Follow Me: Relationship with Christ, His people

Editor’s note: With Ash Wednesday only a week away (Feb. 22), Bishop Terry R. LaValley suggests we use this time to evaluate our relationships with the Lord and His people in his annual Ash Wednesday letter.

“This Lent we want to re-energize our faith and develop an even more intimate relationship with Jesus through personal prayer and public worship. Prayer is not an activity of the human person but is God working within the pray-er. That’s why our prayer is so powerful and is critical in replacing the darkness of the world with life directed to the heavenly horizon.”

Pope: Trafficking ‘disfigures’ human dignity

In a video message released on the ninth World Day of Prayer and Reflection Against Human Trafficking, Pope Francis said human trafficking “disfigures” human dignity. The annual day of prayer takes place on Feb. 8, the day the Catholic Church celebrates the feast of St. Josephine Bakhita.

The Holy Father began his message by addressing this year’s theme — Journeying in Dignity — and specifically encouraged young people to “care for dignity, yours and that of every person you meet.”

“I understand that it was you who chose ‘Journeying in Dignity’ as your theme,” he said. “This is very important: It points to a great horizon for your anti­trafficking efforts: human dignity.”

“Human trafficking disfigures dignity,” he continued. “Exploitation and subjugation limit freedom and turn people into objects to use and discard. And the system of trafficking profits from the injustice and wickedness that oblige millions of people to live in conditions of vulnerability.”

The pope acknowledged the rise in human trafficking and the targeting of women, children, migrants, and those “impoverished by economic crisis, wars, climate change, and so much instability.”

He added: “We know we live in a difficult time, but it is precisely in this reality that all of us, especially young people, are called to join forces to weave networks of good, to spread the light that comes from Christ and his Gospel.”

Pope Francis urged young people to be “missionaries of human dignity, against trafficking in persons and all forms of exploitation” and to “never tire of seeking ways to transform our societies and prevent this shameful scourge that is trafficking in persons.”
My ‘new strategy’

I need something new. I’ve talked about it before. I’ve been in a bit of a rut. I usually refer to it as “a general malaise.” Nothing is wrong, but nothing seems right, either. Things that I usually enjoy now feel like obligations.

I’ve been trying for months to figure out a way to snap out of it.

I’m employing a new strategy in that effort. It’s a “new strategy” because it’s just beginning, and it’s a “new strategy” in the sense that I’m intentionally seeking out new things to add to my life.

My family recently went on a vacation to two cities none of us had ever visited before. I felt so much joy during that trip and for a while after.

I’ve recently started learning a couple new skills – baking bread and crocheting. My brain is being stimulated. I’m creating things. I’m accepting mistakes and failures as part of the process. I’m finding joy in and as a result of those new endeavors.

There’s no “general malaise” when things are new. So I’ve been trying to introduce small new things – trying new recipes, dining at an unfamiliar restaurant, even just learning new crochet stitches.

My “new strategy” kept emerging in my mind as I prayed and thought about what I would take on for Lent this year. I know most people talk or think about “giving up” something for Lent. Sometimes I give things up for Lent, but I try to develop a Lenten practice inspired by the Holy Spirit with the intention of drawing me closer to the Lord. Sometimes that’s giving something up, and sometimes it’s taking something on.

I’ll admit it: My spiritual life has been experiencing that “general malaise.” My prayer life feels dry. Mass often feels like an obligation. It all feels blah.

I think I need something new. Maybe it’ll be a new devotion. Maybe it’ll be a new way of looking at Scripture. Maybe it’ll be something that hasn’t even occurred to me yet (I’m open to suggestions). I’m hoping and I’m confident God will show me what will help me in this season, what will help draw me to Him.

There’s nothing new about that.

Considering the laity

Today, I would like to call your attention to the chapter on the laity, written in the Dogmatic Constitution on the Church – one of the documents published by the Second Vatican Council. Yes, it was written 60 years ago, and yet it continues to have great meaning for our Catholic Church today.

Most of you who read this are part of the laity of our Church. The laity is all the faithful of the Church except those who are in Holy Orders, our leaders. The Council gave special attention to the laity, making certain that all the laity would always remember their importance in our Church.

The Council reminds all pastors of the importance of the laity’s participation in the life of all Catholic parishes. The Council writes this: “The pastors of the Church know well how much the laity contribute to the welfare of the whole Church.”

The council goes on to challenge pastors everywhere that they were never called to undertake the salvific mission of the Church alone. “The laity, especially by the witness of their lives, resplendent in faith, hope, and charity, must manifest Christ to others.”

The council quotes Sacred Scripture to help us recognize the importance of the participation of the laity in the life of the Church. The Scripture is from St. Paul’s message to the Romans: “For just as in one body we have many members, yet all the members, have not the same function, so we the many, are one body in Christ, but severally members one of one another.”

The council continues to make it very clear that Christ constantly guides the Church to lead all, including all the laity, to sainthood. Again, the words of the council: “In the Church, not everyone reaches along the same path, yet all are called to sanctity – and have obtained an equal privilege of faith – through the justice of God.”

The council fathers use the word “vocation” when speaking of the laity. Just as we speak of the priesthood as a vocation, a call from Our Lord to lead a man to become a priest. So, the council sees the all the men and women of the laity as called by the Lord as having a vocation, a divine invitation to participate in the life of the Church.

The words of the council: “Gathered together in the People of God and established in the one Body of Christ under one head, the laity – no matter who they are – have, as living members, the vocation of applying to the building up of the Church and its continual sanctification all the powers which they have received from the goodness of the Creator and from the grace of the Redeemer.”

So, the council calls upon the laity to realize that they are to participate in the mission of the clergy, the priests and the deacons. “All the laity, then, have the exalted duty of working for the greater spread of the divine plan of salvation to all men and women, of every epoch and all over the earth.”

I like to put it this way: Being a member of the laity is not being a spectator in the Church – at Mass and in all the activities of the parish Church. Members of the laity should realize that they must participate so that our Church stays alive and strong, bringing the Holy Spirit and the love and message of Our Savior to all in their community and all in this world, especially by the way they live each day.

I want to remind you of a recent Sunday Gospel reading that reminded me is all, clergy and laity, of Jesus’ call to all his disciples to be the salt of the earth and the light of the world. I write to remind you that this is a call from the Holy Spirit that the laity is also called to bring new life to our Church, now and in all times to bring a new Spirit and good taste to all the People of God and to become the light of the world leading others from the darkness of sin to the holiness of Our Savior.
Lent: Your relationship with Christ, others

Dear Sisters and Brothers in Christ:

A personal and societal condition has become increasingly evident. We are forgetting who we are, where we come from and where we are headed. Such amnesia is causing us to lose our bearings. The ramifications are becoming increasingly obvious and alarming. The remedy for such memory loss is not to be found in any pharmaceutical elixir. It’s found in strengthening our relationship with the God who made us, loves us to death, His death on the Cross, and promises eternal life to those who would follow Him.

Pope Benedict XVI once wrote: “Being Christian is not the result of an ethical choice or a lofty idea, but the encounter with an event, a person, which gives life a new horizon and a decisive direction.” By taking the time to listen and reflect on the Word of God, I learn more about my personal identity, both who I am and Whose I am. Our personal encounter with Jesus Christ is crucial. This Lent we want to re-energize our faith and develop an even more intimate relationship with Jesus through personal prayer and public worship. Prayer is not an activity of the human person but is God working within the pray-er. That’s why our prayer is so powerful and is critical in replacing the darkness of the world with life directed to the heavenly horizon.

As we begin this Holy Season of Lent, I encourage you to reflect on your relationship with Jesus and with the members of His Body, the Church. We commit ourselves to the mission of the Church as passionate disciples in mission. We want to stay focused on our Diocesan Priorities of: Creating a Culture of Vocations, Strengthening Faith Formation in Family Life and Building Parishes with Living Stones.

Our efforts in addressing these priorities will help us answer questions of identity and mission. I encourage you to look for new ways to be active participants in the life of your parish. Thank you for being a source of loving support for your priests.

May the risen Lord accompany all of us on our journey of faith towards the light of Easter. Mary, Mother of our Redeemer, pray for us!

Faithfully yours in Christ,

Most Reverend Terry R. LaValley
Bishop of Ogdensburg

Massena welcomes Father Nick Revilla

By Darcy Fargo
Editor

MASENA – For Father Nicolas J. Revilla from the Archdiocese of Caceres in the Philippines, a lot of things are new right now. Father Revilla, 51, is new to the United States, new to Massena, new to snow and new to parish life.

“I always tell people, ‘it is different,’” he said. “Different in the sense that I used to live in the other side of the globe that is totally different in weather, in time zone and the culture of people. But the North Country, and Massena in particular, is such a gorgeous place. It is still wintertime, and for me, experiencing winter is like being transported and be right in the middle of those Christmas lyrics we hum during Christmas in the Philippines, ‘the winter wonderland.’

Now that I am here the winter wonderland truly becomes a reality, and not just words we sing in Christmas. I have already heard wonderful stories about the kind, warm and welcoming hearts of the parishioners of St Mary’s and Sacred Heart Churches in Massena. And, in a few days I have been here, I can rightfully say it is so.

I have been treated with utmost kindness and warm welcome by the people in our community. And, of course, the Bishop of Ogdensburg, Bishop Terry LaValley, who is the father of the Church here, has welcomed me with great joy, and has afforded me with everything that I need for my mission here in the diocese.”

Though he’d visited Long Island previously, Father Revilla says he was also surprised to see how close he is now to Canada.

“I couldn’t believe the river is actually the border of U.S. and Canada, and I am literally seeing it with my own eyes,” he said. “It’s surreal for me! I am just glad that I am here.”

Father Revilla noted that while he’s only been the North Country a short time, he is glad to be part of an active parish and on a team with Father Mark R. Reilly, pastor, and Father Severinus Torwoe, parochial vicar. He said he looks forward to learning about parish life.

“I guess I am still learning the ropes of parish life,” he said. “Being a seminary formator practically all my priestly life, I need to make adjustments here and there. But parish life is the heart of the local church. It is where we meet our fellow brethren who are journeying with us in the way of following our Lord Jesus.”

One of nine children, eight boys and one girl, Father Revilla said his parents hoped one of their sons would become a priest.

“They would have wanted the older boys to enter the seminary, but they were not called for the priesthood,” he said. “I believe God puts us in situation wherein it would be easier for us to follow his call, and that is what happened to me. I believe when my mom brought me to Church to serve God (as an altar server), God is using her to open my eyes to the reality of Catholic priesthood. Four of those altar boys from our parish entered the Minor seminary that particular year, and I was the only one who made it to the priesthood. Being 12 years old, we know nothing about what a real vocation is all about, but I know deep in my heart that I am being called to something. And I think that is how my vocation has started. It begins like a seed that is planted in the heart of a young person. The seed needs to be nourished and taken cared of to grow to maturity. I have that vocation as a young boy, and in the seminary it grew and was nourished by my devotion and prayers. Like the apostles of Jesus, 12 of us from that group of high school seminarians became priests. And we are doing the work of God in different parts of the globe, two in Canada, four in the U.S. and 6 in the Philippines.”

While here, Father Revilla said he looks forward to sharing his love of Christ and his devotion to the Blessed Mother here in the North Country.

“We have a deep devotion to the Blessed Mother way back home,” he said. “We call the Blessed Virgin Mary ‘Ina’ in our dialect which literally means ‘mother.’ I think is the reason why we still have a good number of vocations to the priesthood. This devotion to Mary in her title ‘Our Lady of Penafrancia’ is unique in our region, and this devotion has really made the faith of the people stronger and more committed. We believe that this devotion to the Blessed Mother will lead us to Jesus, her Son. We believe in God’s help and protection under the mantle of the Blessed Mother’s intercession. The Blessed Mother has truly guided the faith of the people through many crises and calamities that come to us. Our region in the Philippines is in the path of what we call typhoons back home. These are seasonal storms that come in different intensities. Yet we are assured of God’s protection and help because we have our ‘Ina’ who looks after us and accompanies us in our life here on earth.”
Catholic Charities, schools get boost from Cabrini Foundation grants

By Deacon Kevin Mastellon
North Country Catholic

OGDENSBURG – Catholic Charities and the diocesan Department of Education, along with several other organizations in the North Country, received substantial awards in the year-end grants from the Mother Cabrini Health Foundation based in New York City.

The grant recipients were announced by the foundation on January 23 in New York City.

“Over 500 year-end grants will address the health-related needs of low-income and underserved New Yorkers, including food insecurity, education access, the mental health crisis, healthcare, workforce development, and social services for incoming immigrants and migrant workers,” the Mother Cabrini Health Foundation stated in a press release.

Six grants awarded to Catholic Charities will amount to nearly $2 million dollars according to Executive Director Deacon Patrick J. Donahue.

Five of the grants to Catholic Charities will continue projects funded by Cabrini in the past.

The newest initiative, called the Transitional Housing and Supports Program, “is about certain circumstances that create vulnerability for someone in housing,” said Deacon Donahue.

He gave, as an example, the situation a young mother with a couple of children might suddenly find herself in because of the loss of a job, or a change in marital status.

“That family might need temporary housing,” Donahue said.

The grant, $175,000, will be used to develop existing housing into transitional homeless housing. It is not a shelter or a warming center like those that have been in the news recently.

“We developed one residence in Glenfield (Lewis County) using the rectory at St. Mary’s,” Deacon Donahue said.

“We purchased property on Caroline Street (Ogdensburg) which will be converted to use as temporary housing.”

In the four years since its inception, the Mother Cabrini Foundation has awarded over two thousand grants totaling $635 million.

The North Country, mostly diocesan entities, has received between $4 million and $5 million annually. This year 24 programs in the North Country, 19 of them diocesan entities or directly related to the Catholic Church, will receive $5.2 million.

The Department of Education will administer nearly $1.5 million. Seton Catholic and Immaculate Heart Central will each receive $80,000 for separate programs. Funding is also included for parishes or other Catholic organizations in Ogdensburg, Lake Placid, Morrisonville, Saranac Lake, Carthage and Massena.

Community based organizations in Watertown and Plattsburgh were also awarded grants.

A list of all the grant recipients in New York is available at https://cabrinihealth.org/grants-database/.

“Five years ago, Catholic Charities in the Diocese of Ogdensburg had an annual budget of about $1.7 million. You add in Cabrini funding in the amount we are currently receiving and comparable services and we are looking at a $4.2 million budget,” Deacon Donahue said.

Catholic Charities is in the business of developing programs and then handing them off to other funding entities when the grant money goes away. Deacon Donahue is not naïve about that possibility but suggests funding may not dry up. He points to the available providers in the region to support his belief.

“We don’t know what’s going to happen with Cabrini moving forward,” Deacon Donahue said.

“We know we don’t have a resource rich area. Cabrini after five years could say, ‘OK, let’s move on to another provider.”

The problem is there are few, if any organizations available to fund. But Cabrini is committed to support programs in the region.

Donahue continued, “No organization does some of the things that Catholic Charities does. The reason we do them is that the services aren’t available from alternative organizations. Food, shelter, clothing certainly are; we have a lot of food pantries and emergency housing and things like that depending on the county you’re in. But when you get into foster care supervision and parenting education, those programs, we used to have a lot of those across the North Country but they have disappeared.”

Five of the six programs Catholic Charities receives Cabrini funding for are in the third year of five years of support.

“What we try to do with Cabrini funding,” Donahue told North Country Catholic, “is to launch programs and then over the course of the funding from Cabrini, search out alternative funding sources.”

“So, for example, in Malone, we launched a foster care supervised visitation program,” he said. “We have two case-workers assigned to that large program. We are hoping by five year that Franklin County picks that program funding completely or at least partially, because it is a county service.”

That’s one example Deacon Donahue cites.

“We are looking for the counties to step in after three or four years and add the program to their budget to sustain the operations of this and similar programs.”

According to their press release, “the mother Cabrini Health Foundation is a private, nonprofit organization whose mission is to improve the health and well-being of New Yorkers, bolster the health outcomes of vulnerable communities, eliminate barriers to care and bridge gaps in health services. The organization is named after an advocate for immigrants, children and the poor.”

The Foundation funds programs and initiatives across New York State that provide either direct healthcare services or address the social determinants of health.
Aiding in Syria, Turkey after quake

Environmental Stewardship

By Jonah McKeown
Catholic News Agency

Catholic aid agencies worldwide are coordinating and sending aid after a series of massive earthquakes shook parts of Turkey and Syria, leaving continued devastation in their wake.

According to the latest available figures as of Friday morning, the 7.8-magnitude quake has left at least 22,000 people dead in Turkey and Syria. The Washington Post reported. In Syria, which has been ravaged by more than a decade of civil war, countless buildings collapsed Feb. 6, including several Catholic churches, reported ACI MENA, CNN’s Arabic-language partner agency.

Nikki Gamer, a spokesperson for the U.S.-based Catholic Relief Services, told CNA that CRS is supporting local churches, partners in Turkey and Syria, including Caritas Turkey and Caritas Syria, but coordination remains difficult. CRS is raising funds via a banner on its website.

“Many of our partner staff are personally affected by the destruction,” Gamer told CNA.

“Telecommunications are disrupted and transportation is impaired, complicating relief efforts and attempts to identify and account for family members. Snow, sleet, and freezing temperatures are in the forecast, so priority needs include safe shelter, warm clothes, and hot meals. Our partners have begun to offer that support and will continue to assess and address the needs in the weeks to come.”

The Catholic humanitarian organization Aid to the Church in Need (ACN) is readying an emergency aid program, spokesman Joop Koopman told CNA. Their current focus is on the provision of blankets, milk for infants, and medical supplies, he said. In addition, engineers are inspecting houses making sure families can safely return to their homes, while many shelter in churches and church buildings.

“We will have more information in the next couple of days,” Koopman told CNA.

In Syria, many cities and towns with a significant Christian population, such as Aleppo, Homs, Latakia, and Hama, suffered major damage. In Aleppo, several UNESCO World Heritage sites were damaged, including the citadel of the old city.

Witnesses to the tragedy said the earthquake and its aftermath were, though brief, just as traumatic as the war.

“If you ask the people of Aleppo about the war they lived through, they express their feelings of pain, fear, despair about the future, loss of safety, etc. They use many different expressions to express the 12-year war. But if you ask them about the earthquake that they were exposed to, the answer is just one word: horror,” Sister Annie De Merjian, a Catholic religious sister who lives and works in the city, told Aid to the Church in Need.

Chaldean Catholic Bishop Antoine Audo said they are hosting at least 50 people at the bishopry, while Bishop Ephraim Maalouli, the Greek Orthodox metropolitan bishop of Aleppo, Alexandretta, and their Dependencies, said they had already sheltered nearly 1,600 people at various churches in the city since the disaster.

DIOCESE OF OGDENSBURG PROVIDES PRAYER, SUPPORT TO Latakia

At the 2017 Chrism Mass, Bishop Terry R. LaValley announced the Solidarity in Faith Initiative, creating a twinning relationship with the Maronite Diocese of Latakia, Syria.

In light of the recent earthquake in Syria and Turkey, we continue to provide prayer and support to the Diocese of Latakia, an area that was already struggling to aid an influx of refugees fleeing conflict in the nation.

Prayer and fasting are encouraged for the people of the Diocese of Latakia, Bishop Antoine Chbeir and all those impacted by the earthquake.

Poll: One in three Catholic parents think it’s very important kids share faith

(CNA) – A little more than a third of Catholic parents say it is extremely or very important for their children to grow up to have religious beliefs similar to their own, according to a recent Pew Research Center report.

In the study released last month and expounded further in a Feb. 6 article, 35% of Catholic parents with children under 18 said it is extremely or very important for their children to grow up to share their religious beliefs.

In total, 65% of Catholics said it was either extremely, very, or somewhat important for their children to hold their Catholic beliefs as adults.

Thirty-four percent of Catholics said it was not too important or not important at all.

Catholics recorded among the lowest enthusiasm for passing their religion to their children of any Christian denomination in the survey.

An even lower 29% of white non-evangelical Protestants said it is extremely or very important for their children to share their religious beliefs.

White evangelicals were among the highest, with 70% responding that it is extremely or very important for their adult children to share their religious beliefs. In other words, white evangelical parents are twice as likely as their Catholic counterparts to strongly believe their children should share their views on religion.

The only group that registered significantly lower enthusiasm overall was the religiously unaffiliated category, those self-identifying as atheist, agnostic, or nothing. Only 8% of this group said having their children share their beliefs was either extremely or very important.

A crucial note to the study is that parents who attend services weekly or more were more than three times as likely to say having their children share their beliefs is important, 76% vs. 21%, Pew said.

Federal judge: Constitution may still protect abortion

(CNA) – Despite the U.S. Supreme Court ruling to overturn Roe v. Wade, a federal judge is claiming that the 13th Amendment, which was ratified to abolish slavery, might establish a constitutional right to have an abortion.

Under Roe v. Wade, the court previously held that the 14th Amendment protects a right to privacy and a right to privacy protects a woman’s right to decide whether to have an abortion.

In the Dobbs decision last June, the court revoked that precedent, stating that “the Constitution does not confer a right to abortion” and that “procuring an abortion is not a fundamental constitutional right because such a right has no basis in the Constitution’s text or in our nation’s history.”

Regardless, U.S. District Judge Colleen Kollar-Kotelly wrote in an order that the court was only addressing claims related to the 14th Amendment and did not evaluate the possibility that the right was protected elsewhere in the Constitution.

The 13th Amendment, ratified in 1865, abolished slavery. The amendment does not mention either slavery or involuntary servitude, except as punishment for crime whereof the party shall have been duly convicted, shall exist within the United States, or any place subject to their jurisdiction.

The 13th Amendment, ratified in 1865, abolished slavery. The amendment declares that “neither slavery nor involuntary servitude, except as a punishment for crime whereof the party shall have been duly convicted, shall exist within the United States, or any place subject to their jurisdiction.”

Kollar-Kotelly cited two scholars who have argued that abortion bans create a type of involuntary servitude.

Making choices

February 19
Seventh Sunday in Ordinary Time

READINGS
Leviticus 19:1-2, 17-18
1 Corinthians 3:16-23
Matthew 5:38-48

of his teeth in retribution! But Jesus taught his followers not to retaliate at all! In fact, if a Roman soldier commanded you to carry his baggage for a mile, which was allowed by law, then Jesus’ followers were to go with the soldier for two miles. Even today, we admire the person who goes the extra mile for someone. Jesus’ listeners must have scoffed at Jesus when He told them not only to love your neighbor, but to love your enemies as well. While that may have seemed absurd foolishness, we all now that keeping our distance, and viewing our enemy as somehow sub-human doesn’t get us anywhere. Treating our enemy with compassion can often bring about a reconciliation, and even turn our enemy into a friend.

How can we ever possibly get the grace and strength to follow Jesus’ advice? Today’s second reading from St. Paul’s letter to the Corinthians tells us how. First, he tells us that we are stronger and holier than we think. “Do you not know that you are the temple of God, and that the Spirit of God dwells in you?” Incredible! Talk about bolstering our confidence in ourselves to become perfect! Then St. Paul tells us not be worried if society thinks us fools for acting on Jesus’ advice. “For the wisdom of this world is foolishness in the eyes of God...” When we act according to God’s wisdom, then we belong to Christ, and Christ belongs to God!”

Jesus’ teaching changes our whole attitude toward those with whom we live and work. It brings not only spiritual health to ourselves but a more peaceful world around us.

A good marriage doesn’t just happen

Congratulations! If you are married, we celebrated a week for us.

Sunday February 12 was World Marriage Day and the week, February 7 to 14, 2023, was observed as National Marriage Week.

The bishops of the United States see this week as “an opportunity to focus on building a culture of life and love that begins with supporting and promoting marriage and the family.” In fact, they chose a theme for the week: “Marriage... one flesh, given and received” highlighting “the one-flesh union of husband and wife that is willed by God. It also indicates the personal self-gift of each spouse, one to the other.”

Children are the God-given fruit of marriage. “Children are truly the supreme gift of marriage and contribute greatly to the good of the parents themselves.” That quote comes from the Order of Celebrating Matrimony, the official ritual book of the Roman Catholic Church in the United States.

Sounds perfect. We know marriage is not easy. In fact, the latest statistics I could find report 41% of all first marriages in the U.S. in 2022 would end in divorce.

I looked at the marriage/divorce statistics from our New York State Health Department for 2013 for the counties in our diocese, the Health Department had good solid numbers for that year, and the shocking percentage of failed marriages.

There were 3,645 marriages, civil and religious, in our counties in 2013. There were 1,726 divorces granted. That’s 47% folks. Admittedly the divorce cases are not necessarily from the same group that was married, but I believe the numbers have been similar in subsequent years. I’m no sociologist, so I can’t begin to explain why couples, who presumably had good intentions when they entered into marriage, suddenly soured on their relationship.

Some of it has to do with attitudes toward commitment. Some people are influenced by what they grew up with. A broken home is a natural environment. Some folks divorce because of infidelity, one spouse or the other, maybe both. Some people divorce because of an abusive situation. They are all sad.

Some of us in the deacon community started talking last week about celebrating the diocesan-wide marriage jubilee this fall at St. Mary’s Cathedral with Bishop Terry LaValle.

The deacons in this diocese, 95% are married or are widowers. The willingness of our wives to support our clerical vocation and the strength of our marriages contribute greatly to our work for the church. That’s why deacons and their wives are natural promoters of the annual Marriage Jubilee. You will see and hear more about the celebration in coming months.

We pray for those folks who, for whatever reason, have dissolved their marriages. May the peace of Christ abide in you.

Parish welcomes quake survivors

“The situation in Antioch is dramatic. Entire buildings have collapsed. Mosques and churches have been destroyed. There are dead, there are people buried under the rubble, and in many places no one has yet arrived to try to save them. It is freezing cold, there is no light, there is no water, bread ovens have been destroyed, shops are closed. The streets, filled with debris, are impassable even for rescue vehicles. I am told that at least half of the city is destroyed or has suffered serious damage, especially in the oldest part.” This is the dramatic testimony to Fides by Father Domenico Bertogli, 86, a Capuchin Friar from Modena, who from the late 1980s until 2022 served as parish priest to the Catholic community of Antakya, the ancient Antioch on the Orontes, now located in the southwestern Turkish province of Hatay. Antakya is less than 200 kilometers from Gaziantep, the closest urban area to the epicenter of the earthquake that has sowed death between Syria and Turkey.

Father Dominic is now in Istanbul, but he is in daily contact with Father Francis, who succeeded him in Antakya as parish priest of the Catholic church dedicated to Saints Peter and Paul. “Our parish,” Father Bertogli tells Fides, “was not destroyed. It is a low building, and it withstood the shock of the tremors. Only the reception house suffered serious damage. But the mosque and minaret that were right next to the parish collapsed. Two major mosques in the city were also gutted, as well as the Orthodox church and the Protestant church.”

Now, the small parish has opened its doors to accommodate displaced families living nearby.

“They feel safer, because the parish has a garden that is an immediately accessible escape route, in case of new tremors,” Father Dominic said. “And the looming fear of further tremors also prevents people from facing the emergency with lucidity. There is a need for food, tents and blankets. There is a need for everything.”

It was Father Dominic himself who had inaugurated the parish of Saints Peter and Paul so many years ago, in a city laden with memories associated with early apostolic preaching. He had established it by restoring two old crumbling houses in the old Jewish quarter, where presumably the dwellings of the city’s first Christians were also concentrated. Having finished the work, he had carved on the stone above the doorway the inscription Türk Katolik Kilisesi, which means Turkish Catholic Church.

SUPPORT THE CHURCH IN CENTRAL AND EASTERN EUROPE

RESTORE THE CHURCH
BUILD THE FUTURE

In late February 2022, after years of simmering tensions and a months-long buildup of troops on the Russia-Ukraine border, Russian forces invaded Ukraine in a nationwide assault involving ground forces, armored vehicles, warships, and airstrikes. The need for humanitarian aid and pastoral support for the Ukrainian people was great and immediate, especially the millions of internally displaced persons fleeing war-torn areas for other locations within the country. The United States Conference of Catholic Bishops’ Subcommittee on Aid to the Church in Central and Eastern Europe was poised to provide immediate aid to Ukraine thanks to well-established, decades-long relationships with bishops and Catholic organizations in the region.

Through the generosity of parishioners to the Collection for the Church in Central and Eastern Europe, nearly 50 emergency aid grants totaling more than half a million dollars, brought humanitarian aid to victims and refugees in Ukraine, Poland, Slovakia, and Moldova between February and May 2022. For example, the Kyiv archeparchy of the Ukrainian Greek Catholic Church (UGCC) provided emergency shelter in its cathedral basements to Kyiv residents fleeing bombardment. The UGCC’s patriarchal curia was provided with a satellite communications package that allowed key personnel to maintain contact and coordinate priestly ministry and emergency relief to people nationwide. Caritas Ukraine acquired the food, tents, blankets, and personal hygiene products so desperately needed by people who sought aid at relief centers throughout the country with collection funds.

Your support for the collection is crucial to helping the Church fulfill its mission to minister to people’s spiritual and material needs in Ukraine and more than 25 other countries throughout Central and Eastern Europe, especially in times of serious hardship.

More information about the collection and the range of projects it supports can be found at www.usccb.org/cee.
