PRAYING & HELPING

SARANAC LAKE — The Diocese of Ogdensburg will be offering a healing opportunity called Life-Giving Wounds, a Catholic ministry helping adults from divorced and separated families. The three-day retreat, scheduled for June 12-14 at Camp Guggenheim, is uniquely created for adult children of divorce, ages 18 and older. Participants are invited — no matter the circumstances of their parents’ break-up — to move through the broken image of love that appeared to them in their parents’ divorce to their identity as God’s beloved children and part of His family. The retreat gives participants a greater understanding of the wound of their parent’s loss of love and how it affects their lives; it offers advice about loving and trusting others; and it points to the Catholic faith and the sacraments as essential parts of the healing journey.

Pope: Confession is about forgiveness

VATICAN CITY (CNS) — The sacrament of reconciliation “is not so much about our sins” as it is about God’s forgiveness, Pope Francis said.

"Think about it: If our sins were at the heart of the sacrament, almost everything would depend on us, on our repentance, our efforts, our resolve," but it is about God’s power, mercy and grace, the pope said March 25 during a Lenten penance service in St. Peter’s Basilica.

The service, with individual confessions, preceded the pope’s formal act of consecrating the world, particularly Russia and Ukraine, to the Immaculate Heart of Mary.

Pope Francis went to one of the confessionals in the basilica and, remaining standing because of knee trouble, confessed his sins before joining more than 100 other priests in hearing confessions.

The Vatican penance service was canceled in 2020 and 2021 because of COVID-19 restrictions.

Pope Francis began the service praying that God would "open our eyes, that we may see the evil we have committed, and touch our hearts, that we may be converted to you."

The prayer booklet given to people participating in the service contained a 25-point “examination of conscience” designed to prepare them for confession and absolution by looking at their faith and prayer lives, the way they treat family members and others, whether they go to Mass every Sunday and holy day of obligation, how they practice charity, follow church moral teachings and how they use the time and talents God has given them.
The text said only, “#BadCatholic.”

As I stepped out of my car in the office parking lot on Friday morning, one of my favorite colleagues reminded me that it was a solemnity, and we could eat meat on a Lenten Friday.

“I knew that at one time, but I had completely forgotten,” I said.

Then, as I discussed it with this colleague, it became apparent that I could not come up with the name of the solemnity we were celebrating.

Immediately following this conversation, I sent my husband a text message reminding him he could eat meat and acknowledging that I couldn't explain why at that moment, because I couldn't remember the solemnity we were celebrating.

I ended my text with “#BadCatholic.”

My loving husband then replied with a text reminding me of a time I messed up a name related to a solemnity in a very public way.

He concluded the text thread repeating, “#BadCatholic.”

I once thought I knew a lot about Catholicism. Then I started working for the Church. Now, barely a week goes by when I'm not asking someone to explain a teaching or a tradition with which I'm not familiar.

While I don't really think I'm a “#BadCatholic,” I know I have a lot to learn. I'm pretty confident one could learn about the teachings of Jesus and His Church every day of life and still not know even a fraction of everything there is to learn.

That's part of the beauty of our faith, isn't it?

As I interviewed an instructor from one of the amazing Rite of Christian Initiation for Adults (RCIA) programs in the diocese for this week's edition (see the story on Page 5), she said she and her fellow instructors refer to RCIA as "a process' not a 'program'" because “a program has an end.” Learning our faith and growing in our relationships with the Lord doesn't end. It's a life-long journey.

Luckily, our God and our Church gives us lots of opportunities to grow and learn. Our parishes and diocese sponsor outstanding workshops and events. There are books, articles, podcasts and videos on nearly every topic imaginable. And, of course, we learn and grow as we participate in Mass, hear the Scripture readings and hear the reflections and explanations from our priests and deacons in their homilies. That's before I even think about those moments in conversation – even parking lot conversations – when I learn something new or realize there's something I don't know.

There's lots of opportunity to develop and learn.

I may need to rethink my hashtag comment. "GrowingCatholic" would've been better.

Lenten Masses are filled with the parables of Jesus. As you know, these parables are stories that Jesus cleverly crafted to teach the apostles and the people of all time. It is important for you to remember that the parables of Jesus are always about us. So, it is important that we find ourselves in the parables of Jesus.

Each year on Laetare Sunday, the Gospel reading is one of my favorite parables of Jesus: the Parable of the Prodigal Son. This parable is often used as the Scripture reading at Lenten Penance Services. Many like to name this parable as the Parable of the forgiving, loving father. Let us see why.

I am certain you will remember the story. This father has two sons. The younger son asks his father for his share of the inheritance now. In Jesus' story, the father agrees, and the son leaves home and begins to live a very decadent life. He ends up moneyless and also tending swine – not a good job for a Jew.

As Jesus’ story goes on, this younger son comes to his senses and decides to return home and admit to his father that he was wrong and asks to be a hired hand. As the younger son heads up the road to his father’s place, we are surprised to learn that the father sees him coming and runs out to welcome him. I suspect if this were my story, I would make the father much more demanding. But this is Jesus’ story. He tells us that the father welcomes his son and has a banquet prepared as well as a party. The father does not demand anything from this son.

For those who see themselves in this story as the younger son – those who have rejected God and gone off on their own – Jesus wants to teach them that God our Father will always welcome them back freely and with understanding, and in love with care as they repent and seek God’s acceptance. This is God’s message for us to pass on to others.

There is more to Jesus’ parable. The older son comes home from the fields and is upset to learn of this celebration because his brother was not treated as they repent and seek God’s acceptance. Again, this is God’s message to us for pass on to others.

Here is where the story of Jesus’ parable ends. I would hope in the spirit of Our Savior that I could finish the story with the older son realizing the love and forgiving spirit of his father and agreeing to join him and welcome his brother home.

In our time, I believe Jesus is teaching those who have remained faithful and united closely with God but seem to find it annoying and maybe unacceptable when those who have deserted the Lord but then are welcome openly and lovingly when they repent. May we remember well the Father’s message to the older son in Jesus’ story and rejoice that our brother or sister has returned.

These parables of Jesus are such a gift. These stories teach the message of Jesus is such a beautiful way.
Turn to the Queen of Peace

Editor’s Note: The following is Bishop Terry R. LaValley’s homily and the Act of Consecration of Ukraine and Russia to the Immaculate Heart of Mary on the Solemnity of the Annunciation of the Lord on March 25.

I don’t need to tell you that ours is a troubled world. The Immaculate Heart of Mary throbs with such wretchedness with such callous disregard for human life, even the most vulnerable among us. My sisters and brothers in Christ, we must do more than just shrug our shoulders and somehow think makes the impossible possible.

Mary’s “YES,” an extremely simple word, brought hope and salvation into a world that waited in darkness. In so many ways, we don’t even know that we are living in a world of darkness. St. John Paul II often referred to ours as a culture of death. Pope Francis refers to it as a “throwaway culture.” We are so cavalier, reckless and disrespectful of human life.

So, at this very hour, let us join Pope Francis in Rome and the faithful throughout the world as we pray an Act of Consecration of Russia and Ukraine to the Immaculate Heart of Mary on this, the Solemnity of the Annunciation of our Lord.

O Mary, Mother of God and our Mother, in this time of trial we turn to you. As our Mother, you love us and know us: no concern of our hearts is hidden from you. Mother of mercy, how often we have experienced your watchful care and your peaceful presence! You never cease to guide us to Jesus, the Prince of Peace.

Yet we have strayed from that path of peace. We have forgotten the lesson learned from the tragedies of the last century, the sacrifice of the millions who fell in two world wars. We have disregarded the commitments we made as a community of nations. We have betrayed peoples’ dreams of peace and the hopes of the young. We grew sick with greed, we thought only of our own nations and their interests, we grew indifferent and caught up in our selfish needs and concerns. We chose to ignore God, to be satisfied with our illusions, to grow arrogant and aggressive, to suppress innocent lives and to stockpile weapons. We stopped being our neighbor’s keepers and stewards of our common home. We have ravaged the garden of the earth with war and by our sins we have broken the heart of our heavenly Father, who desires us to be brothers and sisters. We grew indifferent to everyone and everything except ourselves. Now with shame we cry out: Forgive us, Lord!

Holy Mother, amid the misery of our sinfulness, amid our struggles and weaknesses, amid the mystery of iniquity that is evil and war, you remind us that God never abandons us, but continues to look upon us with love, ever ready to forgive us and raise us up to new life. He has given you to us and made your Immaculate Heart a refuge for the Church and for all humanity. By God’s gracious will, you are ever with us; even in the most troubled moments of our history, you are there to guide us with tender love.

We now turn to you and knock at the door of your heart. We are your beloved children. In every age you make yourself known to us, calling us to conversion. At this dark hour, help us and grant us your comfort. Say to us once more: “Am I not here, I who am your Mother?” You are able to unite the knots of our hearts and of our times. In you we place our trust. We are confident that, especially in moments of trial, you will not be deaf to our supplication and will come to our aid.

That is what you did at Cana in Galilee, when you interceded with Jesus and he worked the first of his signs. To preserve the joy of the wedding feast, you said to him: “They have no wine” (Jn 2:3). Now, O Mother, repeat those words and that prayer, for in our own day we have run out of the wine of hope, joy has fled, fraternity has faded. We have forgotten our humanity and squandered the gift of peace. We opened our hearts to violence and des...
Retreat to be held for adult children of divorce

SARANAC LAKE – The Diocese of Ogdensburg will be offering a healing opportunity called Life-Giving Wounds, a Catholic ministry helping adults from divorced and separated families. The three-day retreat, scheduled for June 12-14 at Camp Guggenheim, is uniquely created for adult children of divorce, ages 18 and older.

Participants are invited – no matter the circumstances of their parents’ break-up – to move through the broken image of love that appeared to them in their parents’ divorce to their identity as God’s beloved children and part of His family. The retreat gives participants a greater understanding of the wound of their parent’s loss of love and how it affects their lives; it offers advice about loving and trusting others; and it points to the Catholic faith and the sacraments as essential parts of the healing journey.

Retreats are led by a trained, experienced team of faithful Catholics who are all adult children of divorce. A Catholic priest also serves on the team. Father Christopher C. Carrara will serve the local retreat. The national team is traveling from the Washington DC area to facilitate the weekend. A local team led by Steve Tartaglia, Family Life director, and Colleen Miner, Respect Life director, will also assist. Both have attended a Life-Giving Wounds retreat.

“We often think of the vocations crisis in terms of the low numbers of men getting ordained and women entering religious life,” said Tartaglia. “The numbers of couples getting married, is also extremely low. Even lower are the numbers of couples pursuing sacramental marriages. I believe that children who have grown up in divorced families find the notions of trust and permanent commitment very challenging. Who would blame them? But they miss out on the many blessings that God wants to give to them. This retreat helps them to explore those wounds and begin healing.”

“It helped me to understand how my parent’s divorce and annulment has affected my thinking and actions. It was nice to connect with others who feel the same way or have the same reactions. Often children are told that it’s for the best and not much will change. But that’s not true,” added Miner. “This retreat is so needed and can help many – that’s our goal in offering it in our diocese. Right now it’s in a few dioceses but they are at a distance: Georgia, Colorado, Michigan, Florida, Virginia, California... but if you visit lifegivingwounds.org, you’ll now see Ogdensburg listed!”

The weekend includes presentations by the team, small group discussions, opportunities for prayer, reflection and for reconciliation and the Eucharist.

Topics to be covered during the retreat include:
- Finding our deepest identity
- Faith and our relationship with God
- Love, dating, and the Sacrament of Marriage
- Anger, anxiety, and shame
- Family boundaries and forgiveness
- The Christian meaning of suffering

There are also support groups offered after the retreat, in person and online.

The retreat in our diocese will be held at The Guggenheim Center in Saranac Lake. The registration fee is $100 and includes overnight accommodations, food and all retreat materials. To register for the June retreat please complete the online registration at rcdony.org/lifegw or contact Diocese of Ogdensburg Family Life Director Stephen Tartaglia startaglia@rcdyny.org 315-393-2920.

strictiveness. How greatly we need your maternal help! Therefore, O Mother, hear our prayer.

Star of the Sea, do not let us be shipwrecked in the tempest of war. Ark of the New Covenant, inspire projects and paths of reconciliation. Queen of Heaven, restore God’s peace to the world. Eliminate hatred and the thirst for revenge, and teach us forgiveness. Free us from war, protect our world from the menace of nuclear weapons. Queen of the Rosary, make us realize our need to pray and to rejoin.

Queen of Peace, obtain peace for our world.

O Mother, may your sorrowful plea stir our hardened hearts. May the tears you shed for us make this valley parched by our hardened blossom anew. Amid the thunder of weapons, may your prayer turn our thoughts to peace. May your maternal touch soothe those who suffer and flee from the rain of bombs.

May your motherly embrace comfort those forced to leave their homes and their native land. May your Sorrowful Heart move us to compassion and inspire us to open our doors and to care for our brothers and sisters who are injured and cast aside.

May your motherly embrace comfort those forced to leave their homes and their native land. May your Sorrowful Heart move us to compassion and inspire us to open our doors and to care for our brothers and sisters who are injured and cast aside.

Holy Mother of God, as you stood beneath the cross, Jesus, seeing the disciple at your side, said: Behold, your son” (Jn 19:26). In this way he entrusted each of us to you. To the disciple, and to each of us, he said: “Behold, your Mother” (v. 27). Mother Mary, we now desire to welcome you into our lives and our history. At this hour, a weary and distraught humanity stands with you beneath the cross, needing to entrust itself to you and, through you, to consecrate itself to Christ. The people of Ukraine and Russia, who venerate you with great love, now turn to you, even as your heart beats with compassion for them and for all those peoples decimated by war, hunger, injustice and poverty.

Therefore, Mother of God and our Mother, to your Immaculate Heart we solemnly entrust and consecrate ourselves, the Church and all humanity, especially Russia and Ukraine. Accept this act that we carry out with confidence and love. Grant that war may end and peace spread throughout the world. The “Fiat” that arose from your heart opened the doors of history to the Prince of Peace. We trust that, through your heart, peace will dawn once more. To you we consecrate the future of the whole human family, the needs and expectations of every people, the anxieties and hopes of the world.

Through your intercession, may God’s mercy be poured out on the earth and the gentle rhythm of peace return to mark our days. Our Lady of the “Fiat”, on whom the Holy Spirit descended, restore among us the harmony that comes from God. May you, our “living fountain of hope”, water the dryness of our hearts. In your womb Jesus took flesh; help us to foster the growth of communion. You once told the streets of our world: lead us now on the paths of peace. Amen.
Seeker: ‘I question everything’

Instructor guides ‘seekers’ as they prepare to enter the Catholic Church

By Darcy Fargo
Editor

WATERTOWN – Midge Fraser has been accompanying “seekers” on the journey into the Catholic Church since 1988, but the ministry still feels like home to her.

“I love it,” she said. “I can’t see myself stopping.”

Fraser said Blessed Sacrament Parish in Watertown has eight individuals – four male and four female – going through the Rite of Christian Initiation for Adults (RCIA) this year.

“It’s a beautiful group,” she said. “They’re such a faithful group – possibly the most faithful group we’ve ever had. They participate in everything they can. A couple of our seekers – that’s what we call them – have been going to daily Mass throughout Lent.”

Fraser said working with seekers – adults and older children – has been a joyful experience.

“Working with kids can be a challenge,” she said. “You don’t always get to see the fruits of your labor until maybe they’re grown, and you see them come back and bring their children to Mass. With RCIA, you see the fruits of the labor, so to speak, when they come into the Church. We’re always looking to see what we can do better and how we can challenge the seekers more and help them to grow in their spiritual lives. While we’re trying to teach them a lot, the most important thing is building their relationship with Jesus Christ.”

With adults, there can also be some challenges, though, Fraser said.

“There have been times in the past when someone has challenged us on something, and we may need to get to a point where we say ‘we have to stop here,’” she said. “That doesn’t mean we can’t keep looking at that topic with that individual, or maybe their sponsor or the pastor can look at it with them, but we have to be mindful of the entire group and making sure they’re not uncomfortable. We’re very fortunate to have Father (John M.) Mickey Demo as pastor here. He’s been very supportive and helpful.”

While she noted the position is a ministry to which she feels a strong connection, Fraser said her work with the RCIA program has benefited her, as well.

“I always say that we learn right along with them,” she said. “And it helps us a lot with our own prayer lives, since we’re always encouraging them to spend time in prayer.”

Fraser said she was previously able to attend multiple certifications, workshops and training programs related to her RCIA ministry.

“We still make mistakes,” she said. “But we’ve spent a lot of time figuring out what works and what doesn’t, and we continue to make changes to the program. I don’t think we’ll ever be done.”

Fraser noted, though, that she and her colleagues in Watertown, including program Director Kathy Allen, are available to share their experiences with other instructors and programs.

“We’ve helped other programs by explaining our process,” she said. “We refer to it as a ‘process’ not a ‘program.’ A program has an end. This is something they’ll be living through their entire lives. We’re open to helping any parish or group that would like to talk about what we’ve found that works and what we’ve found that doesn’t.”

After all, the ministry is all about giving back and following God’s call.

“We love helping,” Fraser said. “We’re just trying to do what God wants us to do.”

After years of abandoning her search for faith, she began providing care for Leon and Viola LeMere of Mooers.

“They were the most wonderful people I’ve met,” she said. They were part of the Catholic Church here. They helped me get a job with Catholic Charities. I work at St. Joseph’s Outreach.”

Father Scott R. Seymour, pastor in Morrisonville, Cadysville and Peru, would sometimes visit the outreach while Felix was working.

“I knew there were (faith formation) classes for kids, but Father Scott talked about the adult program,” she said. “I love to learn, so I decided to give it a try.”

Felix said she’s thoroughly enjoyed learning about Church teaching and history.

“I love the history and traditions,” she said. “I always want to keep drilling down deeper and learning more and more. I’m constantly asking questions.”

And Felix said she doesn’t plan to stop questioning. In fact, she’s still discerning whether she wants to be initiated into the Church at the Easter Vigil.

“I’m on the fence about a lot of things,” she said. “I don’t want to sign up for something I can’t really do. My sponsor has been awesome. She’s answered a lot of questions, and she has the same sort of questioning feeling I have. I’ll probably never stop questioning and listening with a critical ear.”

She also noted she still struggles with the loss of her son, who died 20 years ago as a teenager.

“After I lost my son, I couldn’t go to church without crying like a baby,” she said. “Any references to ‘son’ and I’m a basket case. It’s been 20 years, but it’s still like yesterday. I still get hit with that.”

She noted, though, that she’s found love and support in her church home.

“The people, the volunteers – they’re the best people,” she said. “If they can handle me being this difficult, I think they can handle anything.”

And Felix said she plans to continue learning and discerning.

“I’m going to keep questioning,” she said. “I’m trying to do the best I can. This is a good step on my path.”
Pope consecrates Ukraine, Russia to Mary

VATICAN CITY (CNS) — As Russia’s violent monthlong invasion continued to devastate Ukraine, Pope Francis laid the fates of both countries at the feet of Mary in the hopes that peace would finally reign.

"Mother of God and our mother, to your Immaculate Heart we solemnly entrust and consecrate ourselves, the church and all humanity, especially Russia and Ukraine," the pope said March 25, pronouncing the Act of Consecration after leading a Lenten penance service in St. Peter’s Basilica.

Praying before a statue of Mary that was loaned by the Shrine of Our Lady of Fatima at San Vittoriano on the outskirts of Rome, the pope pleaded with Mary to "accept this act that we carry out with confidence and love. Grant that war may end, and peace spread throughout the world."

Rest in Peace

This week marks the anniversary of the deaths of the following clergymen who have served in the Diocese of Ogdensburg:
March 31 – Rev. Louis Lapic, 1873; Rev. Gabriel Volker, 1873; Rev. Henri Langlais, O.M.I., 1980
April 1 – Rev. James Roche, 1927; Msgr. Herbert J. Hannan, 2002; Rev. Mark McDonald, MSC, 2018
April 2 – Pope John Paul II, 2005
April 3 – Msgr. Phillas Garand, 1942
April 5 – Rev. Florence McCarthy, 1907; Rev. Amedee Lacasse, M.S.C., 1941; Msgr. Francis P. Devan, 1992

Sitting in front of the statue, which was placed before the steps of the main altar on a red platform and adorned with white roses, the pope proclaimed the act of consecration. During the prayer, the pope paused at several moments to gaze at the statue of Mary before continuing to recite the prayer.

"To you we consecrate the future of the whole human family, the needs and expectations of every people, the anxieties and hopes of the world," he prayed.

After the consecration, the pope, accompanied by a young boy and girl, placed a bouquet of white roses at the feet of the statue. He then remained for a few moments, with eyes closed and head bowed in silent prayer, before stepping away.

According to the Vatican, an estimated 3,500 people filled St. Peter’s Basilica, which is 2,000 people more than watched on video screens from St. Peter’s Square. Police asked pilgrims who entered St. Peter’s Basilica carrying or wearing Ukrainian flags to put them away, since the event was a prayer service.

Among those present at the liturgy were Andriy Yurasch, Ukraine’s ambassador to the Holy See. The consecration, he tweeted March 25, is “another attempt (by the pope) to defend Ukraine from the devil’s war,” referring to Russia’s attacks on the country.

Joe Donnelly, who soon will present his credentials to the pope as the U.S. ambassador to the Holy See, also attended the service.

The Vatican announced March 18 that Pope Francis also asked bishops around the world to join him in consecrating Ukraine and Russia to the Immaculate Heart of Mary.

Cardinal Konrad Krajewski, the papal almoner, led a similar act of consecration at the Shrine of our Lady of Fatima in Portugal.

Bishops from around the world had announced special services to coincide with the timing of the consecration in Rome, even in the early hours of the morning.

At the Shrine of the Name of Maria Cathedral-Basilica in Hagatna, Guam, Archbishop Michael Byrnes led the faithful in praying the rosary before reciting the Act of Consecration at 2 a.m. local time March 26.

Archbishop Georg Gänswein, private secretary of retired Pope Benedict XVI, had told reporters that the former pope would join in the consecration from his residence.

In a video released before the liturgy, Archbishop Sviatoslav Shevchuk of Kyiv-Halych, major archbishop of the Ukrainian Catholic Church, said he would join in the consecration "because today we need very much the victory of good."

The consecration, Archbishop Shevchuk said, "means that it is never possible to make a deal, to cooperate with this evil that emerges from Russia today."

"And that is why we must pray for its conversion, for the eradication of that evil, ‘so that it,’ as the Mother of God of Fatima said, ‘might not destroy other states, might not cause yet another world war.’ We, as Christians, have a duty to pray for our enemies,” he said.

What lessons have you learned?

We in the northern hemisphere are blessed to be immersed in the mystery of life, death and resurrection cycle experienced by nature every year. During summer and early fall we observe its fullness of life, then in late fall we see the earth surrender to the death blows of winter. During this seeming death around us in nature, we know that underneath the mounds of snow the trees are stretching their roots deeper, and the soil is resting. Then, their "DNA clocks" know exactly when to burst forth with new life, as they gradually respond to the warmth of the sun and the moisture of the rain.

In John’s gospel (John 12:24), Jesus refers to this same cycle in nature to reveal to us something about our role as human beings in the whole of creation. "Unless a grain of wheat falls on the ground and dies, it remains only a single grain; but if it dies, it yields a rich harvest." The cycle of life, death and resurrection is the same; however, Jesus freely chooses to embrace this paschal mystery so that His life would produce a rich harvest of life for others that includes us and all creation.

One of the things that we observe in Jesus is his attentiveness to the beauty of the wildflowers in the field, the mustard seed, the vine and branches, etc. Then, he shares a lesson that could be revealing to us about our own lives as humans.

What lessons might we gain about the unfolding of our own spiritual lives during Lent that is meant to be a springtime for our souls? How observant am I to the unfolding of the earth’s seeming death coming to new life? What might it be revealing to me about my spiritual life that may seem dormant or even ‘dead’ at times that needs to be nurtured by the warmth of God’s love? One of the practices suggested for Lent is prayer. Praying with creation’s great lessons can be a way of experiencing the mystery of God’s love.
Leaders seek prayer, relief and advocacy for Ukraine

NEW YORK (CNS) – Exactly one month after Russian forces invaded neighboring Ukraine, religious and diplomatic leaders urged prayer, advocacy and relief for Ukrainians and those who help them.

Participants at a media briefing March 24 near the main altar at St. Patrick’s Cathedral in New York offered candid assessments of the war’s physical and spiritual toll. They also expressed hope that unprecedented solidarity among the world’s people will help bring peace and solace in the conflict.

Sergiy Kyslytsya, Ukraine’s ambassador to the United Nations, said he tried unsuccessfully to appeal to the dignity and beliefs of Russian diplomats in the U.N. Security Council and General Assembly in the days before the Feb. 24 start of the war.

“I told the Russian ambassador that there is no purgatory for war criminals. I do believe that war criminals are going straight to hell, unfortunately. I invited him to pray for his salvation and for the salvation of Russia’s President Vladimir Putin’s henchmen,” he said.

Kyslytsya spoke before returning to the U.N. to vote on a General Assembly resolution to deliver humanitarian aid to Ukraine.

He said, “Healthy forces are clearly in the majority” at the U.N., but the organization closed its eyes to instances of “pure evil” perpetrated by the Russian Federation in Moldova, Syria, Georgia, the Central African Republic and other places in the 30 years since the dissolution of the Soviet Union.

He said human trafficking is among the significant and realistic concerns for the more than 3 million vulnerable Ukrainians now “scattered across Europe.” Kyslytsya said trafficking is not a theoretical premise for academic discussion but should be part of planning in all of the places refugees are arriving.

He recalled that trafficking was hard to address when more than 1 million people arrived in Europe from the Middle East in a one-year period in the past decade. Now that 3 million-plus Ukrainians have become refugees in a matter of weeks, “you can imagine the scale of the tragedy and the volume of responsibility,” he said.

Archbishop Gabriele Caccia, the Vatican’s permanent observer to the United Nations, said that “what is happening now is a defeat of common humanity.”

He said in a meeting with the Russian ambassador to the Holy See and telephone conversations with Ukrainian President Volodymyr Zelenskyy and by dispatching high-level representatives, Pope Francis is trying to keep all doors open to restore peace.

He said Pope Francis has stressed the need to “stop the war, put down the weapons, take care of the people and talk about peaceful solutions.”

“The Holy Father does not despair, because we have the cross. It is a sign of the wickedness of human beings but also of hope that the Resurrection can overcome,” Archbishop Caccia said.

Archbishop Borys Gudziak of the Ukrainian Catholic Archeparchy of Philadelphia, said the Russian invasion is not a response to action by NATO or threats from the West or Ukraine.

Ukraine reduced its army from 900,000 to 100,000 soldiers between 1991 and 2014 and was the first country in the world to give up its nuclear capability. He said it had been the third largest nuclear power and had more nuclear capacity than the United Kingdom, China and France combined.

“War is stronger demonstration of peaceful intentions can there be?” he asked.

Ukraine’s embrace of democracy is a threat to Russia, he said. Ukraine has elected six presidents in 30 years and “no president in Russia ever lost an election. The disease of democracy cannot enter Russia because it is a threat to the oligarchic kleptocracy,” he said.

Archbishop Gudziak said within several days, 25 million Ukrainians will need aid. This includes more than 3.5 million refugees, 7 million internally displaced and 12 million still in their homes who cannot survive without help.

He said resistance in Ukraine is a biblical story akin to David and Goliath. “Ukraine has won this war morally,” he said. There is both tragedy and great victory. Europe is united and the North Atlantic relationship has gotten new purpose, he said.

“People were kind of lost in the beginning of the 21st century,” their beliefs clouded by commercial and transactional considerations, he said. “All of a sudden, we see something that thousands of Ukrainians believe is worth dying for.”

NEW YORK (ONS) – Grown-ups will find “The Lost City” (Paramount) a crowd-pleasing blend of action, comedy and love story. However, this generally diverting adventure includes material that makes it doubtful fare even for mature teens.

The story focuses on romance novelist Loretta Sage (Sandra Bullock) and her Fabio-like cover model, Alan Caprison (Channing Tatum). Alan has been representing Loretta’s fictional hero, Dash McMahon, for so long that her fans conflate the two, much to the scribe’s annoyance since she considers Alan vain and vacuous. What she doesn’t realize is that easily tongue-tied Alan carries a secret torch for her.

Widow Loretta is struggling with writer’s block as a result of unresolved grief. But she faces a much bigger problem when she’s suddenly kidnapped by crazed billionaire Abigail Fairfax (Daniel Radcliffe). Fairfax believes Loretta’s latest book, “The Lost City of D,” which was based in part on research she did years earlier with her archaeologist husband, holds the key to finding a fabulous treasure buried on a tiny tropical island. When she refuses to cooperate, he forcibly transports her there.

Despite having none of the skills needed to do so, Alan promptly sets off to rescue Loretta.

As directed and co-written by brothers Aaron and Adam Nee (working with Oren Uziel and Dana Fox), the travails of the central pair as they run through the jungle trying to evade Fairfax’s minions certainly provide some amusing moments. And a cameo appearance by Brad Pitt as Jack Trainer, a seemingly invincible Navy SEAL, is nothing short of hilarious.

Alan and Loretta’s burgeoning relationship, moreover – based, in part, on Loretta’s reconsideration of her initially dismissive view of Alan – remains chaste. Yet a couple of sequences, one of shocking mayhem and another in which a character strips down in a nonsexual context, take this well away from the realm of family entertainment.

The former interlude represents an extreme form of gross-out humor while the latter portrays an awkward, rather than intimate, situation. Both are needlessly included in what is otherwise a jaunty tale of the heroism that can be summoned up by love.

The film contains brief harsh violence with graphic gore, shots of rear male nudity played for laughs, other sexual and scatological jokes, a couple of uses of profanity, several milder oaths and occasional crude and crass language. The Catholic News Service classification is A-II – adults. The Motion Picture Association rating is PG-13 – parents strongly cautioned. Some material may be inappropriate for children under 13.

Lent has been a time of endless opportunity for new growth, a time for insights into the meaning of God's love for us, that is for those who have been faithful to prayer, penance, and almsgiving. On this Fifth Sunday of Lent, we need to perk up the ears of our hearts when God says to a despondent people in exile to look forward, not backward, as though this moment in which they hear Isaiah's prophecy is really the first day of their lives. He tells them to forget the past, for He has decided to do something new! This prophecy is really a veiled reference to the Father's decision to send His Son Jesus as Messiah. By His sacrifice, He will bring them out of their vicious cycle of sinning. How sad that hundreds of years later, when their descendants actually saw their Messiah in the flesh, they failed to remember Isaiah's words that God was doing something new!

In the light of that first reading, we can better understand that mercy is the “something new” in the message of Jesus. The Gospel describes what incredible mercy Jesus shows towards the woman in today's Gospel. There is no question that she is guilty as well as the man involved. The law in Deuteronomy clearly says they should both be put to death by stoning. For the time being, the Pharisees have placed the woman squarely in front of Jesus, hoping to trap him into saying something incriminating. By writing on the ground, Jesus cleverly shifts the attention to the sins of those about to stone her to death. Here, indeed, is “something new,” and the Pharisees immediately see that Jesus has placed them in the trap! The elders among them are the first so acknowledge that Jesus has won the test, and they are the first to drop their stones and sink away. The others follow, leaving Jesus alone with the woman. Without excusing her sin, He merely tells her she is free to leave, but to “sin no more.” What surprises and delights us here is that the Lord has placed something new into the Law! He now includes MERCY – mercy is now a part of justice!

The second reading on Sunday doesn’t always fit the meaning of the other two readings, but it does today. St. Paul tells the Philippians that in the light of our faith that Jesus has redeemed our sins, and in the power of His Resurrection, we now have God's mercy as the reason for our hope and joy. Now, it will be much easier to “strain ahead” each day in pursuit of that goal to which Jesus and His Spirit calls us. This Fifth Sunday brings us more joy than we had expected. Now we should be convinced that Lent is truly a seedtime of hope for the glory to come. What a dangerous, divided, and fearful world we live in. May we earnestly enter deeply into the days of Jesus’ passion, death, and resurrection. Remember, He brings mercy and hope.

As the years whiz by, I find myself thinking a little about the things I would still like to do and the places I would still like to visit, my bucket list. The major difference between my bucket list and others is that I will not go to meet my Lord disappointed that I was unable to empty my bucket.

You don’t have to send me notes suggesting I drop everything and accomplish what I would like to do in this lifetime before the clock of my days stops. Thanks. I’m good.

Visiting the Holy Land is in my bucket. Kathy and I had visions of repeating our wedding vows in Cana for our 50th wedding anniversary, but COVID dashed that plan. A new opportunity to travel to Israel is on the horizon, and we will see. The horizon is a year from now.

We did repeat our vows, by the way, in our parish church. That was special.

There are other places I’d like to visit or revisit. We will see.

The list of “maybe I’ll become a” has changed over the years. That’s my “wannabe” list. Somehow, I think being a star on Broadway, a lawyer, a baseball major league second baseman or president of the United States are not going to happen. I just made the last one up. I never wanted to be president.

But, again, I’m not worked up about any of the things I have not become or will not be. In fact, I thank God for the life I have, our marriage, our daughter, her wonderful family, the experiences and hurdles, the good times and the bad. I like to say everything in life has prepared me for today.

High on the list of wonderful things has been God’s call to me to the diaconate. I did not include priest on the list of “wannabees” above but that did cross my mind for a few days.

If you read these ramblings with any frequency, you know by now that I loved being an altar server. The honor of assisting at the Lord’s table has never left me, but my vocation was to marriage and parenthood. Thank you, Holy Spirit, for directing me.

Then the Spirit started blowing in my ear and suggested serving God and the church as a deacon. Kathy asks wives of deacons, “did you ever imagine you would one day be the wife of a deacon?” A similar question could be posed to the guys, “Did you ever imagine you would, one day, be ordained?”

The section of Paul’s letter to the Philippians we hear on the 5th Sunday of Lent is most appropriate. “Forgoing what lies behind but straining forward to what lies ahead, I continue my pursuit toward the goal, the prize of God’s upward calling, in Christ Jesus.”

That goal sits on top of everything else in my bucket.

Jesus falls a third time

Instead of our regular reflections, throughout this holy season of Lent, the Pontifical Mission Societies of the Diocese of Ogdensburg will be featuring Stations of the Cross.

These Stations of the Cross were assembled by Maureen Crowley Heil, director of Programs and Development for the Pontifical Mission Societies and the Archdiocese of Boston.

Please join us in praying.

Ninth Station:
Leader: We adore You, O Christ, and we bless you.
All: Because by your Holy Cross, You have redeemed the world.

Reader: Unlike this statue in Ecuador, when a child’s life is shattered by poverty or violence, it is not so easily mended. Lord Jesus, help us to reach out to victims of hardship and cruelty so that they may feel Your loving embrace through our actions.

Tenth Station:
Leader: We adore You, O Christ, and we bless you.
All: Because by your Holy Cross, You have redeemed the world.

Reader: Many people, like those seen here in the slums of Haiti, must live without the very basics we take for granted – even an indoor shower or a different outfit to wear most days.

Lord Jesus, help us to be content with what we have – the toys, clothes, shoes, and other possessions – and to sacrifice for Your children, who have so little in this world.
