, Pope Francis said in a global ad campaign.

"Being vaccinated with vaccines authorized by the competent authorities is an act of love. And contributing to ensure the majority of people are vaccinated is an act of love – love for oneself, love for one's family and friends, love for all people," he said in a public service announcement released Aug. 18 in Rome.

The video message was part of a global effort by the U.S.-based nonprofit Ad Council and the COVID Collaborative's "It's Up To You" campaign to increase people's confidence in COVID-19 vaccines by reminding them that the vaccines are safe, effective and save people's lives. The Vatican's Dicastery for Integral Human Development also cooperated with the educational initiative.

The three-minute video in Spanish with English, Spanish and Portuguese subtitles features Pope Francis and six cardinals and archbishops from North and South America. Archbishop José H. Gomez of Los Angeles, president of the U.S. Conference of Catholic Bishops, is among them.

The "It's Up To You" campaign has been inviting "trusted messengers" to deliver "fact-based and life-saving information to populations that are hesitant about the COVID-19 vaccines, helping them to make informed decisions for themselves and their families," it said in a joint news release with the Ad Council.

Lisa Sherman, president and CEO of the Ad Council, said, "The role of trusted messengers to educate and inspire their networks is undeniable."

"We are extremely grateful to (Pope Francis) and the cardinals and archbishops for lending their voices and platforms to help people across the globe feel more confident in the vaccines," particularly to the world's 1.3 billion Catholics, she said in the news release.

It said 72% of the adult population and 67% of Hispanic adults have currently been vaccinated against COVID-19 with at least one dose in the United States.

But COVID-19 cases are on the rise worldwide, especially in North, Central and South America. Some nations are still showing very low rates of individuals who are fully vaccinated, such as Honduras with only 5.5% of the adult population and El Salvador with 30%.

While access to vaccines is a challenge, "confidence in the vaccines also presents a hurdle," the news release said.

In his message, the pope said, "Thanks to God and to the work of many, we now have vaccines to protect us from COVID-19. They grant us the hope of ending the pandemic, but only if they are available to all and if we work together."

Getting inoculated is "an act of love" for oneself, family, friends and all people, he said. "Love is also social and political" as these individual "small gestures of personal charity" add up, "overflowing" into something universal that is "capable of transforming and improving societies," he said.

"Vaccination is a simple but profound way of promoting the common good and caring for each other, especially the most vulnerable," the pope said.

"I pray to God that everyone may contribute their own small grain of sand, their own small gesture of love: no matter how small, love is always great. Contribute with these small gestures for a better future. God bless you, and thank you," he said.

Also offering messages encouraging vaccination were: Cardinal Carlos Aguilar Retes of Mexico; Cardinal Óscar Rodríguez Maradiaga of Tegucigalpa, Honduras; Cardinal Cláudio Hummes, retired archbishop of São Paulo; Cardinal Gregorio Rosa Chávez, auxiliary bishop of San Salvador, El Salvador; and Archbishop Miguel Cabrejos Vidarte of Trujillo, Peru.

The campaign encouraged people to go to GetVaccineAnswers.org and DeTiDepende.org for more information and answers to questions about the COVID-19 vaccines.

A century of love’ filled with local connections

Birthdays are meant to be celebrated. On August 24, 2021, the Grey Nuns of the Sacred Heart, Associates, families and friends will celebrate their 100th anniversary -- “A Century of Love, A Century of Service.”

St. Marguerite d’Youville founded the Sisters of Charity of Montreal, the Grey Nuns, in 1731. From this first foundation, five other congregations of Grey Nuns were established: the Sisters of Charity of St. Hyacinthe, Sisters of Charity of Quebec, Sisters of Charity of Ottawa (Grey Nuns of the Cross), the Grey Nuns of the Sacred Heart and Grey Sisters of the Immaculate Conception. Each congregation came on St. Marguerite’s legacy of trust in Divine Providence and loving service to those made poor.

Several Canadian Grey Nun congregations have missions in the United States and throughout the world, and their Sisters are primarily French speaking, though many are bilingual. The Grey Nuns of the Sacred Heart and the Grey Sisters of the Immaculate Conception were both founded as English-speaking communities, and only the Grey Nuns of the Sacred Heart are based in the United States.

By the late 1800s, the Sisters of Charity of Ottawa had established missions of education, health care and social services in Canada and also in the North Country, in Buffalo and in Lowell, Massachusetts.

Many American women sought to enter the congregation, but language and customs proved to be barriers. Attempts to resolve these differences were not successful, and eventually, some sisters made the painful decision to separate from the Ottawa community and found a new American congregation of Grey Nuns.

One hundred years ago, 155 Grey Nuns of the Cross – some U.S. citizens and some Canadians – became Grey Nuns of the Sacred Heart (GNSH) at D’Youville College in Buffalo.

After the separation from Ottawa, the Grey Nuns of the Sacred Heart decided to establish their motherhouse in Philadelphia at the invitation of Cardinal Dougherty. The second motherhouse was established at Melrose Park, Pennsylvania in 1922. Finally, their third motherhouse was established at Yardley, Pennsylvania in 1966.

Grey Nuns of the Sacred Heart continued the ministries which were originally the responsibility of the Ottawa Grey Nuns in Buffalo, Ogdensburg, Plattsburgh, and in Lowell, Massachusetts, with the exception of those that were French-American.

Almost immediately after the separation from Ottawa, the new community accepted a new mission, St. Joan of Arc School, in Jackson Heights, New York. In the 100 years of GNSH history, sisters undertook many other ministries in education, health care, pastoral ministry and social work in several eastern states, in Alaska and in Peru.

Immaculate Conception Parish in Lowell, Massachusetts has provided the congregation with many sisters, including three wonderful major superiors/presidents: Sister Mary Charlotte Barton, Sister Jean Liston and Sister Julia Lanigan.

The Diocese of Ogdensburg has provided the Grey Nuns with numerous members. Many are alumnae from St. Mary’s Academy (SMA) in Ogdensburg.

The following Sisters are from other places in the Diocese of Ogdensburg: Sister Mary Loretta Bechard, Cooperville; Sister Mary Brennan, Mineville; Sister Mary of Lourdes, Sister Ann Michael Delaney, Sister Agnes of the Sacred Heart and Sister Mary Marcella, Canton; Sister Mary Teresa LaBrake, Lisbon (graduated from SMA); Sister Mary Elizabeth Lafleur, Fort Covington; Sister Mary Joanna Larock, Morristown; Sister Angelina LeClair, Massena; Sister Francis Xavier Lynch, Watertown; Sister Alice McColllister and Sister Joan Patricia McCormick, Chateaugay; Sister Joan McElwain, Moria; Sister Mary Charles McKillop, Saranac Lake; Sister Mary Priscilla, Sister Catherine Teresa McMillian and Sister Mary Loyola Murphy, Lowville; Sister Mary Agnes Quigley, Sister Mary Ursula Quigley and Sister Pierrette Remillard, Peru; and Sister St. Louis Roy, Sister Bernard of the Cross and Sister Margaret Turner of Pope Mills. These vocations came from Champlain Valley Hospital School of Nursing, Plattsburgh, A Barton Hepburn School of Nursing and D’Youville College, Buffalo.

Please pray for the Grey Nuns of the Sacred Heart as they celebrate their one hundredth year.
We must be doers of the Word

This has been a tumultuous summer, with political upheavals, citizens fighting tyrants in so many countries, and struggles for many to find permanent jobs. In addition, the pandemic is still far from over.

What are the proper procedures for children and young adults returning to schools and colleges? There is still lack of security for all of us. How do we cope this Labor Day?

Our Mass readings will be quite helpful. The Epistle of James tells us that we must be doers of the Word, and not hearers only. it’s not enough just to listen to the Scriptures, we must also live them. Show me your works, James says, and I’ll show you the truth of my faith that motivates my works. It is a living faith that saves us.

Then, Jesus in the Gospel very emphatically states that we must love the Word if we are to live it effectively. Deeds without love behind them result in mere legal observance. The Book of Deuteronomy contains the “Shema,” the two great commandments of the Law, love of God and love of neighbor. Jesus was upset with the religious leaders who added many legalisms that emphasized the letter, rather than the spirit of the law. And when the Pharisees accused his disciples of omitting the legal washing of hands before eating, Jesus points out that real filth comes not from the outside but from the inside of a person.

This weekend, we also honor the dignity of work and of workers. It’s a good time for us to reflect on the obligations of both employers and employees. As a worker, do I focus on doing the best job I can, and am I doing it because I care about the quality of the results? Do I treat my fellow-workers and my employers with respect? Even if the person I’m working with is irritating? They still have the dignity of being a child of God. If I am an employer, do I provide adequate health care for my employees, and do I provide time off for Sunday worship and adequate family time? It was a great Pope, Leo XIII, who wrote an encyclical (On the Dignity of Labor) in 1891, shortly before Labor Day was made a national holiday.

The Church has always promoted the dignity of every working person. Our Catholic Church has always taught the doctrine of the living wage – in other words, every person has a right to earn enough money to feed and clothe and shelter his family, and that governments have an obligation to legislate to that effect.

May the power of Scripture guide us into more intense Christian living. May our Fall activities be done with greater love, and reliance on prayer and frequent reception of the true Body and Blood of Christ.

We took a ride on a boat

A few weeks ago, a bunch of deacons, deacon wives and widows came together to, well, be together. The idea for the gathering grew out of a discussion a few of us deacons were having in the wake of the cancellation, again, of our annual Assembly.

Bishop LaValley calls his priests together each year for a few days of prayer, fellowship and education. On the day the priests are to leave their Presbyteral Assembly, the deacons arrive for a similar gathering with the bishop.

There is a luncheon for all the clergy of the diocese, priests and deacons, gathered together in a collegial setting. It is a chance to renew friendships fostered when a priest and a deacon served in a parish together, or to allow for introductions, or just to say “hi” to a fellow clergyman you haven’t seen in a while.

COVID put the kibosh on those gatherings, twice. Each member of the clergy in the diocese goes on a retreat each year. A priest or deacon is usually alone on his retreat. It is an opportunity for him to “get out of Dodge” and spend some time with God. Through prayer, spiritual reading and introspection, the retreatant finds inner peace and is hopefully reinvigorated.

The opportunities cancelled by the virus are a different animal. Assemblies, deanery meetings, prayer opportunities like the annual Chrism Mass give all the men called to Holy Orders in the diocese a chance to visit with each other, share ideas and joke a bit about those unusual events that seem to be a constant in parish and ministry life.

For deacons and our wives, the annual assembly gives us a chance to come together as a community. Men are ordained but our wives have lived the life of the deacon through six years of lay and deacon formation and then are supportive of the new, mostly volunteer roles the deacon takes on in a parish, hospital, nursing home, soup kitchen, prison and other ministries.

The deacon and his wife learn together how to wear the many hats they have been blessed to possess. They are friends, lovers, parents and grandparents. They might be retired, recently retired, working or between jobs. They learn from other deacons and wives they are not alone dealing with the unique challenges posed by diaconal life.

And so almost from the introduction of the deaconate to the diocese by Bishop Brzana in 1977, this community was born. A community of mutual support more than anything. The members of the community, scattered as they are from one end of the diocese to the other, like to come together.

Sixty of us, our Bishop and our Vicar, Father Chris Carrara, spent two hours on a boat in the Thousand Islands and then had dinner together.

That’s how we met the COVID challenge as a community.

It was refreshing. It was cathartic.

Fellow prisoner keeps hope alive

Article from FIDES missionary news service of the Pontifical Mission Societies

“What can we all do together to help Sister Gloria Cecilia Narvaez in the hands of the kidnappers for 4 years and 6 months?” writes the Canadian Edith Blais who shared 5 months of imprisonment in the hands of jihadist together with the Colombian nun of the Congregation of the Franciscan Sisters of Mary Immaculate, and who managed to escape in March 2020 from the terrorist group GSIM (Group for the support of Islam and Muslims) who kidnapped her in Burkina Faso in December 2018.

The note sent to Fides through Father Pierluigi Maccalli, a priest of the Society for African Missions kidnapped by jihadist militiamen on September 17, 2018 and released on October 8, 2020, is full of hope and at the same time of concern for the fate of the nun of whom, after more than 4 years, there is still no news.

“She shared everything she had with me,” said the Canadian. “Sister Gloria helped me a lot during my imprisonment in the desert. She is a great woman, and it saddens me to know that it is precisely this characteristic that brought her to this hell. She has dedicated her life to helping others, travelling to poor and dangerous countries to support women and to look after the health of young children who probably would not have survived without this kindness.”

“I would like to share a true story, a truth that unfortunately still exists today,” writes Edith, who wanted to share her brief reflection to make Sister Gloria’s reality visible to others. “She was working in an orphanage when a group of rebels broke in and demanded money. Unfortunately, the women who worked there did not have what the terrorists were looking for, living on next to nothing. Fearing that the attackers would harm her companions, she begged them to choose her if they wanted to hurt one of them, as she was the oldest of the four. They listened to her and fled the orphanage taking her with them, heading into the desert on their motorcycles. It was a journey that lasted several days and will mark her forever. Sister Gloria is deeply affected by post-traumatic stress disorder and finds herself alone. Her suffering is great, but she remains strong and does not lose hope. She has always kept her faith in God, in life, in humanity.”

The Canadian woman concludes her appeal by exhorting to continue “to keep alive the hope and story of Sister Gloria Cecilia Narvaez, so that humanity can think of her and carry her in their heart, as I carry her in mine.”

Campus Ministry: Unlocking pathways to Jesus Christ

With the Bishop’s Fund Appeal now underway, the North Country Catholic will be highlighting some of the ministries supported by the Bishop’s Fund.

By Thomas Semeraro
Campus Ministry Director

Catholic Campus Ministry in the Diocese of Ogdensburg exists to create opportunities for college students to encounter Christ through the sacraments and each other. Campus ministers walk with students as they grow in their understanding of the faith. Campus ministers work to create a community of students that encourages each other to increase in holiness.

With over 10 colleges and universities across the Diocese of Ogdensburg, it doesn’t take long to realize that this is a challenging ministry. The Diocesan Bishop’s Fund Appeal supports five campus minister positions, a diocesan administrator, and many volunteers. These dedicated individuals work to assist Catholic and non-Catholic college students discover their path to Jesus Christ. This is accomplished through sacramental celebration in the supporting parishes as well as opportunities for Adoration, bible study, movie nights, holiday celebrations, social events, and outdoor excursions to name a few. At a weekly gathering, a first-year transfer student at Potsdam shared, “I have been very grateful for the experience and friendships in the Newman club. It has provided a sense of community to grow in our Catholic faith and yet also do fun, relaxing activities to alleviate the stresses of school.”

Having a place on campus for college students to feel connected to God is essential, especially in these times of uncertainty.

Along with college community offerings, the Bishop Fund Appeal also supports pilgrimage opportunities such as the March for Life to D.C. and retreat opportunities at Guggenheim. The March for Life pilgrimage and retreats at Guggenheim are tailored to the needs of college-age adults. Pilgrimages and retreats further strengthen relationship building with Jesus Christ as witnessed in each other and the sacraments.

Providing opportunities and creating pathways to the sacraments is a key component of Campus Ministry.

“I cannot tell you how many times I’ve heard adult Catholics admit they didn’t go to church while in college because they got caught up in the demands and activities of college life. Catholic Campus Ministry puts ministers in and around campuses. Their presence is an open invitation for college students to continue attending parish masses and participating in the sacraments while they are in college. This is essential in forming strong, faith-filled Catholic adults.

As we move into the 2021-22 school year, we are still faced with challenges presented by the ongoing COVID pandemic. Campus ministers, with the support of the Bishop Fund Appeal, are working ever harder to find innovative and engaging methods to reach college-age Catholics in a meaningful and rewarding way. Whether on a digital platform or in-person, the diocesan campus ministers are dedicated to spreading the Gospel and creating a “home” for college students to gather.

It’s with your support to the Bishops Fund Appeal that we are able to do the “good work” of the Lord and “unlock pathways to Jesus Christ.”

Thank you for your contribution to this ever-important ministry in a time when the world is working to pull young Catholics away from their faith.
Campers get taste of Guggenheim at fun days

By Darcy Fargo

SARANACLASS – While COVID shuttered teen camp at Camp Guggenheim for the second summer, the camp fun returned for two Guggenheim Summer Fun Days.

Guggenheim campers — returning and new alike — attended the two fun days on July 30 and 31. Youth ages 12 to 15 attended July 30, and ages 16 to 18 attended on July 31.

“The Guggenheim Summer Fun Days presented a wonderful opportunity for youth to visit for the first time or re-visit Guggenheim Summer Camp,” said diocesan Youth Ministry Director Thomas Semeraro. “Even though strict COVID protocols were in place, everyone had a wonderful time. The campers in attendance had the chance to dive into what was really a week of camp squeezed into one day! Kudos to the volunteer staff of counselors for putting together wonderful programming. The (two days) were full of fun and activities, as well as time for the campers to sit in the stillness and beauty of Guggenheim.”

The youth, many of whom were missing their normal camp experiences, were happy to have the opportunity to spend the day at Guggenheim.

“It was a great idea,” said Elizabeth Eggleston, 15, of Theresa. “We were able to at least have a part of camp, even if it wasn’t a whole week. We did everything we would’ve done at camp minus the campfire and cookout. We did a big game, we played on the beach and swam, we had Mass, and we played volleyball.”

Eggleston said this would’ve been her third year at camp had COVID not canceled the season.

“My favorite part of camp is being able to grow in faith and meet people,” she said. “When you go to camp, you make strong friendships that last.”

Seth McDonald, 15, travels to Camp Guggenheim from his family’s home in the Cobleskill area. His father, Scott McDonald, was a camp counselor in the 1990s and 2000s.

Scott McDonald served as a volunteer counselor for the Guggenheim Summer Fun Days, so Seth was able to attend both sessions of the event.

“It was really cool to be able to help set up and see the background of it,” Seth McDonald said. “And it was great to be at camp. It filled my cup, if that makes sense. I really like the community at camp. The community there has always been so accepting. It’s always like seeing old friends.”

Eggleston said she would’ve been her third year at camp had COVID not canceled the season.

“I’ve had a connection to camp since 1985,” added Scott McDonald. “It was great being able to staff those days. It was nice working with former staff and former campers I worked with, and it was great meeting new campers and staff.”

Jacob Fargo, 14, of Moira, said he enjoyed the opportunity to have the camp experience while camp isn’t running.

“It was good,” Fargo said of the fun day. “I wish it had been a little longer, but it was just nice to have some Guggenheim. Meeting new people and having fun was my favorite part.”

All three teens said they hope Camp Guggenheim returns in its regular form next year.

“It’s really important to get everyone back there,” said Seth McDonald. “When we get the chance to go back, I really encourage people to come back or to try it for the first time.”

“I’m looking forward to meeting new people, seeing people I met before and having fun,” added Fargo.

“If someone is debating whether or not to go to camp, I want them to know it’s 100 percent worth it,” said Eggleston. “You make new friends, and everyone is very welcoming. No matter what your background is or who you are, you can be yourself at camp. Even if you’re shy, by the first or second day, someone is bound to help you break out of your shell and help you get comfortable being yourself at camp.”
