Pope prays for peace in Christmas blessing

VATICAN CITY (CNA) – In his Christmas Day blessing, Pope Francis prayed that leaders will listen to the “cries of the Prince of Peace” and bring an end to the war in Ukraine and “the other theaters of this third world war.”

Speaking from the central balcony of St. Peter’s Basilica on Dec. 25, the pope offered the traditional “Urbi et Orbi” (to the city and the world) blessing, praying that the Lord will “enlighten the minds of those who have the power to silence the thunder of weapons.”

“If we want it to be Christmas, the Birth of Jesus, and of peace, let us look to Bethlehem and contemplate the face of the Child who is born for us. And in that small and innocent face, let us see the faces of all those children who, everywhere in the world, long for peace,” Pope Francis said.

“Let us also see the faces of our Ukraine brothers and sisters who are experiencing this Christmas in the dark and cold, far from their homes due to the devastation caused by ten months of war. May the Lord inspire us to offer concrete gestures of solidarity to assist all those who are suffering, and may he enlighten the minds of those who have the power to silence the thunder of weapons and put an immediate end to this senseless war.”

As the world celebrates the birth of the Prince of Peace, humanity is experiencing a “grave famine of peace,” the pope said. The “Urbi et Orbi” blessing – which refers to the pope’s dual roles as bishop of Rome and head of the global Catholic Church – is reserved for the most solemn occasions. In this year’s Christmas “Urbi et Orbi” address, the pope highlighted specific conflicts around the world, beginning with Ukraine, noting that the war has far-reaching consequences, “putting entire peoples at risk of famine, especially in Afghanistan and in the countries of the Horn of Africa.”

Pope Francis also mentioned Syria, where he said that the conflict has “receded into the background.”

“Let us think too of the Holy Land, where in recent months violence and confrontations have increased, bringing death and injury in their wake. Let us beseech the Lord that there, in the land that witnessed his birth, dialogue and efforts to build mutual trust between Palestinians and Israelis may resume,” he said.
My favorite gift of the season

It was my favorite gift of the season, and it wasn’t something wrapped and placed under a Christmas tree. My son, Jake, who is 15, was asked to serve as the narrator for our parish’s kids’ Christmas pageant, performed before the start of the vigil Mass on Christmas Eve. I’m not sure any of us knew how that would go.

As I’ve mentioned before, Jake has autism. While he does very well in most situations, speech and reading were areas in which he struggled. He had no functional language until he was around 3 years old. He has never really enjoyed reading. He’s always found it to be work. I got a glimpse of what to expect during the rehearsal, but it still left me awe struck when that young man stepped to the lectern and read fluidly and beautifully with not even the smallest hint of nervousness in his voice. He seemed proud of himself. My husband and I were proud too.

Almost as gratifying to see how our parish community rallied around him and all the kids who participated in the pageant, as well as those who served during the Mass (there were four altar servers, including Jake). These kids were praised for their participation and encouraged to continue participating. We were encouraged too.

After Mass, my parents joined us at our small home in Moira for a simple dinner.

As he usually does when he’s at our house, my father mentioned how glad he is that we didn’t buy another house we had toured when we were in the market, a house in another community. We were glad too.

The whole evening was a great reminder that God put us where we’re supposed to be and has equipped us with the gifts and graces we need to be there. It also reminded me that I also need to follow God’s call and be the kind of person who makes others feel proud, encouraged and glad, as well.

Considering the season’s feast days

As we come to the end of another year, I notice that I have the same memories as the last few years. First, I remember that annual priest’s ski trip the first week of January at Mont Tremblant in Canada. I haven’t skied in several years, yet I do remember so many happy trips. In fact, I remember one year taking a vacation from the parish in Mollendo, Peru, so I could join that gang for a week of skiing.

This year, there is a touch of sadness in remembering because several of my skiing friends are now with the Lord. Such are the sad realities of life as the years go by. I will be celebrating a special Mass as a remembrance of those happy days and of those friends. May they continue to find peace and happiness with the Lord.

Today, I would also like to share with you my joy as I celebrate the various feast days during the week after Christmas. You see, I truly enjoy the various feast days that the Catholic Church celebrates during this Christmas week.

First, I like having the Christmas decorations at church in place for these couple of weeks until Epiphany. There is something special about visiting the Church during the day and praying quietly before the Christmas creche. Here we have some large images of the scene right in front of the main altar. This gives me lots of time to fully remember and be impressed as I pray over the Incarnation of our Savior.

Then, there are the feast days that we celebrate during the week after Christmas. I hope you remember them. The day after Christmas the Church celebrates the Feast of St. Stephen, that first deacon and martyr of the early Church. I am certain our permanent deacons find a special spirit and joy in recognizing St. Stephen’s readiness to assist those original apostles. Our deacons are called to have the same dedication and readiness to serve as those first deacons.

Stephen seems to remind today’s deacons and the rest of us the importance of having a strong faith and boldness to speak the message of Jesus and to be unafraid to dedicate our lives to the service of our Savior.

The second day after Christmas is the Feast of St. John the Apostle and Evangelist, the apostle of Jesus who was truly close to the Lord Jesus. I read recently that someone remembers John was Jesus’ best friend. John wrote a Gospel that we have in the New Testament. There are many personal notes that John adds to his words. John often speaks of an apostle that Jesus loved. We can be certain that he writes of himself. Many of the events in Jesus’ life are described in detail, and we know that John was there. His message is that of a loving witness.

There are also three of John’s epistles in the New Testament. I have noticed that John’s Gospel has a theological, even philosophical tone, but these epistles are very pastoral. He urges the peoples of all time – the letters are written to us all – to be true followers of the Lord by living in the spirit of love as Jesus did. We are called to love one another as disciples of the Lord, as witnesses to being true Christians. These letters are a special gift to us all.

Finally, this year we celebrate on a weekday the Feast of the Holy Family, since there is not a Sunday before the celebration of New Years. As we remember Christmas and celebrate the Birth of Jesus, we remember again with joy and happiness the Holy Family of Jesus, Mary and Joseph. While we know very little about the daily life of the Holy Family, we can only imagine that it was a special time. I like to imagine that it was rather ordinary but also filled with love and peace – a peace that we all pray for as we witness to our loved ones growing up. The only story we have of Jesus as a youth is the finding of Jesus in the temple, that picture of Jesus talking with those religious leaders and being discovered by Mary and Joseph. And then, he goes home with them to Nazareth and lives a blessed family life.
It was January 1977. I was a recent arrival in Chicago, at the Great Lakes Naval Recruit Training Center. Weeks earlier I had quit college, searching for a new adventure in life. After all, the ads claimed: The Navy, not just a job, but an Adventure! I had no idea what to expect. At that time, there were no sailors in my family who could share a story or two, let alone dressed in dark Navy uniforms. I was pretty much unprepared. At that time in my life, I was challenged with many unknowns.

In those days, a new Navy recruit was referred to as a “raiser.” I can still remember being called a raiser standing in line, one very crisp January morning around 0500. I guess being dressed in dark Navy-blue uniforms topped off with dark blue knitted watch caps, we looked like raisins to the uninformed passer-by. As I stood in line that morning on the frigid banks of Lake Michigan, the adage, Hurry up and wait, became real for me. It was cold! Wait? Wait for what...the unknown! It's funny how our memory kicks into overdrive when certain things in the present trigger thoughts of events past. I was walking to the office early yesterday morning. I looked up to the dark blue sky which was speckled with bright shining stars outshone by the moon. It was bitterly cold, and I thought of my days as a raisin so many years ago. The skies yesterday morning brought me back to that phrase, Hurry up and wait. For what?? The unknown.

As shoppers, we've been hurrying up and waiting for Christmas since Halloween! We hurried up for Christmas so that we can take down the Christmas tree as soon as the gifts were opened, and wrappings discarded. In such a hurry, we now find the New Year has arrived with all its unknowns. People of faith struggle with unknowns. People of faith do not have all the answers. While these days I'm wearing a different uniform, I am sometimes, still in a hurry and impatient because I want to have all the answers now. I don’t want to hurry up and wait. But prayer brings me back to the realization that we do know all we need to know: God is Love! God was born among us to show us how to manage life's unknowns so that we might enjoy eternity in His loving embrace. It's that simple! It's that difficult!

I pray that as we welcome the New Year, we never tire of learning more and more how much we are loved by God. Our mission as a disciple of Jesus is to allow Him to lead us through the unknowns that 2023 promises to bring. Persevere in inviting your family members back to the Eucharist as we are nourished and challenged to meet tomorrow's unknowns with confidence and courage because, after all, we are Christ-led, Christ-fed and Hope-filled! Blessed New Year!
With calendars now flipped over to 2023, the North Country Catholic looks back over the stories of 2022.

- Jan. 2 – Father Patrick J. O’Reilly, a retired priest of the diocese, died at the age of 84 at the Midland Regional Hospital in Portlaoise, Ireland, where he had resided since 2014.

United States Bankruptcy Court for the Northern District of New York

In re The Roman Catholic Diocese of Syracuse, New York
Case No. 20-30663

Please take notice that, On June 19, 2020, The Roman Catholic Diocese of Syracuse, New York ("Diocese") filed for protection under chapter 11 of title 11 of the United States Code (the "Bankruptcy Code").

The Court has established January 17, 2023 at 11:59 p.m. (prevailing Eastern time) (the “Supplemental Bar Date”) as the deadline to assert claims against the Diocese arising from or relating to abuse that occurred when the survivor was 18 years of age or older, and which, prior to the enactment of the Adult Survivors Act (S.66/A.468A) would have been subject to a statute of limitations defense ("Adult Claims").

If you have an Adult Claim against the Diocese you must file a claim on or before the Supplemental Bar Date, which will be treated confidentially in accordance with prior court orders in this Case.

Please visit https://case.stretto.com/diocesesyracuse or call (855) 329-4244 for more information on how to file your proof of claim.

If you do not timely file a proof of claim, you may forfeit your right to vote on any plan of reorganization and to share in any distributions to creditors in connection with the Diocese’s Chapter 11 case.

DIOCESAN LIFE

Lesson from the journey of the Wise Men

One of the Christmas E-Cards displayed the three kings on their camels moving towards the Holy Family. While most Nativity scenes show the wise men arriving at a stable, most Scripture scholars agree that it may have taken them two years or more to get to Bethlehem. Pondering this scene of the slow walking of the camels may cause one to wonder what that journey must have been like.

Would one take this long arduous journey? Perhaps it was an incredible faith that there was someone who would satisfy the longing in their hearts for something more.

What would it have taken to endure this tedious trip? To travel days and months with only a star in the sky to guide them must have required incredible perseverance.

What patience it must have taken to continue in their search for the more with no guarantee when they would arrive and what they would find at the end of their search.

As we reflect on what God might be calling each of us to be and to do in this coming new year, how might we take some lessons from the Wise Men for our spiritual journey? We too are seeking for more; not more in the material sense but in a spiritual sense like the wise men.

We too seek a better future for all. Recently PBS aired the documentary from Pope Francis entitled The Letter: A Message for Our Earth. It’s also available on YouTube. In this moving film, Pope Francis meets with supporters of the Laudato Si’ movement and talks about the power of humanity to stop the ecological crisis.

This power is within you and me. He urges us to pay attention to what is happening around us and not to become numb to the sufferings of both human community and the earth community.

Thus, we are called to be watchful in the way the Wise Men were, to be vigilant to see what God might do and to take these lessons into consideration as we reflect on the meaning of Christmas on this first Sunday of Advent.

Pope on St. Francis de Sales: devotion ‘meant for everyone’

(CNA) – Pope Francis Wednesday published a message on St. Francis de Sales, a saint who teaches us that “devotion [to God] is meant for everyone, in every situation.”

The pope's apostolic letter, titled Totum amoris est, or “Everything Pertains to Love,” was published on Dec. 28, the 400th anniversary of St. Francis de Sales’ death in 1622.

The title comes from the preface of the Swiss saint’s book “Treatise on the Love of God,” in which he wrote that “In Holy Church, everything pertains to love, lives in love, is done for love and comes from love.”

St. Francis de Sales was a priest and bishop who taught against Protestant heresies and encouraged holiness in all people, no matter their vocation. He is known for his spiritual writings, including two books that are still widely read today: “An Introduction to the Devout Life” and “Treatise on the Love of God.” In 1877, he was proclaimed a Doctor of the Church.

“On this anniversary of the fourth centenary of his death, I have given much thought to the legacy of Saint Francis de Sales for our time,” Pope Francis said in his apostolic letter. “I find that his flexibility and his far-sighted vision have much to say to us.”

“Today he bids us set aside undue concern for ourselves, for our structures and for what society thinks about us, and consider instead the real spiritual needs and expectations of our people,” the pope noted.

Commenting on St. Francis de Sales' teachings, Pope Francis said “devotion is meant for everyone, in every situation, and each of us can practice it in accordance with our own vocation.”

“As Saint Paul VI wrote on the fourth centenary of the birth of Francis de Sales, ’Holiness is not the prerogative of any one group, but an urgent summons addressed to every Christian: ’Friend, come up higher’ (Lk 14:10). All of us are called to ascend the mountain of God, albeit not each by the same path.’”

“Devotion,” Paul VI said, quoting St. Francis, “must be practiced differently by the gentleman, the craftsman, the chamberlain, the prince, the widow, the young woman, the wife. Moreover, the practice of devotion must be adapted to the abilities, affairs and duties of each.”

FALSE DEVOTION

In his letter, Pope Francis reflected on what St. Francis de Sales called “false devotion” and its relevance for our spiritual lives today.

“Francis’ description of false devotion is delightful and ever timely. Everyone can relate to it, since he salts it with good humor,” the pope explained.

De Sales wrote: “Someone attached to fasting will consider himself devout because he doesn’t eat, even though his heart is filled with bitterness; and while, out of love for sobriety, he will not let a drop of wine, or even water, touch his tongue, he will not scruple to drench it in the blood of his neighbor through gossip and slander. Another will consider himself devout because all day long he mumbles a string of prayers, yet remains heedless of the evil, arrogant, harmful words that his tongue hurts at his servants and neighbors. Yet another will readily open his purse to give alms to the poor, but cannot wring an ounce of mercy from his heart in order to forgive his enemies. Another still will pardon his enemies, yet never even think of paying his debts; it will take a lawsuit to make him do so.”

“All these,” Pope Francis said, “of course, are perennial vices and struggles, and they lead the saint to conclude that ‘all these fine people, commonly considered devout, most surely are not.’”

TRUE DEVOTION

The pope explained that St. Francis de Sales taught that true devotion, instead, is found in “God’s life dwelling within our hearts.”

“True and lively devotion presupposes the love of God; indeed, it is none other than a genuine, and not generic, love of God,” the saint said.

Pope Francis said: “In Francis’ lively language, devotion is ‘a sort of spiritual alertness and energy whereby charity acts within us or, we act by means of it, with promptness and affection.’ For this reason, devotion does not exist alongside charity, but is one of its manifestations, while at the same time leading back to it.”

“Devotion is like a flame with regard to fire: it increases the intensity of charity without altering its quality,” the pope said, adding a quote from St. Francis de Sales, who said: “Charity is a spiritual fire that, when fanned into flame, is called devotion. Devotion thus adds nothing to the fire of charity but the flame that makes charity prompt, active and diligent, not only in the observance of God’s commandments but also in the exercise of his divine counsels and inspirations.”

Vatican shares prayer for Benedict XVI’s health

VATICAN CITY (CNA) – The Vatican’s news service posted a prayer for the health of Benedict XVI on Wednesday, after Pope Francis asked Catholics to pray for the “very ill” pope emeritus. At the end of his weekly public audience on Dec. 28, Pope Francis said: “I ask to all of you a special prayer for the pope emeritus Benedict, who, in silence, is sustaining the Church.”

“Remember him – he is very ill – asking the Lord to console him and to sustain him in this testimony of love for the Church until the end.” Shortly afterward, the Vatican’s spokesperson, Matteo Bruni, confirmed that the 95-year-old Benedict XVI’s health had worsened “in recent hours.”

The president of the Italian bishops’ conference, Cardinal Matteo Zuppi, said Wednesday the bishops are praying for Benedict XVI. “At this time of suffering and trial, we gather around the Pope Emeritus,” the cardinal said in a Dec. 28 statement. “We assure remembrance in prayer in our churches, in the knowledge, as he himself had reminded us, that ‘no matter how hard the trials, difficult the problems, heavy the suffering, we will never fall out of the hands of God, those hands that created us, sustain us and accompany us on the journey of existence, because they are guided by an infinite and faithful love.’”

Basilica offers virtual tour of the joyful mysteries

WASHINGTON, D.C. (CNA) – The Basilica of the National Shrine of the Immaculate Conception in Washington, D.C., is inviting the faithful to take a virtual tour of its Joyful Mysteries Chapels in celebration of Christmas.

“Virtually tour the Joyful Mysteries Chapels, celebrating the jubilee of the Messiah’s birth and early life!” the basilica announced in a tweet on Dec. 25. The five adjacent chapels located in the church sanctuary depict the five joyful mysteries of the rosary: The Annunciation, the Visitation, the Nativity, the Presentation in the Temple, and the Finding in the Temple. Each chapel tells the story of its respective mystery in colorful, glittering mosaics, along with a parallel scene from the Old Testament. For those who are unable to visit in person, the basilica offers a free immersive virtual tour located on its website. To experience the virtual tour, visit https://t.co/VOvyvGChA.

First known Nativity scene figures are on display

ROME (CNA) – The first known Nativity scene figures are currently on display in one of Rome’s oldest basilicas. The underground Chapel of the Nativity in the Basilica of St. Mary Major — known to Italians as Santa Maria Maggiore — once contained at least six marble Nativity statues sculpted by Arnolfo di Cambio in the late 13th century. The public can now view these Nativity figures in the Marian basilica’s Sistine chapel, located to the right of the main altar. The figures were commissioned in 1292 by Pope Nicholas IV, the first Franciscan pope, who was inspired by St. Francis of Assisi, the creator of the first living Nativity in Greccio, Italy, in 1223.

Sante Guido, an art historian and professor at the Pontifical Gregorian University, told EWTN that five of the marble statues in the Nativity scene today are original to the 13th century. It is unclear how many figures in total made up the Nativity scene commissioned by Nicholas IV, but the marble figures that exist today of St. Joseph, the three Magi, and a single work depicting both a cow and a donkey are part of the original set.

Let it snow, let it snow

There is a scene in the classic Christmas show, Rudolph, the Red Nosed Reindeer, showing the star, Rudolph, with his powerful headlight nose leading the reindeer team and Santa through the snow-covered earth on Christmas night. I've always thought it showed an unrealistic amount of snow, but I wrote that off to the imagination of the producer.

Until this past Christmas weekend.

My wife, Kathy, and I, and our daughter Ticia, are veterans of the 1977 blizzard. That storm chose a weekend to grace us too. We filled the time back then as best we could occasionally watching the windblown snow fall. The snow then was falling horizontally.

This storm rivaled that blizzard. If you live in the western part of the diocese, you know what havoc the 2022 winter storm Elliott wrought. Snow in multiple feet, not inches, started falling Friday, December 23, and kept falling in the region east of Lake Ontario and throughout Western and Central New York to Tuesday, December 27.

Buffalo got most of the national publicity. A couple of dozen people died in Erie County alone because of the snow and temperatures. As of this writing, no deaths were attributed to the weather in our region. The theory is that hearty North Country residents are used to lots of snow. We can deal with it. We respect the snow.

Many parishes in the Jefferson-Lewis Deanery cancelled Christmas Eve and Christmas Day Masses because of the travel bans issued by jurisdic- tional municipalities. Midnight Mass was cancelled at St. Mary’s Cathedral in Ogdensburg.

Parishes took advantage of streaming technology, forced on us by the pandemic a couple of years ago, to make Mass available to shut ins. In theory, everyone in this part of the world was “shut-in” because of the travel ban. Kathy and I watched Bishop Terry R. LaValley celebrate Mass with Father Joseph Morgan and Deacon William O’Brien Christmas morning. A camera view from the choir loft leads us to believe there were not many people in attendance at the 8 a.m. Mass — maybe a dozen. A neighbor cleared our front walk with his snowblower a couple of times over the weekend. Otherwise, we just hunkered down and “celebrated” Christmas alone. It was nice but eerie.

The experience helped me understand the challenges some people face who live alone or are separated from friends and family. We thanked God this Christmas for our health, sufficient food and shelter. Less crucial but also important, we were thankful for uninterrupted electrical service and heat.

Bless all those who gave up their Christmas with family to protect and defend the rest of us against Elliott and who knows what else. Happy New Year!

Deacon Kevin Mastellon ministers in Watertown. He is the Director of Permanent Deacons for the Diocese of Ogdensburg.

Informal poll shows favorite Christmas carols

By Jonah McKeown
Catholic News Agency

For the second year in a row, we at CNA conducted an informal poll on social media to determine which Christmas carol reigns supreme as our readers’ favorite. To simplify things, the only choices we gave you to choose from were the top 12 carols (in the U.S. only, sorry) from last Christmas, as determined by the music streaming service Spotify.

(I cannot emphasize enough how unscientific this poll was. Remember, it’s all just for fun!)

And so, without further ado, the results for 2022 are as follows:

This is the second year we’ve done this poll. And frankly, I found this year’s results a bit surprising — but also very gratifying.

For one thing, my personal favorite carol — “O Come All Ye Faithful” — took the crown this year! I love this carol because of its beautiful message urging us to come before our newborn Lord and adore him — and also because, from a lyrical and musical standpoint, it just really lends itself to being belted out on Christmas morning at Mass.

Last year, “O Come All Ye Faithful” didn’t even place in the poll, a fact that I bemoaned at the time. Again, I strongly associate both “O Come All Ye Faithful” and “Hark the Herald Angels Sing,” which placed second, with Christmas Mass during the day.

The two carols that took home third and fourth place are both mainstays of Christmas Midnight Masses, in no small part because both of them have “night” in their name — “Silent Night” and “O Holy Night.” Those two carols took home the gold and silver medals last year, respectively.

There were a couple of other surprises. Last year, the occasionally controversial song “Mary Did You Know?” didn’t get a whole lot of love, finishing dead last. But this year, it turned in a much better performance, finishing middle of the pack. Also finishing near the middle was a carol that was not a contender last year: “We Three Kings.” (Arguably an Epiphany Carol, but still very appropriate for airtime on Christmas Day.)

“What Child Is This?” and “God Rest Ye Merry Gentlemen,” both originating from England, finished middle of the pack last year, but this year “What Child Is This?” finished last, and “Gentlemen” exited the poll entirely. Not sure what to make of that one.

The American standard “O Little Town of Bethlehem” and “The First Noel,” also English, finished near the bottom.

Here are the full results (again, it’s not scientific, it’s just for fun. Merry Christmas!):

- 204 votes for “O Come All Ye Faithful”
- 189 votes for “Hark the Herald Angels Sing”
- 162 votes for “Silent Night”
- 161 votes for “O Holy Night”
- 113 votes for “Joy to the World”
- 64 votes for “Mary Did You Know?”
- 59 votes for “We Three Kings”
- 55 votes for “Do You Hear What I Hear?”
- 42 votes for “The First Noel”
- 41 votes for “Little Drummer Boy”
- 40 votes for “What Child Is This?”
- 40 votes for “O Little Town of Bethlehem”

Support And Pray For Vocations
SOLEMNITY OF MARY, THE MOTHER OF GOD

This feast goes all the way back to the Council of Ephesus in the year 431 A.D. when the Church officially recognized the Divinity of Christ and recognized Mary as the Theotokos – the Mother of God.

In the first reading we have an ancient blessing that Jewish fathers gave to their children: “The Lord bless you and keep you! The Lord let His face shine upon you and be gracious to you. The Lord look upon you kindly and give you peace.”

This blessing is a welcome assertion that we dwell always in the presence of the Holy One, that we are attuned by God, that all that transpires on earth is meant to lead to peace, graciousness, and kindness. We are meant to be a blessing to one another as God has blessed us.

St. Paul’s letter to the Galatians is the only place St. Paul mentions Mary, not by name, but as “the woman.” It really concentrates on her child, what this child of hers has done for the world, and for us. “When the designated time had come, God sent forth His Son born of a woman, born under the law, to deliver from the law those who were subject to it, so that we might receive our status as adopted sons.”

“Now that that time has come, we are no longer under that guardian, and you are, all of you, sons of God through faith in Christ Jesus. All baptized in Christ, you have all clothed yourselves in Christ, and there is no more distinction between Jew and Greek, slave and free, male and female, but all of you are one in Christ Jesus... We are no longer slaves, but free sons. Our relationship with God is now all about the intimacy of children, and about faith and freedom, baptism, and belonging to God in a closeness that was unthinkable before. At Christmas and the New Year, we must reflect on the gift and the blessing that God offers us in Christ. It is completely opposed to violence, war, discrimination, nationalism, greed, selfishness, and the callousness of human beings one to another.

Today is the Feast of Mary, the Mother of God. When the Church had the courage at the Council of Ephesus in 431 to declare that Mary is not only the Mother of Jesus, but the Mother of God, they are declaring their faith in who Jesus is – that Jesus is God. Mary is the Mother of God by God’s gracious favor and blessing and by Mary’s obedience to the will of God.

In the Gospel, we find Mary and Joseph and the infant. Mary doesn’t tell the shepherds who Jesus is. The Shepherds tell Mary who Jesus is. They are the first evangelizers, and when they go back to their everyday work, we can imagine how many hundreds they must have told that same news.

Mary the woman has much to reflect upon, much to treasure, and much to ponder. Jesus is the Word of God, made flesh of her flesh, and born of the Spirit of God that quickened in her and overshadowed her. She brought forth a child both God and human. The church says that anything we say of Mary, we also say of ourselves. We are to listen to the Word of God and let the Spirit overshadow us and let God’s Word take flesh in us. We are “to bear God to the world.” Like her, we must hold God in our hearts, let the child be born there and grow to maturity there and take over our lives.

Mary spent her whole life pondering all of this in her heart. She appears again at Pentecost to help form the new Church. The intimacy between Jesus and this new family of God is based on obedience to the Word and taking this Word into one’s heart.

All of this is worth treasuring and pondering on New Year’s Day, and in this season. On this first day of the year, we are invited into the practice of contemplation, of treasuring God’s Word and presence in our lives. We are encouraged to learn devotion and faithfulness from Mary, who finds great favor with God and gives birth to such hope and love.

Feast of the Epiphany

The word “epiphany” means a sudden burst of understanding and meaning. Today’s feast celebrates the revealing of Jesus coming for all the nations. Isaiah had foretold that “all the ends of the earth will behold the salvation of our God” – that His people would eventually be the chosen ones. “...to those who did accept Him, he gave power to become children of God.” And now, on the Epiphany, the light from the skies is intensified a hundred, a thousand-fold, and the prophecy of Isaiah is fulfilled that “nations shall walk by your light, and kings by your shining radiance.”

To the amazement of all in that region, there came foreign camels bearing foreign scholars – wise men – kings, Caspar, Melchior, and Balthasar, with gifts of gold, frankincense, and myrrh. What courage and perseverance those strangers have shown to brave the dangers of travel, skepticism, and political intrigue. But they found what they were looking for. That star gave trustworthy guidance and now triumphantly shines as guard over the lowly dwelling wherein rests the child who possesses all meaning. They fall to their knees in homage, for their learning has made them humble, and their wisdom leads them to recognize the Divine in the fragile flesh of a child.

What a silent adoration! What loving glances they exchange with Mary and Joseph.

But for all their simple faith, their wisdom is sharp enough to detect the sham delight and murderous intentions of the wily Herod. And so, they pay their respects, leave their gifts, and modestly depart for their homeland, sorrowfully aware of the terrible price justice must pay for Peace.

Their role in history has been accomplished – to teach us all to follow the guidance of the Almighty, to accept our own role as bearers of the Light, and to follow this Christ into His mission, to partake of His passion, and to join the millions through the ages who will preach His Gospel of universal salvation.

The Son of God is the one judge and arbiter of truth and the one source of light, but we are all called to be “epiphanies,” providing glimpses of that truth, showing the way in our own small spots of time and circumstance to a larger plan and destiny.

Princely Child, make of us all wise men and courageous women, obedient children who will follow wherever you lead us. That means being faithful to prayer, diligent in imitating the enthusiasm and guidance of Pope Francis in sharing with those seeking the Light. This is the way for us to be light-bearers, helping banish the darkness and confusion in the world in which we live.
Extending Christ’s ministry & Healing

Christmas should be a season of joy for Christians worldwide, particularly for children who are called by their name in God’s redeeming glory.

Yet three-year-old Daria in Bucha, Ukraine, will have a tough time celebrating after losing the warmth of the family home to shelling.

Seven-year-old Abdi, from northern Ethiopia, will struggle to find joy after two years of hunger, a product of the severe drought and conflict afflicting his bishop and several priests.

These stories reflect the reality of children in 1,200 mission dioceses worldwide, where missionary women and men who represent aChurch that is often incredibly young and materially poor will struggle to communicate the true joy of the season. Missionaries are not just doing charity throughout the world: They are extending Christ’s healing and His entire ministry to people in dire need of it. They are building churches, educating children, and healing physical and psychological wounds caused by war, cruelty, oppression, terror, and despair. They are bearing witness to the compassion of our Lord Jesus Christ.

I am reaching out to you today to ask you to help the children and by praying for them and by adding the Christmas Appeal to your donation list. In donating to the Society for the Propagation of the Faith, you will be helping the Universal Church make Christ present throughout the world, particularly where He has been doubted, ignored, and shunned.

With my prayers for your intentions throughout the Christmas Seasons, may God bless your kind missionary heart and the love you send into the world.

Gratefully in His mission,

Sister Mary Ellen Brett, SSJ
Diocesan Director
Volunteers with St. Peter’s Outreach, part of St. Peter’s Parish in Massena, used St. Joseph’s Church, an oratory, to distribute Christmas gifts and meals to families in need in the greater Massena area on December 14 and 15. Over 300 households were served.
