Pope: Risen Christ brings peace to broken world

VATICAN CITY (CNS) – The joy of Jesus’ resurrection from the dead gives joy and strength to those who are called to bring peace, reconciliation and justice to the suffering and the downtrodden, Pope Francis said.

"Let us make Jesus, the Living One, rise again from all those tombs in which we have sealed him," the pope said in his homily April 16 during the Easter Vigil in St. Peter’s Basilica. "Let us bring him into our everyday lives: through gestures of peace in these days marked by the horrors of war, through acts of reconciliation amid broken relationships, acts of compassion toward those in need, acts of justice amid situations of inequality and of truth in the midst of lies. And above all, through works of love and fraternity," he said.

Cardinal Giovanni Battista Re, dean of the College of Cardinals, was the main celebrant at the Mass, and Pope Francis delivered his homily from a chair in front of the altar. The Vatican gave no explanation why Pope Francis did not preside. He has had difficulty walking recently, and he recently told journalists he had a knee problem.

However, Pope Francis baptized and confirmed seven adults who were entering the Catholic Church. The five men and two women included an American man identified as Taylor Pescante.

At the end of his homily, Pope Francis directly addressed Ivan Fedorov, the elected mayor of the Russian-occupied city of Melitopol, Ukraine. Fedorov, who was captured and later released by the Russians in a prisoner exchange, was in Rome and met earlier in the day with Cardinal Pietro Parolin, Vatican secretary of state.

Looking at Fedorov, the pope said the darkness of night also symbolizes "the darkness of war, of cruelty." "We are all praying. We are praying for you and with you, 'Courage,' and accompany you. And to also tell you the greatest thing that we celebrate today," he said, switching to Ukrainian: "Christ is risen."
Anyone who knows me knows my mouth sometimes gets ahead of my brain. It was one of those moments.

A couple colleagues and I were talking about what we were doing after work on Monday.

"I'm going to chill with Jesus and chill with a friend after.”

A good friend and I have a tradition of signing up for an hour of Adoration on Mondays during Lent. We’ve done it for years now. In fact, we used to do Monday and Friday, but I bailed on the Fridays as part of my efforts to reduce commitments that take me away from my husband and son.

After Adoration, this friend and I planned to go for a walk together.

"I'm going to chill with Jesus and chill with a friend after.”

After I said that sentence, I batted it around in my head for a while.

"That didn't seem very reverent,” I thought. But sitting with what I had said, it was actually pretty accurate.

To me, “chilling” with my friends means spending time together with nothing to accomplish except enjoying one another’s company. When I join my friends for a theater show or sporting event, to tackle a craft project or plan an event, it’s not “chilling.” “Chilling” is sitting in the living room chatting. “Chilling” is talking over an appetizer buffet a local eatery. "Chilling” is going walking and talking with no destination. It’s just an opportunity to connect with one another and deepen our relationship.

While I have certain prayers I like to say while I’m sitting with our Lord in Adoration, and I’ll sometimes journal or pray about a specific intention, I tend to spend the bulk of my time with Jesus just listening to what he has to say to me and enjoying being in his presence.

It’s an opportunity for me to connect with our Lord and deepen my relationship with him.

It sounds an awful lot like “chilling” to me. I guess my mouth gets it right once in a while when it gets ahead of my brain.

Today, I want to begin by sharing with you my personal resurrection experience. You see, shortly before Easter — two weeks before, I came down with a positive test for Covid, so I ended up in isolation for a time. Finally, during Holy Week, I improved. Yes, this was like a resurrection. I was able to celebrate the Masses and services of the Triduum, and I celebrated the resurrection of the Lord to new life on Easter Sunday as I celebrated my own resurrection to new life from sickness. Easter was truly a celebration for me.

Here in this parish, the first Easter morning Mass is a sunrise Mass, celebrated at near 6 a.m. I joined with the other priests and the people rejoicing in the Lord's resurrection, and this Mass became my Easter also.

So, I want to pass along my Easter greeting to you all. I offered that Mass for all of you and your intentions. I pray that you all experience the joy of new life through the Lord’s resurrection. May you find peace and happiness of this Easter Season.

I find each year the joy and new faith as I read the many resurrection stories of the Lord in the Gospels. These stories bring special support to me and truly strengthen my faith. For me, I truly love the story of the appearance of Jesus to the two disciples on the road to Emmaus. You certainly know this story. This story begins on the afternoon of Jesus’ crucifixion. Two disciples were walking home from Jerusalem on the road to Emmaus. I remember hearing a Scripture scholar saying that they were probably a married couple — a husband and wife.

As they were walking along, Jesus himself came upon them. However, they did not realize that this was Jesus. Jesus asks why they were sad. They explain in this story that they had just come from Jerusalem. They were disciples of Jesus of Nazareth. They had hoped that he had come as Messiah and Savior, and they believed that he was to be a great prophet, but now he was crucified by the chief priests and rulers. They were upset and distressed. Then Jesus, who they still do not recognize, speaks to them that the Scriptures teach us that the Messiah would suffer before he enters his glory.

Jesus walks along with them and presents to them a Scripture lesson beginning with Moses and the prophets. He interpreted to them all that referred to him in all the Scriptures. Can you imagine such a Scripture lesson? Wouldn’t you have like to have been there on that walk.

As they come to the village, the couple insisted that Jesus stay for a time with them. Then, later as they were at table, Jesus took bread, said the blessing, broke it and gave it to them. At that moment, their eyes were opened, and they recognized that this was Jesus who was walking with them and talking with them. At that moment, Jesus vanished. The Scripture tells us, that they said to each other, “Were not our hearts burning within us while he spoke to us on the way and opened the Scriptures to us?” They rushed back to Jerusalem to tell the others what they had experienced. I believe that this can be our own experience even now. I believe that more times than we can imagine, the Lord, Jesus, comes along to join us, to walk with us, to teach us, to open the Scriptures for us. We don’t realize that this is truly Our Lord and Savior who comes to give us guidance and support.

However, when we recognize the gift that has been given to us, we will realize that in a very perfect way that truly this was Jesus who was teaching us and leading us.

Thank you, Lord! I pray that you continue to be part of my life and come often to show me the way.
The Palm Sunday of the Passion of the Lord was celebrated at St. Patrick’s Church in Colton at the 5 p.m. Mass on April 9. Palms were blessed in the church vestibule and then a procession of the congregation took place immediately after. The Passion of the Lord according to St. Luke was proclaimed by Deacon Richard Burns, with Father Joseph Giroux, pastor of St. Patrick’s and St. Mary’s (Potsdam), seminarian Lukas Gruber and the congregation participating. Bishop appoints assistant diocesan fiscal officer

It is anticipated that Morrison will become diocesan fiscal officer later this year

Bishop Terry R. LaValley will appoint James E. Morrison as assistant diocesan fiscal officer.

Morrison will step into this new role on April 18, 2022.

It is anticipated that Morrison will become diocesan fiscal officer on December 1, when the current diocesan fiscal officer, Michael J. Tooley, retires after 20 years of service to the diocese.

“I am deeply grateful to Jim Morrison,” said Bishop LaValley. “He brings years of experience in finance and administration, coupled with a love for the Church. The diocese has been blessed with competent and professional fiscal officers, and I am delighted that high level of professionalism will be continued.”

Morrison is a graduate of Canton College of Technology and Clarkson University. He currently serves as the Risk and Claims Manager of the diocese. Prior to coming to the diocese, he served as Executive Vice President of Finance for United Helpers Organization, Ogdensburg. In that capacity he directed the financial administration, general accounting, business services, and financial reporting for United Helpers.

Morrison brings more than 30 years of financial, administrative and accounting experience to his new position.

“We feel blessed to have someone with Jim Morrison’s abilities and experience to lead our fiscal office,” Bishop LaValley said. “While Mike Tooley will leave big shoes to fill when he begins his well-deserved retirement, it is a comfort to know that someone as capable as Jim will assume the reins.”

“I am extremely honored to have been considered for this position,” said Morrison. “During my three years here as Insurance/Risk Manager, I have seen first-hand the great job Mike Tooley and the Fiscal staff do, and I am hoping to keep those processes moving ahead smoothly. My time with the diocese has given me the opportunity to develop organizational knowledge and experience working with both Central Office and Parish staff. A life-long Catholic, it’s been a blessing to use the gifts God has given me in the service of His Church, and it’s been a great joy to work for Bishop LaValley and the Diocese.”

How to pray for abused children on Blue Sunday

1. Pray they will be rescued.
2. Pray they are placed with caring people.
3. Pray their minds and bodies can heal.
4. Pray they find hope.
5. Pray for those who rescue them.
Not the St. Bernard most people think

SARANAC LAKE—Father Martin E. Cline, pastor of St. Bernard of Montjoux Parish in Saranac Lake, noted that their patron is often confused with St. Bernard of Clairvaux. In fact, he said, “we are one of only two St. Bernard of Montjoux parishes in the United States. Depending on which legend you go by, he’d be 1,000 years old this year. His community in the Alps is celebrating.” “Saranac Lake is part of the Adirondacks. St. Bernard is part of that connection, as he is patron of those who live, travel, and participate in sports of the mountains—skiers, and snowshoers,” shared Father Cline. “It is very difficult to find images of St. Bernard,” Father Cline commented. “There are no consistent images. Some frescoes, but there seems to be a couple of different images.” One of his parishioners, Ken Wiley, is painting an image of St. Bernard for inside of their Church. Their door is open, Father Cline reflected, “We’re here, the church is open, especially for travelers. There has been a number of hikers, people coming through the mountains, 46 peaks, looking for a church and seeing us here, seeking as their going. We hope that they see the connection and come to the parish. We have a number of parishioners who are hikers and skiers.” St. Bernard’s is discussing plans for a celebration. Father Cline explained that, at the celebration before he became pastor, “they brought in skiers and hikers, and blessed poles for parishioners.” Tony Waickman, who helped research about St. Bernard, described that they created a festival which began with a Saturday evening Mass and expanded to a blessing of guides and equipment. “People brought in camping gear, hiking boots, and put them before the altar. We are hoping to have this grow.” “We worked together with the Left Bank Café,” Waickman continued, “and had a large supper based upon Northern Italy where St. Bernard comes from. We put up maps to make it real and filled the restaurant, priests were there.” As the local St. Bernard’s opens its doors to travelers, the saint for whom the parish is named is also known for hospitality. “The other thing that’s really fun is that St. Bernard had two hospices as a refuge (or resting stop),” Waickman said. “He built the great St. Bernard and lesser St. Bernard hospices located on Switzerland’s pilgrimage route to get to France or Italy. In bad weather it was really dangerous. St. Bernard’s is a gorgeous place high in the alps, with a big lake hotel, Church, and museum.” Augustinian Canons Regular (clerics), the order that continues his work, still live there and speak primarily French. Waickman related his inspiration for planning celebrations of their patron. “The Catholic Church is falling on hard times,” he said. “I wanted to try to celebrate the faith and culture of the Church. I’ve lived in other places where religion was the fabric of life, we’ve lost that and I am trying to rekindle it in some small way.” It is remarkable to consider the work and sacrifices that went into building the hospices, elucidated Waickman, since all of the heavy duty building materials, food, and other supplies had to be transported up the mountain. “Structures had to be built sturdy enough to withstand the hurricane force winds that frequently blew through these passes and had to be insulated against the frigid cold that prevailed for much of the year,” detailed Tom Kalinowski, who wrote a pamphlet about St. Bernard based on his research and contact with the canons. Moreover, St. Bernard’s holiness was such that people gravitated toward helping him with these difficult projects. People were inspired “to venture out, despite the harsh alpine conditions, to search for lost individuals who required rescue.” St. Bernard’s charism lives on and, based on the need, a new breed of dogs was created after him. “St. Bernard dogs used to find lost skiers and hikers in the Alps,” shared Father Cline. “Over the centuries, they saved hundreds of lives,” expounded Kalinowski, “One St. Bernard dog in the 1800s named Barry was credited with saving at least 40 lives patrolling that region.” Kalinowski explained their patron’s legacy. He was “an incredibly benevolent, caring, compassionate individual.” St. Bernard was renowned for miracles. Kalinowski stated that there are stories of his generosity. He lived a very simple life trying to assist other people. We don’t know what kind of profound impact he had. He just spent time out in the wilderness helping people, he spent his entire life (and the vast majority of his 42 years as a priest) making things easier for travelers and never hesitated to explore new routes to high plateaus and valleys when he heard they were in need of a priest.” Although little is known about his life, St. Bernard is sometimes called St. Bernard of Menthon or Aosta. “As a young man, Bernard was reported to have had spiritual ties to the Aosta, Italy region, and was ordained a priest in that Diocese,” said Kalinowski. Due to his natural and spiritual gifts, St. Bernard was “appointed the Vicar General, comparable to an auxiliary bishop, of the diocese of Aosta only several years after becoming a priest,” Kalinowski described further. “In this position, he began to travel throughout the Diocese, especially in the northern-most area of the Alps. Eventually, the lure of hiking across the alpine terrain to new areas, while carrying the message of Jesus and the principles of Christianity to communities where other missionary priests had been unsuccessful, brought St. Bernard to places well outside his Diocese.” He traveled to several dioceses in Italy and Switzerland. St. Bernard’s feast is June 15. “Let’s celebrate our patron saint,” enthused Kalinowski. “We decided to raise a little awareness of our own patron saint. Hopefully the portrait of St. Bernard will be done and as part of the celebration we will unveil a rendering of our patron saint who is always present to intercede with God on our behalf.” “What little we do know about St. Bernard is worth celebrating,” concluded Waickman, “and that he’s our guy.”
AKWESANSE—As delegations of Indigenous people planned to travel from Canada to Rome to meet with Pope Francis, Dr. Rose-Alma “Dolly” McDonald noticed an email in her inbox.

McDonald is a commissioned lay minister and communications liaison at St. Regis Mission Church.

“The subject said, ‘Globe and Mail interview,’ said McDonald. “I opened it. It was from a reporter from Toronto. He thought the media wasn’t really accurately covering the Indigenous perspective on the delegation going to Rome to meet with the pope. He wanted to interview Indigenous Catholics. I agreed to do the interview.”

While she doesn’t know for sure, McDonald said she assumes the reporter found her name online, since she has been involved in the National Healing and Reconciliation Day as well as a number of committees and organizations on both sides of the U.S./Canadian border meant to promote Indigenous inclusion in the Catholic Church.

“We talked on the phone for a couple of hours,” said McDonald. “A few days later, a photographer emailed me and wanted to get a photo. He couldn’t cross the border to get to St. Regis Mission, so we did the photo shoot in Cornwall. Later, I Googled him. It turns out, he’s a really famous photographer. He was a photographer for the Canadian prime minister, and he’s photographed people all over the world.”

The article was published in the Globe and Mail on March 24.

“The article was very balanced,” McDonald said. “Others had strong remarks about the need for an apology (regarding residential schools) and how important it is.”

McDonald explained that the delegation that traveled to Rome was made up of three separate delegations – Innuks, Metis and First Nations – representing the three types of Indigenous people in Canada.

“Each delegation presented its own issues,” she said. “Watching it, they did a really good job educating the Vatican. For three days, each delegation met with the pope individually. On the fourth day, all the delegations met together with the pope. Pope Francis made his apology on that fourth day.

“For the deplorable conduct of those members of the Catholic Church,” the pope told Indigenous representatives April 1, “I ask for God’s forgiveness, and I want to say to you with all my heart: I am very sorry.”

McDonald noted that she appreciates the apology, but she noted it was a long time coming.

“The pope made his apology in 2022,” she said. “The residential school system started in 1831 and ran until 1996. In the 1980s, there started to be concerns about Indigenous children being abused in residential schools. In the 1990s, there was an inquiry into the schools. The schools finally closed in 1996. It was another 10 years before the class action lawsuit against the Canadian government related to the schools. The Truth & Reconciliation Commission was established in Canada in 2008, and the federal government apologized then on behalf of the government of Canada. Then it took until 2022 for this apology.

“I’m happy the pope apologized. I’m happy the delegation went there to educate the pope, the Vatican and the universal Church about us.”

McDonald said she feels the Church needs to be more aware of Indigenous people and the issues they face and have historically faced.

“Education and awareness are needed,” she said. “We’ve been talking about residential schools and the abuses that took place for years. With the discovery of the mass graves, there’s proof that this was real. People need to be aware that this happened.

McDonald also said she looks forward to what’s coming in the future.

“The pope said he’s going to come here, and he plans to meet with the Indigenous people,” she said. “While we would’ve liked to see this all happen 20 years ago, I’m glad it’s happening.”

Blessing of seeds

As we celebrate the Resurrection of Jesus and the promise of new life during the Easter Season, we in the northern hemisphere also celebrate the “resurrection” and new life of the natural world that surrounds us. It is also time for planting seeds—whether in our gardens, our patio containers or our fields. In the Benedictine Book of Blessings there is a Blessing of Seeds (986-1006). In preparation for this Blessings, place your package of seeds, seedlings or plants before you and pray this Blessing that is an adaption taken from RCL Benziger Easter Resources.

“Today we will ask God’s blessing on the seeds (the seedlings) before us, knowing that the plants they will produce will bring beauty to the earth and food to our tables.”

We are then invited to listen to God’s Word about seeds and growing, Parable of the Mustard Seed, (Mathew 13:31-32) OR The Seed and the Kingdom of God (Mark 4:26-29).

As these seeds will provide life for us, we are called to reflect on what kinds of seeds we are planting by our words and actions each day? What kinds of fruits are they bearing for our families and the world? We turn then to God in prayer: For the Church that she may continue to plant the seeds of faith and justice in the world today; For the world that the seed of peace will grow in every nation and may true peace grow on the face of the earth; for those in need that the seeds of our money, time and love help those in need of food, shelter and clothing; and for the farmers that the seed they plant this spring will grow and produce much food.

Then, placing your hand over the seeds pray:

God our Creator, you have given us many gifts of creation and you have asked us to care for them all.

We ask your blessing as we go forth to plant these seeds (seedlings). As we care for them, help us remember to also care for those in need so that your love and goodness may grow in our hearts and in the hearts of all we meet. We ask this through Christ our Lord.

AMEN

Rest in Peace

ALIVE film to play in Plattsburgh and Watertown

The new Bosco Films and Hakuna Films feature documentary film ALIVE is set to release in movie theaters nationwide this Easter season via Fathom Events on Monday, April 25, including showings at the Cumberland 12 in Plattsburgh and Regal Cinemas in Watertown.

The one-night-only documentary arrives in the United States after a powerful international release that inspired audiences toward Eucharistic revival.

ALIVE is a Spanish produced documentary film that brings forward the compelling testimony of five men and women with four unique stories of how their lives were transformed by the True Presence of Jesus Christ in the Eucharist: God alive. These true stories are told by real people and propose that audiences consider their testimony and the power of God in the hidden Christ contained in a white host, something many cannot see or discern and have never known.

Tickets for ALIVE can be purchased at Fathom Events or participating theater box offices. Fans throughout the U.S. will be able to enjoy the event in select movie theaters; for a complete list of theater locations visit the Fathom Events website (theaters and participants are subject to change).
Before washing prisoners' feet, Pope Francis tells them God always forgives

VATICAN CITY (CNS) — Before washing the feet of 12 inmates, Pope Francis told them and other prisoners that God never tires of forgiving anyone who asks.

When Jesus washed his disciples' feet, including the feet of Judas, who would betray him, it was a sign that God will wait patiently for everyone and will forgive everything, the pope said in his homily April 14 at a prison in Civitavecchia, northwest of Rome.

"Each of us, perhaps, has something in his heart that he has been carrying for some time," that agitates him, "some little skeleton hidden in the closet," the pope said. "But ask Jesus for forgiveness. He forgives everything."

The pope celebrated the Holy Thursday Mass of the Lord's Supper at the prison and washed the feet of 12 inmates — men and women of different ages and nationalities, according to the Vatican press office.

The only thing Jesus asks of people is "our trust to ask for forgiveness," the pope said. "You can do it when you are alone, when you are with other companions, when you are with the priest."

Pope Francis encouraged the inmates and prayed: "Lord, forgive me. I will try to serve others, but you serve me with your forgiveness."

"There is a Lord who judges," the pope told them, "but it's a strange judgment: The Lord judges and forgives."

The Mass was private, but the Vatican released the pope's homily, some photographs and a video clip.

The photos showed 12 inmates seated on an elevated platform for the foot-washing ritual, which meant that the pope, who has been experiencing severe knee pain and difficulty walking, could wash their feet while standing.

Pope Francis told the inmates he knows that washing someone else's feet can seem to be "a strange thing" today, but it is a reminder of Jesus, who "teaches us this, and it is simple: You have to wash each other's feet, one serving the other, without self-interest."

"How nice it would be if this were possible to do every day and for all people," the pope said, urging the prisoners to serve one another and forgive each other.

"And now, I am going to try to do the same thing that Jesus did: wash feet," he said at the end of the homily. "I do this from the heart because we priests should be the first to serve others, not exploit others. Clericalism sometimes leads us down this road. But we must serve."

"Washing feet, he said, also is a sign of love for these brothers and sisters and for all of you here; a sign that means, 'I do not judge anyone. I try to serve everyone.'"

At the end of Mass, the inmates gave the pope an overflowing box of artichokes, flowers, herbs and other things they grow in the prison garden.

After the liturgy, the Vatican said, Pope Francis went to a nearby conference room and met with about 50 people, including inmates, guards and prison officials.

Father Raffaele Grimaldi, head of the Inspectorate General of Italian Prison Chaplains, had announced April 13 that the pope would be celebrating the liturgy at the prison, which has about 500 inmates.

The pope, Father Grimaldi said, would wash the feet 12 inmates, "stooping before their poverty and weaknesses, washing the feet of those who have walked the streets of violence, trampling on the rights of the innocent."

"Despite physical fatigue and hidden sufferings, Pope Francis never tires of traveling dusty, muddy, and bumpy roads 'to go in search of what is lost,'" the chaplain said, and he "is not ashamed to get his hands dirty" washing the feet of those "condemned by human justice but saved by God's mercy."

Pope Francis has never celebrated the Holy Thursday evening Mass with the public in St. Peter's Basilica.

The first year of his pontificate, he chose a juvenile detention facility near Rome. In 2014, he washed the feet of people with severe physical handicaps at a rehabilitation center in Rome. The next year, he was at a Rome prison and, in 2016, he celebrated the liturgy at a foot-washing ritual at a center for migrants and refugees. From 2017 to 2019, he again chose prisons.

In 2020 — during Italy's COVID-19 lockdown — Pope Francis celebrated a scaled-down liturgy in St. Peter's with only about a dozen people in the congregation. There was no foot washing and no procession with the Eucharist at the end.

THE LITURGY OF THE EUCHARIST: JESUS PRESENT AND HOW TO SHARE IT
Waddington — A Continuation of the Eucharist Initiative sponsored by LEAD.

Time: 9:30 a.m. to noon
Place: Waddington Parish Center
Presenter: Sister Mary Eamon Lynig,
NEW YORK (CNS) – Positive priest characters are certainly a rarity in contemporary films. So Catholics will welcome the uplifting fact-based biography "Father Stu" (Columbia).

While deeply moving, however, this dramatization of the life of Stuart Long (Mark Wahlberg) is also hard-edged, particularly in terms of its dialogue.

Yet that’s part of the point.

The movie is fundamentally about God’s ability to use seemingly unpromising people to do his will, in this case a once-boozy ex-boxer.

With the continued success of his somewhat successful career in the ring rendered too dangerous by a medical condition, Stuart moves to Los Angeles and tries to reinvent himself as a Hollywood star. Instead, he winds up as a directionless supermarket clerk.

But things begin to turn around for him when he falls at first sight for Carmen (Teresa Ruiz), a devout CCD teacher. Determined to win her over, he goes through the motions of becoming a Catholic, though an awkward confession and other interactions show that he has yet to be won over in reality.

All that changes after a motorcycle accident and a close brush with death during which he experiences the presence of the Virgin Mary. The result is not only a genuine conversion but a prayer-inspired realization that God is calling him to the priesthood.

Predictably, the news of this radical change in direction proves crushing to Carmen. It’s also a source of consternation to his emotionally abusive father, Bill (Mel Gibson), an implacable atheist, and his caring but equally unbelieving mother, Kathleen (Jacki Weaver).

A tribute to a future cleric who showed dogged determination and grit in the face of a series of apparently insurmountable obstacles, writer-director Rosalind Ross’s profile also showcases Stuart’s unconventional but effective approach to preaching the Gospel. And Wahlberg brings his striking, memorable character vividly to life, skillfully portraying Stuart’s odd combination of crudity and idealism.

Grown viewers will easily get past the earthy language with which the script is filled to appreciate the picture’s faith-inspiring core. But the persistent vulgarity, while justified in context, may prove more problematic for younger movie fans who might otherwise benefit from this portrait of a vocation.

Still, at least some parents may feel that the credibility lent to Stuart’s struggles by the saltiness of his starting point outweighs what would normally be objectionable elements of speech and behavior.

If the outcome of that calculation were either increased zeal or, in particular, openness to journeying down the path Stuart himself followed, his hard-won spiritual triumph might be replicated in real life.

The film contains some physical violence, a bloody accident, off-screen premarital sexual activity, about a half-dozen uses of profanity, several milder oaths and pervasive rough and crude language.

Under 17 requires accompanying parent or adult guardian.

Understanding the warning signs

Editors Note: April is “Abuse Prevention Month.” This month, we will present a series explaining how you can help prevent abuse from happening. This content is provided by Virtus. It is reprinted with permission.

As caring adults, we can create a safer world when we work together as a community. This includes maintaining an awareness of the behavior of all adults within our programs and ministries, including our own. Recall step one from the Protecting God’s Children® Program, Know the Warning Signs of Adults (or, just Know the Warning Signs depending on which version of the training you completed).

Knowing the warning signs of adults means that we can recognize inappropriate actions and behaviors adults exhibit with children. And, we can identify boundary violations and possible grooming, taking action before they can escalate to possible abuse. Boundaries are limits, or lines that separate our personal space, emotions and behaviors from others.

Children, especially, are harmed when their boundaries are violated regardless of whether it is intentional or not. Keep your eyes open for concerning or inappropriate behavior. Some possible warning signs of adult behavior include when the adult:

- Discourages other adults from participating or monitoring.
- Attempts to be alone with, or isolates, children from others.
- Seems more excited to be with children than adults.
- Takes, posts or shares photos of children without the parent’s or the organization's approval.
- Goes overboard touching, wrestling, tickling, etc.
- Uses bad language or tells inappropriate or sexual jokes to children.
- Behaves or speaks as if the rules do not apply to them (ignores policy, bends rules).
- Allows young people to engage in activities parents would not allow.
- Tells children to keep secrets from others.
- Takes, posts or shares photos of children without the parent's or the organization's approval.
- Attempts to be alone with, or isolates, children from others.
- Seems more excited to be with children than adults.

To ensure that adult interactions with youth are healthy and safe, we can use either the “P.A.C.T.” acronym (which means behavior should be Public, Appropriate and Non-Sexual), or the more robust “P.A.C.T.” acronym. This means we:

- Prioritize Safety – Safe adults prioritize safety always, even when it might not be easy or convenient.
- Act Appropriately (without the possibility we perceived as sexual or romantic – Acting appropriately means that behavior is healthy and safe, for both the adult and those with whom they interact and that the behavior must be such that it could not be perceived as sexual or romantic from the point of view of a rational person. Even if the behavior is intended to not be sexual or romantic, the perception of their behavior when juxtaposed with the policy and code of conduct will always bear more weight.
- Consistently Follow the Policies (behaving with transparency) – Consistently follow the policies and behaving with transparency in actions and communication, at all times, means behavior is in line with diocesan requirements.

- Commit to working Together (to follow the five steps) – Meeting this requirement involves following the diocesan Code of Conduct or ethical standards, as well as the policies and procedures of your organization/dio­cese. Committing to working together is perhaps the most important element of “P.A.C.T.”, because when caring adults are following the five steps, they are automatically implementing a “P.A.C.T.” to protect children and youth.

Recall all of the five steps from the Protecting God’s Children Program:

1. Know the Warning Signs.
2. Screen and Select Employees and Volunteers.
3. Monitor All Environments, including Activities Involving Technology.
4. Be Attentive to Children and Youth.
5. Communicate Your Concerns.

By upholding boundaries and following appropriate behavior as safe adults, we are contributing to a safe environment for children, youth and the vulnerable—and for ourselves, too. This is not something that any one of us can implement on our own—it takes every caring adult within our communities to all join together in the mission of keeping children and youth safe. Thank you for all that you do to contribute to a safe environment, here, in the context of our various ministries, and beyond, in our homes and communities. Children are safer because of your commitment.
Updates from the Lenity Project

Sister Cindy Sullivan and the Lenity Project are supported by our diocese through our yearly Mission Cooperative Appeal. They work to help the poor and marginalized in Ecuador. Below are excerpts from their newsletter, the Working Families Gazette, about their ongoing activities.

From the desk of Madre Miguel:
There is a tradition among us who are creating the new Working Families Foundation. We wait every year for the Easter Bunny to show up with baskets for the kids to reward their Lenten sacrifices.
This year he showed up unexpectedly, so the kids got to interview him. Since he is a well-known celebrity, they sat down with him for a little conversation.
Of course, they asked him how the virus had affected the rabbits in the land of Eternal Springtime, where the Easter Bunny lives. He was quick to explain to them that, since the rabbits don’t have a lot of the bad habits that humans do, there wasn’t even a single case of contamination there.
He said that the Land of Eternal Springtime is 100% environmentally friendly. It is filled with flowers, fruits, trees, grasses, animals, and big white clouds of hope. It rains sometimes, but it is a friendly and necessary rain, making things healthy and happy. All the rabbits there get on with one another and live in peace. Of course, the kids asked if they might go there with him since things are not so good here right now. But the Easter Bunny explained to them that every place can be a land of springtime and happiness. Such things depend on everyone making an effort to get along with everyone else. Although a few eyes rolled at that suggestion, the general consensus was that it was a good idea.

After the interview, just in case the carrot crop in the land of Eternal Springtime hadn’t been as good as usual, the kids gave the Easter Bunny carrots he could carry home to his bunnies. Baby Santiago David was generous enough to offer the rabbit what was left of the carrot he had been chewing on during the program.

Dear Friends, Ecuador is the land of Eternal Spring! Here, Spring is in the air. New Hope, new beginnings, new feelings of gratitude to all of you who keep our work surviving through thick and thin. Poverty and crime in Ecuador have increased as people were not able to work. Jobs are still not plentiful. Many struggle to even survive. Our mission is so important to give these families a chance to become the agents change for others. Your help makes this all happen. You should feel that Spring in your step as you realize how much your help is appreciated. Happy Spring!

Madre Cindy

Parishioners in my parish received both the Body and Blood of Christ beginning at the Mass of the Lord’s Supper on Holy Thursday this year. I pray the option to receive from the cup is not fleeting.

After that Mass we, like you, had the opportunity to spend some time with Jesus present in the tabernacle of repose. That made me think of a column I wrote exactly two years ago, at the beginning of the restrictions imposed during the pandemic. I chose to reprise those thoughts today.

One of my fondest altar boy memories in Queens was being assigned “watch” during exposition of the Blessed Sacrament. We were assigned in teams of two, to be present to our Lord in one-hour shifts. We assumed positions opposite each other in the sanctuary; inside the altar rail. The watchers would alternately kneel and sit in tandem. Every move was on cue, a nod, a hand gesture, a wink. Whatever worked. We were in cassock and surplice with collar, bow and gloves and carried lighted candlesticks.

When it was time to end our watch, we exchanged positions with another team in a ceremony not quite on par with the changing of the guard at the Vatican, but it was solemn and, I think, impressive. We did not have exposition all that often but certainly did after the Mass of the Lord’s Supper on Holy Thursday.

Adorers came in and out of church throughout the night and early morning hours. We Catholic school kids were required to spend one hour with the Lord at some point during exposition. That presented some interesting challenges for the servers. Schoolmates felt obliged to make the altar servers giggle so there was a constant effort by us to maintain a solemn appearance. God forbid one of the Priests or Sisters saw us giggling while “on the altar.”

All these memories came rushing back to me as I sat watch, alone, sans vestments in church Holy Saturday 2020. I sat in a pew. The church was open to visitors who wanted to pray before the cross in place at the foot of the sanctuary since Good Friday. It proved to be a quiet, peaceful time of simple meditation. It was a time to let God speak. The cross was an elegant reminder of Jesus’ sacrifice for mankind. Two hours went by quickly. One other person came into church in that period. But that’s OK. These are very unusual times.

The final weeks of Lent and the celebration of the Paschal Mystery liturgies felt lacking without a congregation. There were few people to pray with us during the beautiful rituals of the Holy Week liturgies. There was no one to receive the Body of Christ.

Could you not keep watch for one hour?

I feel blessed because my pastor invited me to assist at the liturgies, but most people stayed away for good reason. Those memories of days long ago were nice, but now I know why they occurred to me. It is called watch for a reason. The disciples slept through their opportunity to pray with Jesus. Many years ago, I learned to be attentive, alert, prayerful in the presence of the Lord. Prayer raised to God in community is wonderful. Prayer offered in the quiet of a single heart is profound. May the risen Lord give us His peace.

Deacon Kevin Mastellon ministers in Watertown. He is the Director of Permanent Deacons for the Diocese of Ogdensburg.
