Pope: Three kings found God in poverty

By Courtney Mares
Catholic News Agency

VATICAN CITY (CNA) – In his Angelus address for the Solemnity of the Epiphany, Pope Francis said that the Three Kings teach us to discover God in poverty, humility, and silence.

The Solemnity of the Epiphany celebrates the arrival of the Magi — also known as the Three Wise Men or Three Kings — who came with gifts to worship the Child Jesus shortly after his birth.

In his reflection on the feast, the pope commented that the Magi perhaps “were expecting a powerful and prodigious Messiah,” but instead they found a baby and “met God in poverty.”

He said that the Wise Men “welcome God’s surprise and experience their encounter with him with amazement, adoring him — in his littleness, they recognize God’s face.”

“Humanly, we are all inclined to seek greatness, but it is a gift to know how to truly find it — to know how to find greatness in the littleness that God loves,” Pope Francis said.

“For the Lord is encountered like this: in humility, in silence, in adoration, in the smallest, and in the poor.”

The Solemnity of the Epiphany is traditionally celebrated on Jan. 6, but Catholic dioceses in the United States mark the feast on the Sunday that falls between Jan. 2-8. U.S. Catholics will celebrate the Epiphany this year on Jan. 8.

Epiphany is a national holiday in Italy. According to the Vatican gendarmerie, about 60,000 people were present in St. Peter’s Square for the Angelus.

Italian pilgrims gathered at the Vatican for the pope’s Angelus message celebrated the solemnity with costumes, music, decorative banners, and a small parade in the street leading up to St. Peter’s Square.
What’s in a nickname?

While I’ve been a football fan for years, I wasn’t familiar with this term/nickname until this year. Once I became familiar with it, I immediately disliked it. The term/nickname is “Mr. Irrelevant.”

In professional football, “Mr. Irrelevant” is the last college player chosen to become a professional in the annual “draft” process. While the player has an entire “Irrelevant Week” dedicated to them, as the name suggests, no one expects much of the person who is picked last.

“It’s all in fun,” my son explained one day. “They celebrate the guy.” “But they call him irrelevant,” I responded. “I guess I don’t find it fun or funny. No human being should ever be considered irrelevant.” They shouldn’t be, but they are.

There are humans who are considered irrelevant and unwanted before they’re even born. There are others who are made to feel that way when they’re seriously ill or elderly. Others are deemed irrelevant when they are convicted of a crime. It seems to me that our culture considers lots of people irrelevant.

Interestingly enough, I only discovered the term “Mr. Irrelevant,” because the current holder of the title, a young man named Brock Purdy who plays with the San Francisco 49ers, is now an NFL starting quarterback, and he’s stacking wins fast and taking his team into the playoffs. Mr. Irrelevant became very relevant.

Remembering Benedict XVI, feast days

I begin today with my expression of sadness at the recent death of Pope Emeritus Benedict XVI. Pope Benedict has been living at the Vatican in retirement for the last ten years. While the active pope, Pope Benedict brought his gifts and skills as a theologian and his loving spirituality to our Catholic Church. As pope, he wrote several excellent encyclicals and books. Before being elected pope, he attended the Second Vatican Council as an advisor to some bishops.

Pope John Paul II brought him from his native Poland to Rome to become his advisor and act as a theologian. He became a cardinal of the Church — he was elected Pope upon the death of Pope John Paul II in 2005. Pope Benedict was surprised to see Catholics, by his decision to retire as the acting pope after eight years as our Holy Father. He believed he could not continue to fulfill well his responsibilities. Over the years, I have come to realize how demanding it is to be the pope.

I was able to attend two papal audiences myself in St. Peter’s Square at the Vatican while Pope Benedict was our pope. This was when I traveled with two groups from my parish, St. Mary’s, Ticonderoga. They were unique experiences and were truly a call for a new and stronger dedication to faith and my dedication to my priesthood.

I believe with many that we, Catholics, should be grateful to our God that Pope Emeritus Benedict was our pope for a time. We are also grateful that he was humble enough to decide to retire when he did.

Last week, I mentioned to you a few of the saints that are celebrated during the Christmas time. This year, as we celebrate the life and papacy of Pope Emeritus Benedict, we can add him to all those other holy Catholics who we honor at this Christmas time.

Today I would like to add some others to our list of saints who are celebrated during this Christmas time. We also celebrate the Feast Days of St. Elizabeth Ann Seton, St. Bishop John Neumann, and St. Brother André Bessette.

On January 4, the Catholic Church celebrates the Feast of St. Elizabeth Ann Seton. She lived during the early 1800s. She was a wife and a mother of five children. She is remembered as a saint for her founding of a congregation of religious women, the Sisters of Charity, who continue to be devoted to the education of the poor and to teaching in parochial schools. She began her work as a teacher in Emmitsburg, Maryland. Many parish schools in our country are named “Seton” remembering her memory.

On January 5, our Church celebrate a feast day in honor of St. Bishop John Neumann. He was a missionary here from Germany in the early 1800s. He became the Bishop of Philadelphia. Bishop Neumann was known for his holiness and learning. He was remembered as a promoter of parochial schools. Bishop Neumann is the first American bishop to be canonized.

On January 6, we celebrate the Feast Day of St. Brother André Bessette, a Holy Cross Brother. Brother André served his community as a humble brother and porter in Montreal, Canada. We know that Brother André visited the Diocese of Ogdensburg often.

His dedication to St. Joseph led him to work toward the erection of a Shrine with a magnificent basilica in the Mont Royal area of Montreal. Many groups from our diocese visit this shrine dedicated to St. Joseph. I want to mention to you that the present superior at St. Joseph from the Congregation of the Holy Cross is my cousin, Father Michael Delaney.

Brother André is well remembered for his healing miracles. He was visited by many sick and troubled though only a humble brother. He always attributed his miracles to his dedication to St. Joseph. During his lifetime, Brother André was well known throughout Montreal. He died in 1937. Nearly a million people attended his funeral Mass on the site of the shrine that was under construction.
Remembering Pope Emeritus Benedict XVI

VATICAN CITY (CNA) – Tens of thousands of people were present in St. Peter’s Square for the funeral Thursday of Pope Emeritus Benedict XVI, a leading theologian of the 20th century and the first pope to resign from office in nearly 600 years.

Royalty, cardinals, patriarchs, government officials, and many Catholic families and religious attended the funeral on a cold and foggy morning at the Vatican. More than 3,700 priests concelebrated the Mass.

Cardinals Joseph Zen, Daniel DiNardo, Timothy Dolan, Gianfranco Ravasi, and Giuseppe Betori, all cardinals created by Benedict, were seated in the front row. The Vatican said 125 cardinals concelebrated.

The ceremony began with the transport of the pope emeritus’ wooden coffin from the basilica to St. Peter’s Square.

Archbishop Georg Gänswein, Benedict’s personal secretary, approached the coffin, knelt before it, and kissed it. The crowd then prayed the sorrowful mysteries of the rosary in Latin for the repose of the soul of the late pope.

The funeral Mass was simple and solemn, in accord with Benedict XVI's wishes. The Sistine Chapel Choir sang the “Salve Regina,” “In Paradisum,” and other hymns.

An image of the resurrection of Christ was hung from St. Peter’s Basilica behind the altar.

Pope Francis presided over the funeral for his predecessor, Pope Emeritus Benedict XVI.

In his homily, he reflected on Jesus’ final words on the cross: “Father, into your hands I commend my spirit.”

“God’s faithful people, gathered here, now accompany and entrust to him the life of the one who was their pastor,” he said.

“Like the women at the tomb,” he said, “we too have come with the fragrance of gratitude and the balm of hope, in order to show him once more the love that is undying. We want to do this with the same wisdom, tender­ness and devotion that he bestowed upon us over the years.”

Nearly 200,000 people came to see Benedict XVI lying in state inside St. Peter’s Basilica in the days ahead of the funeral.

“Together, we want to say: ‘Father, into your hands we commend his spirit,’” Francis said in his homily. “Benedict, faithful friend of the Bridegroom, may your joy be complete as you hear his voice, now and forever.”

In the Prayers of the Faithful, the second prayer was said in German: “For Pope Emeritus Benedict, who has fallen asleep in the Lord: May the eternal Shepherd receive him into his kingdom of light and peace.”

At the end of the funeral Mass, Pope Francis presided over the Final Commendation and Val­­­ication, which were fol­­­owed by a moment of silent prayer.

Pope emeritus remembered locally for focus on relationship

By Darcy Fargo

Bishop LaValley noted he met Benedict XVI and admired his life and ministry.

“He possessed a brilliant intellect, strong faith, a humble heart, and deep love for the Church,” Bishop LaValley said. “I was greatly honored to meet him during his pontificate on the occasions of my participation at New Bishops’ school and at an ad limina visit in Rome.”

After that ad limina visit, Bishop LaValley reflected on his encounter with then Pope Benedict XVI. Bishop LaValley said he told the pontiff of the strong faith of the people of the North Country, as well as the challenges facing the diocese, including the culture of death, clergy sexual abuse, secularization, a decrease in participation in the sacraments and a decrease in vocations.

“I felt that the Holy Father heard, felt and understood the struggles I shared,” Bishop LaValley wrote. “He inquired about our diocesan efforts to promote the family. He said that so much of the challenges before us stem from the breakdown of the family. He concluded our meeting by reminding us that Jesus Christ is the answer to life’s struggles. He reiterated the point several times: we must have a relationship with Jesus Christ. It begins in our families.”

Pope Emeritus Benedict XVI's emphasis on having a relationship with Christ stood out to Marika Donders, diocesan director of the New Evangelization, as well. Donders said it was that emphasis and other factors that drew her to his writing.

“I think at first, I was drawn to his writing because it seemed so much easier to read than John Paul II’s writing,” she said. “You could read and see the points he was making as if you had his outline in front of you – very systematic and you could follow his line of thought. I think one of the first books of his that I read was God is Near Us, which is a collection of homilies and talks on the Eucharist as being the heart of the Church. What I find in his writing is the centrality of the love of God for us and how He wants to draw near to us. His writing is all about the relationship with Jesus as a person, His presence to us.

‘The humble worker’: Benedict XVI’s legacy

Pope Emeritus Benedict XVI has died at the age of 95, bringing to a close the momentous life of a Churchman who proclaimed the “eternal joy” of Jesus Christ and called himself a “humble worker” in the vineyard of the Lord.

His death was announced in Rome on Dec. 31.

Cardinal Joseph Aloisius Ratzinger was elected pope on April 19, 2005, and took the name Benedict XVI. Eight years later, on Feb. 11, 2013, the 85-year-old shocked the world with the announcement — made in Latin — that he was resigning from the papacy. It was the first resignation of a pope in nearly 600 years. He cited his advanced age and lack of strength as unsuitable for the exercise of his office.

However, the enormous legacy of his theologically profound contributions to the Church and the world will continue to be the source of reflection and study.

Even before his election as pope, Ratzinger exerted a lasting influence on the modern Church, first as a young theologian at the Second Vatican Council (1962-1965) and later as prefect of the Vatican’s Congregation (now Dicastery) for the Doctrine of the Faith.

An articulate defender of Catholic teaching, he coined the term “dictatorship of relativism” to describe secularism’s increasing intolerance of religious belief in the 21st century.

Benedict’s pontificate was shaped by his deep understanding of this challenge to the Church and Catholicism in the face of rising ideological aggression, not least from an increasingly secular Western mindset, both within and outside the Church.

Benedict was also a key architect of the fight against sexual abuse in the Church in the early 2000s. He oversaw extensive changes to canon law and dismissed hundreds of offenders from the clerical state. He also launched a canonical investigation of the Legionaries of Christ, following growing allegations about grave sexual abuses from the order’s founder, the Mexican priest Marcial Maciel Degollado. The canonical investigation led to the long reform process under the authority of Cardinal Velasio de Paolis.

Millions have read Benedict’s books, including the groundbreaking 1968 “Introduction to Christianity” and the three-volume “Jesus of Nazareth,” published from 2007 to 2012, during his time as pope.

He was the first pope to resign from office in almost 600 years. He traveled from Vatican City to Castel Gandolfo by helicopter on Feb. 28, 2013, and took up life in retirement the following May in the Mater Ecclesiae monastery in the Gardens of the Vatican City State.

“I’m simply a pilgrim who is starting the last stage of his pilgrimage on Earth,” he said in his final words as pontiff. “Let’s go ahead together with the Lord for the good of the Church and of the world.”

He was known for his love of music — he played Mozart and Beethoven on the piano — as well as cats, Christmas cookies, and occasional draughts of German beer. The late pope was also renowned for his gentleness, courtesy, and for being a true child of Bavaria.

A HIGHER CALL AT A TIME OF WAR

Joseph Ratzinger was born on April 16, 1927, Holy Saturday, in the Bavarian town of Marktl am Inn. His parents, Joseph and Maria, raised him in the Catholic faith. His father — a member of a traditional Bavarian family of farmers — served as a police officer. Joseph senior was, however, such a fierce opponent of the Nazis that the family had to relocate to Traunstein, a small town on the Austrian border.

Joseph and his older siblings, Georg and Maria, thus grew up during the rise of the Nazis in Germany, which he would later call “a sinister regime” that “banished God and thus became impervious to anything true and good.” He was conscripted into the military’s auxiliary anti-aircraft service in the final months of World War II, deserted, and spent a brief time in an American prisoner-of-war camp.

After the war, he resumed studies for the priesthood and was ordained a priest on June 29, 1951, together with his brother, Monsignor Georg Ratzinger. The two remained close throughout their lives. A week before Georg died in 2020, Benedict traveled to Bavaria to say a final farewell to his older brother.

While Georg became a noted choirmaster, Joseph undertook doctoral studies in theology and ultimately became a university teacher and a dean and vice-rector at the prestigious University of Regensburg in Bavaria.

He served as an expert (peritus) at the Second Vatican Council for Cardinal Joseph Frings, the archbishop of Cologne. In 1972, he joined prominent theologians such as Hans Urs von Balthasar and Henri de Lubac in founding the theological journal Communio to reflect faithfully on theology in the tumultuous period after the council and to refute the various false interpretations of the conciliar documents that were being advanced.

drawing us into communion with Him and with each other. I think this comes out in all of his writing: Christ is at the center. In Him we find everything we are looking for: Truth, Love, Hope.”

Donders had the opportunity to see and hear the then pope at World Youth Day in Madrid, Spain, in 2011. She noted that Benedict XVI was willing to weather a literal storm to be with the crowd and celebrate Mass.

“When the storm came up the people around the Pope wanted him to take shelter, but he decided to stay, since the million and half young people couldn’t go anywhere,” Donders said. “I was in the first section and could clearly see him. Despite all the people around him trying to shield him from the wind and rain with big white umbrellas, he got soaked like the rest of us and even lost his zucchetto to the wind. The rain was actually welcome by the pilgrims because it cooled down the temperatures, but it seemed like the entire Quatro Vientos airport was surrounded by lightning which lit up the night. It was kind of scary. At one point, Pope Benedict told everyone to quiet down and pray. Everyone knelt down, and a million and a half pilgrims were quiet. All you could hear was the storm. Within minutes, it stopped, and everything was quiet for a second. And then a white dove flew up from somewhere in front of the crowd and everyone cheered: The Holy Spirit is in the House! The Holy Father started his talk with something along the lines of thanking us for the joy and that we were stronger than the rain.”

Donders encouraged others to read the works of the pope emeritus.

“I think that people should read his writings to get a first-hand glimpse of this pope, rather than the image you would get from listening to mainstream media,” she said. “I think they would be surprised at his gentleness, his humor and how unlike the caricatures that we see in the secular – and some Catholic – media.”

Both Donders and Bishop LaValley encouraged prayers for the soul of Pope Emeritus Benedict XVI.

“With profound gratitude to Almighty God for the gift of his life and ministry, we pray that this selfless servant of the Lord be soon numbered among the saints in heaven,” Bishop LaValley said. “May he rest in peace.”

Respect Life collection funds services, education

As we prepare for the Respect Life second collection, scheduled for the weekend of January 21 and 22, we look at the organizations who have promoted the sanctity of life using funds collected during that collection awarded as Respect Life Grants.

In 2022 collections totaled $53,554.

In May, the grant board met to discuss the suggested grant amounts for Bishop Terry R. LaValley’s consideration. The committee members are Father Martin Cline, Stephen Tartaglia, Angelo and Suzanne Pietropaoli and John and Colleen Miner.

Bishop LaValley awarded the grants in June.

Fourteen grants were awarded in 2022.

Five Gabriel Projects – Potsdam, Brasher Falls, Massena, Plattsburgh and Ogdensburg – received grants.

Other direct service ministries who received grants were Plattsburgh Pregnancy Center (six-months rent), Plattsburgh Birthright and Watertown Walking with Moms in Need (outreach services), Malone Catholic Charities (Childbirth/Parenting program).

Education efforts receiving grants included Lewis County Right to Life (pro-life summer fair booth), Liferight of Watertown (tv ads, oratorical contest, newsletter), Life of Truth Radio (Human Sexuality & Life Issues series, Loving Authentically seminar) and Natural Family Planning (Awareness week materials).

FDA allows abortion pills to be sold at pharmacies

By Kevin J. Jones
Catholic News Agency

Abortion pills that can end a pregnancy through 10 weeks’ gestation will have far wider availability as CVS and Walgreens have announced they intend to fill prescriptions for the drug mifepristone, following federal rule changes on Tuesday.

The move drew criticism from pro-life activists. Lila Rose of LiveAction said on Twitter Jan. 4 it is “disgusting that pharmacists will now be dispensing lethal poison alongside antibiotics and allergy medication.”

Mifepristone is the first of the two pills used in a chemical abortion. The drug works by cutting off nutrients necessary for a fetus to continue developing. The second drug, misoprostol, is taken 24 to 48 hours later and induces contractions that expel the dead unborn child.

The U.S. Food and Drug Administration (FDA) on Jan. 3 announced that it will allow any patient with a prescription to obtain mifepristone from her local retail pharmacy if it is appropriately certified to dispense the drug.

Previous FDA policy only allowed certified doctors, clinics, and some mail-order pharmacies to dispense mifepristone.

Steven H. Aden, general counsel at Americans United for Life, was among the other critics of the decision.

The Tuesday announcement, he said, is “yet another in a long train of actions the Biden administration has taken that put women at grave risk, in its headlong rush to push abortion drugs on the American public.”

“Despite the FDA’s long-time approval of chemical abortion as a restricted drug, with solemn warnings about its use and restrictions on its distribution because of the role it plays in causing dangerous hemorrhaging, infection, and missed ectopic pregnancies, this administration seems to stop at nothing to tear down the rules that had helped protect women from this drug.”

As of 2020, abortion pills now account for more than half of abortions in the U.S., the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention reported. Though the FDA authorizes the use of the drug only up to 10 weeks into pregnancy, many clinics and providers offer the drug up to 12 or 13 weeks, according to the New York Times.

Both CVS Pharmacy and Walgreens each have 9,000 retail locations across the U.S.

“We plan to seek certification to dispense mifepristone where legally permissible,” Amy Thibault, lead director for external communications at CVS Pharmacy, told CNA Jan. 5.

There is a question of whether pharmacists with religious or moral objections to abortion will be able to avoid taking part in prescribing the abortion drug.

“We have policies in place to ensure no patient is ever denied access to medication prescribed by a physician based on a pharmacist’s individual religious or moral beliefs,” Thibault said.

“Under federal and state law we must reasonably accommodate a religious conviction, and for some states we must accommodate moral, ethical, or conscientious objections that may prevent a pharmacist from filling specific medications. In such instances, the pharmacist is required to notify us in advance about such a religious conviction, so that we can ensure there are other arrangements in place to ensure the patient’s medication needs are promptly satisfied,” she said.

A Walgreens spokesperson said the company intends to have its pharmacies certified to dispense the drug but did not specifically address the question of employees with objections to abortion.

“We are working through the registration, necessary training of our pharmacists, as well as evaluating our pharmacy network in terms of where we normally dispense products that have extra FDA requirements and will dispense these consistent with federal and state laws,” the Walgreens spokesperson said.

Marjorie Dannenfelser, president of SBA Pro-Life America, an anti-abortion group, called for political action to counter the regulatory changes.

“State lawmakers and Congress must stand as a bulwark against the Biden administration’s pro-abortion extremism,” Dannenfelser told the Wall Street Journal. “We hope to see the FDA do its job to protect the lives of women and put an end to chemical abortions.”

A December 2021 change permanently lifted the requirement for patients to obtain mifepristone during in-person appointments with a physician. This change allowed abortion pills to be prescribed via telemedicine and prescriptions to be filled by mail.

The Catholic Medical Association criticized the rule changes in a Jan. 3 statement.

Benedict XVI shares his final thoughts

VATICAN CITY (CNA) – The Vatican on Saturday evening published the Spiritual Testament of Benedict XVI, written on Aug. 29, 2006, one year and four months into his pontificate. Each pope writes a spiritual testament to be made public only after his death. Below is CNA’s translation of the full testament from Italian: MY SPIRITUAL TESTAMENT

If in this late hour of my life I look back at the decades I have been through, first I see how many reasons I have to give thanks. First and foremost I thank God himself, the giver of every good gift, who gave me life and guided me through various confusing times; always picking me up whenever I began to slip and always giving me again the light of his face. In retrospect I see and understand that even the dark and tiring stretches of this journey were for my salvation and that it was in them that He guided me well.

I thank my parents, who gave me life in a difficult time and who, at the cost of great sacrifice, with their love prepared for me a magnificent abode that, like clear light, illuminates all my days to this day. My father’s lucid faith taught us children to believe, and as a signpost it has always been steadfast in the midst of all my scientific acquisitions; the profound devotion and great goodness of my mother represent a legacy for which I can never give thanks enough. My sister has assisted me for decades selflessly and with affectionate care; my brother, with the lucidity of his judgments, his vigorous resolve and serenity of heart, has always paved the way for me; without this constant preceding and accompanying me I could not have found the right path.

From my heart I thank God for the many friends, men and women, whom He has always placed at my side; for the collaborators in all the stages of my journey; for the teachers and students He has given me. I gratefully entrust them all to His goodness. And I want to thank the Lord for my beautiful homeland in the foothills of the Bavarian Alps, in which I have always seen the splendor of the Creator Himself shining through. I thank the people of my homeland because in them I have been able again and again to experience the beauty of faith. I pray that our land remains a land of faith, and I beg you, dear countrymen: Do not let yourselves be turned away from the faith. And finally, I thank God for all the beauty I have been able to experience at all the phases of my journey, especially, however, in Rome and in Italy, which has become my second homeland.

To all those whom I have wronged in any way, I heartily ask for forgiveness.

What I said before to my countrymen, I now say to all those in the Church who have been entrusted to my service: Stand firm in the faith! Do not let yourselves be confused! It often seems that science – the natural sciences on the one hand and historical research (especially exegesis of Sacred Scripture) on the other – are able to offer irrefutable results at odds with the truths of faith.

For my salvation and that it was in them that He guided me well.

The lights of Christmas and Epiphany have all faded. We’ve come from last Sunday’s feast of the Baptism of the Lord into eight Sundays in “Ordinary” time. Watch out! Ordinary time in the liturgy never means going back to “business as usual.” True, Jesus has long since grown out of his swaddling clothes, grown from puberty to life as an adult man with a mission. Certain words in the readings stand out—words like “servant” and “mission” and “follow me.”

The first reading from Isaiah was selected to show God’s plan for His Son. From Mary’s womb, He was destined to be His Father’s servant, that He might bring the chosen people back to faithful observance of the Law. But in the same reading, God says “It is too little for you to be my servant... I will make you a light to the nations, that my salvation may reach to the ends of the earth.” Here we have a clear statement of what Jesus’ mission is all about.

In the Gospel, John gives eloquent testimony of what he heard God say from the heavens about His beloved Son. The very next day, John sees Jesus coming toward him. He turns to his own followers and says, “Behold, the Lamb of God, who takes away the sins of the world.” Why does John call Jesus a lamb? Because the world “lamb” connects Jesus with both the “suffering servant” of Isaiah and the paschal lamb of sacrifice. Then he explains to them what had happened when he poured water over Jesus’ head, exclaiming that he saw the Spirit descend on him and remain with him. Only the prophetic power of the Baptist could make a statement like that!

John acknowledges the truth of what John has said by beginning to gather his own followers. It’s a major turning point in the story of our salvation as Andrew and his brother Simon became the first disciples of the Lord. How casual it all seemed. They ask Jesus where he lives, and Jesus simply says, “Come and you will see.”

How attractive Jesus must have been to those seeking more from life. Older priests like myself find it puzzling that today’s young men do not seek Him out as Andrew did. Is it Jesus who fails to attract them? Or is it the life of the priest that doesn’t appeal? Young people should “come and see” and ask their pastor for information and advice. Of course, the underlying attraction is love. Unless a young man falls in love with Jesus as Andrew and Simon did, he will never pursue a vocation. Only love can quiet the voices of protest from the world around them and give them the courage to sacrifice the normal seeking out of a lovely woman with whom to have a family and build a career.

Why should young men seriously consider priesthood as a lifetime commitment? Because priesthood leads not only to personal holiness and salvation, but because it brings this about through the priest guiding countless others to salvation through the sacraments of the church. There is no other calling in life to equal it. It is a life of imitation of Jesus’ life and mission in his great love for people, his willingness to search out the lost, to counsel and encourage, bless and forgive sins by God’s power, to be a part of every family, yet belonging to none.

What does it take to become a priest? Priesthood takes sacrifice, generosity, common sense, adequate intelligence, piety and a sense of humor. Know anyone that has those qualities? Then give them a nudge, pray for them, and encourage them. The Holy Spirit will carry on from there!

READINGS

Isaiah 49:3, 5-6; 1 Corinthians 1:1-3; John 1:29-34

The First Reading from the Book of Isaiah: "For what was it that the Lord our God is seeking, but that the poor, and those who with trembling, seek refuge in him, and those who humbly wait for his salvation in heart? He will give you their wealth, and turn their safety into a glory. They will call you the Lord’s Treasure, and your name will be the Holy One of Israel." The Second Reading from 1 Corinthians: "We have the mind of Christ. Rejoice in the Lord always; I will say it again, rejoice. The Lord is near. Do not be anxious about anything, but in everything, by prayer and petition, with thanksgiving, present your requests to the Lord. And the peace of God, which surpasses all understanding, will guard your hearts and your minds in Christ Jesus." The Gospel reading from John: "When John saw Jesus coming toward him, he exclaimed, ‘Behold, the Lamb of God, who takes away the sins of the world.’ John himself was in doubt, and he asked Jesus, ‘What then are you, a Prophet?’ Jesus answered, ‘Tell me a question; what do you seek about me? You have spoken the truth, saying that you do not know.’ Jesus said, ‘I am the one whom you seek and are seeking. If you seek me, let the Scriptures be satisfied, and let them come to pass. Behold, the Lamb of God, who takes away the sins of the world.’"
Benedict XVI and missionary childhood

From September 7 to 9, 2007, then Pope Benedict XVI made an Apostolic Journey to Austria, on the occasion of the 850th anniversary of the foundation of the Marizell Shrine. The national director of the Pontifical Mission Societies of Austria, “Missio,” greeted the arrival of Benedict XVI in Austria with a poster created for the occasion. The text read: “A moment with ‘Missio... look at Christ, open your heart and give love’ and was inspired by the motto of the Pope’s visit (‘Look at Christ’).

More than 500 Austrian children had responded to Missio’s appeal to send letters and drawings to the Pope, illustrating the motto of the visit “Look at Christ.” The letters and drawings collected in a book were delivered to Benedict XVI on Sunday, September 9, immediately after the Angelus on the “Stephansplatz” in Vienna, by the then National Director of the Pontifical Mission Societies, Father Maasburg, together with five children chosen by lot.

After the Angelus, the Holy Father addressed the children who participated in the initiative and gave them a letter in response. “I thank you from the bottom of my heart for the letters and drawings that you wanted to give me as signs of your affection and closeness to my mission,” the Pope wrote. “They express those sentiments of faith and love for which Jesus loved the little ones so much and welcomed them with open arms, pointing them out as an example for his disciples.”

Then Benedict XVI continued: “I would like to tell you that I greatly appreciate your commitment to Missionary Childhood. I see in you little collaborators at the service that the Pope provides to the Church and to the world: you support me with your prayers and also with your commitment to spreading the Gospel.” Benedict XVI then recalled that many children still do not know Jesus, and unfortunately many others do not have what is necessary to live: food, healthcare, education; many lack peace and serenity. “The Church pays special attention to them, above all through the missionaries and you too feel called to offer your contribution, both personally and as a group,” the Pope’s letter continued, “friendship with Jesus is such a beautiful gift that one cannot keep to oneself! Whoever receives this gift feels the need to pass it on to others; and thus the gift, shared, does not diminish but multiplies. Keep going! You are growing up and soon you will become adolescents and young people: do not lose your missionary spirit! Always maintain a clear and authentic faith, like that of Saint Peter.”

Funeral Mass celebrated for Margaret Connelly

NORFOLK – A Mass of Christian Burial for Margaret E. Margittay Connelly, 85, of Colton and formerly of Norfolk, was celebrated Jan. 2 at Church of the Visitation, Norfolk. Burial will be held in the Visitation Cemetery in the spring.

She passed away peacefully at home on December 28, 2022, with her husband of 63 years, Deacon Lawrence Connelly, and her daughters by her side.

Born on Oct. 4, 1937 in New York City, Margaret was the oldest of two children of John Margittay (Turterebes, Hungary) and Margaret Orosz (New York City, NY) Margittay. Living in NYC until the age of 8, she learned to speak Hungarian before she spoke English. She moved to Norfolk as a young girl when her family bought a dairy farm on the Knapp Station road. Margaret graduated from NNCS in 1955 and went on to receive a degree in Home Economics from Plattsburgh State University in 1959. She met her future husband, Lawrence A. Connelly, one evening at the popular Sabad's restaurant in Norfolk, when he asked her to dance. A few years later, they were married on June 27, 1959 at the Church of the Visitation, Norfolk, and they began a 63 year marriage.

Her teaching career began at Madrid-Waddington in 1959 as a Home Economics teacher. She then taught sixth grade at Norfolk Elementary until retiring in 1992. Margaret was very active in her church. She was a lector, Bible study teacher, member and past President of the Altar & Rosary Society, and a member of the Serra Club, where she and her husband assisted in planning and organizing several U.S. and European trips for the organization. They also taught RCIA classes for several years at the Church of the Visitation. After retirement, she became active as the wife of a deacon, when Lawrence became a deacon of the Catholic Church in 2003, by supporting and assisting in the responsibilities for that role. Some of her favorite activities included care of her many flowers, reading, quilting, needlepoint, spending summers with family at their camp in South Colton, decorating the church for Christmas and Easter, saying her Rosary, Bible reading (Magnificat), and traveling.

In addition to her husband, Lawrence, she is survived by her children Susan (Michael) Griffin of Franklin, Tennessee; Anne (Anthony) DiBernardo of Fairport, New York; and Mary (Scott) Lalumiere of Colton, New York; 10 grandchildren, Jon (Allison) Eggleston, Megan Griffin, Sarah (James) Kennedy, Lauren Griffin, Julia (Ray) Beck, Anthony DiBernardo, Teresa DiBernardo, Rachel (Christopher) Torcedo, Crisit (Michael) Buck, and Holden Lalumiere; and two great-grandchildren, Lexi Eggleston and Emery Kennedy.

She is predeceased by her parents, John and Margaret Margittay; her brother, John Margittay; and her daughter, Marcia Eggleston.

Donations may be made in Margaret's memory to the American Cancer Society, Hospice & Palliative Care of the St. Lawrence Valley, Center for Cancer Care at Canton-Potsdam Hospital or Church of the Visitation, Norfolk. The family of Margaret would also like to thank Father Andrew Amyot for his care and visits to her during her hours of need, and to Bishop Terry LaValley for his call to the Diocese of Ogdensburg for his Diocese of Ogdensburg for his call to her which meant so much to her at the time.

Memories and condolences may be shared online at buckfuneralhome.com. The Buck Funeral Home is serving the family of Margaret E. Connelly.
