Pope: Every baptized person is part of mission

By Deborah Castellano Lubov
Vatican News Service

Every baptized person plays an own unique role in the Church’s mission.

Pope Francis stressed this during his Wednesday General Audience in the Vatican, as he continued his series of catecheses on apostolic zeal, this week considering the ecclesial aspect of evangelization.

The proclamation of the Gospel, the Holy Father stressed, is not the task of isolated individuals, but a communal service to the Church’s apostolic faith, which “must be passed down in its integrity to every generation.”

Zeal for spreading the Gospel, he said, is inseparable from this ecclesial dimension, which, he explained, protects the Christian message from distortion and from accommodating to worldly interests and ways of thinking.

The Vatican II Decree on the Church’s Missionary Activity, the Pope recalled, presents all evangelization as having its source in God Our Father’s immense love, which was poured out on the world through the missions of the Son and the Holy Spirit, and prolonged in the Church’s mission of proclaiming this saving love to all the ends of the earth.

Missionary Disciples

As “missionary disciples,” Pope Francis insisted, all the baptized are called to imitate the self-sacrificing love of Christ.

He said the faithful are called to bear creative and convincing witness to the truth of His word and its reconciling power, not only for individuals, but for the life of our entire human family.

“The apostolic zeal of each missionary disciple,” the Pope stressed, is so important “because in the pilgrim and evangelising People of God there are no active and passive subjects.”

Returning to his words in his Apostolic Exhortation Evangelii Gaudium on proclaiming the Gospel in today’s world, the Pope reassured, “All the baptized, whatever their position in the Church or their level of instruction in the faith, are agents of evangelization.”

Quoting the decree Ad Gentes on the Church’s mission, the Pope reiterated that this task “is one and the same everywhere and in every condition, even though it may be carried out differently according to circumstances.”
It occurred to me as I was in my car, exiting the parking lot after going through the drive-thru of a chain coffee shop: It’s prayer season. Yes, I know it’s Lent, and that is an especially prayerful season, but that’s not what I mean in this case. As I approached the exit to the parking lot, there were very large snowbanks on either side. I couldn’t see the road in either direction. I had to inch forward very slowly, hoping there wasn’t another vehicle rapidly approaching. By the time I could see both directions of traffic clearly, my Jeep was well into the lane of travel. It’s a situation I’m pretty sure most of us have encountered at some point in the North Country. When it happens to me, I say a quick prayer asking God to protect me and any other driver who happens to be approaching. It’s been happening to me regularly over the last few weeks, so it’s been a pretty prayerful season.

I sometimes beat myself up over the fact that I struggle with the kinds of prayers I convince myself are “real prayer.” Generally anything that requires prolonged focus – the rosary, Adoration with no formal prayers, journaling or reading, and similar prayer practices. While I try to cultivate those practices, especially in Lent, my mind wanders rapidly and frequently. I see the benefit of those attempts, and I keep trying. I would love to be the kind of person who could focus exclusively on the Lord for an hour, but my brain simply doesn’t work that way. My parking lot prayer reminded me, though, that I’m blessed to find God in little moments throughout each day. Sometimes it’s quiet prayers. Sometimes it’s stopping and just feeling awe at and gratitude for the awesomeness of God’s creation. Sometimes it’s enjoying silence for just a few minutes and listening to what God has to say. Sometimes it’s God reminding me how beautiful these little moments can be as I’m pulling out of a parking lot.

Today, I would like to join with you and walk with you as you move along this road of Lent. By now, we are all pretty much immersed in the Lenten Spirit with our prayers, the Scriptures and some mortification. Here we are in the middle of Lent. By now we should have our goals determined. Lent is about opening in love our hearts and souls. We are ready to walk with Jesus during those events of Holy Week, which is coming up soon. We say each year that Holy Week is the holiest week of the year. During Holy Week, we immerse ourselves in the sufferings of Jesus. We celebrate the Lord Jesus in his saving mystery, remembering how he saved us as he endured the outrage and pain leading to this crucifixion. Then we celebrate his resurrection.

May these events strengthen our dedication so that we can stand with our Lord today. As Lenten pilgrims, there are so many Lenten practices that keep us focused on our goal of being prepared to be a part of the Lord’s Holy Week. I encourage you to try the Stations of the Cross. This devotion leads us along the road to Golgotha, reminding us of just how much the Lord Jesus suffered for us, and it leads us to be fully dedicated disciples of the Lord. We are told that there were no disciples walking with Jesus that day. May we fill that task as today’s disciples. The stations keep us close to the Lord as we see clearly his sufferings. May we walk with Jesus as his friends.

Today, I also encourage you to participate in the celebration of the Holy Mass on some weekdays, also. Each time we participate at Mass, we know that the Lord unites himself with us in a special way through the unique sacrament of the Holy Eucharist. The reception of Holy Communion transforms us with a new and loving dedication that comes from our uniting ourselves with the Lord who suffered so much for us. The Church calls these celebrations a rebirth; we again celebrate and dedicate ourselves, renewing our baptism in the Lord.

I love the practices of Lent. It is truly a special time in our Church year. So here is one more for you: I want to encourage you today to find some time for silence. Not a long time, maybe just five minutes, with the Lord in silence, just silence – no prayers, no books, no music – just the quiet of being in the presence of the Lord who we know longs to be with us in love. We have only to listen. I like to think of silence as a prayer of calmness. You and I live in a busy, noisy world. A time of silence is a perfect opportunity to open our hearts in love in the presence of the Lord. The Gospels teach us that the Lord longs to come and be with us in all his glory, just as he transfigured himself with Peter, James and John on the mountain. I want to encourage you to take just five minutes each day to find a place and be in silence with the Lord. Find five minutes each day during this Lenten season to remember, the Lord will always have a message for you so listen. I would like to offer a few words on silence from my favorite saint, Catherine Doherty. She wrote this: “Silence is the highest form of communication, but we’re not use to it. We don’t think of it, in fact we bypass it. Silence demands discipline. Even more, silence must be the fruit of love. Without love, silence is not pleasant – it is aggressive and hostile. But when it comes out of a heart filled with love, then silence is the highest form of communication.” Whenever there is loving communicative love, there is God. So, take the time each day to be with the Lord in silence. I would like to encourage you also to write down the message that the Lord brings to you during your time of silence. Each day the Lord has a message for you. Make a journal for yourself.
Survey shows engagement at St. Agnes

LAKE PLACID – St. Agnes Catholic Church in Lake Placid recently conducted the Gallup Parish Engagement Survey, and the results are in! The survey was taken during Mass using a dedicated internet address, and every regular parishioner 18 years or older was asked to answer the 25 questions. Paper copies were made available for those who were unable to take the survey on their phone or tablet.

The confidential responses were then analyzed by the Gallup Faith database, and the results provide a baseline of data from which action plans for the future of the parish will be made.

Gallup distinguishes three distinct groups within parishes in terms of engagement and provides the results including how they compare to Catholics nationwide. The overall data for St. Agnes show that 84% of parishioners feel very positive about the parish, as compared with only 78% in parishes nationwide.

According to the survey results, 44% of St. Agnes parishioners can be described as loyal, with a strong emotional connection to our parish. This group is more spiritually committed, more likely to invite others to parish events and give more, both financially and of their time. Most Catholic parishes typically have only 30% in this group.

Additionally, 40% of our parishioners also have a positive view of St. Agnes parish and attend regularly. This group, however, feel connected more socially rather than spiritually to the parish. They give moderately and may do some volunteering. The average for this middle group is 48% for Catholic parishes nationwide.

A mere 16% of the St. Agnes congregation appear in a category that includes two types of parishioners. The first are those who attend Mass occasionally, if at all, and the second are those who attend regularly but are not happy with the parish. Most Catholic parishes nationwide have 22% of their parishioners in this group.

So, clearly St. Agnes is doing a lot of things well, and as the responses to each individual survey question are analyzed, a clear picture of the areas that need to be improved will emerge.

In the coming weeks, parishioners will be invited to attend a presentation of the results of the survey and to join task groups that will examine the responses in more detail to determine what the numbers suggest.

They will also be invited to contribute to planning strategies to help all parishioners feel more engaged utilizing the Gallup Member Engagement materials. Stay tuned! It’s an exciting time to be at St. Agnes!

What is a Foster Grandparent?

Foster Grandparents are role models, mentors, and friends to children with exceptional needs. The program provides a way for volunteers age 55 and over to stay active by serving children and youth in their communities. They are placed in a classroom setting with a child or children who are in need of emotional support, development of basic learning skills, friendship, companionship, encouragement, individual attention, and unhurried help. The program currently has 40 volunteers and serves more than 100 kids per year.

The Foster Grandparent Program is hosted by the Catholic Charities of the Diocese of Ogdensburg and supported by AmeriCorps Seniors, a federally funded agency responsible for building volunteer based programs for over 50 years and counting.

From one St. Patrick’s to another

BRASHER FALLS – After a decade in storage, the altar of repose from a now-closed church has new life in a church with the same name.

According to Father Shane M. Lynch, pastor of Parish of the Visitation and St. Raymond in Norfolk, St. Andrew’s Church in Norwood, and St. Patrick’s Church in Brasher Falls, the altar of repose formerly housed in St. Patrick’s Church in Hogansburg is now installed in St. Patrick’s Church in Brasher Falls. “It’s been sitting in the garage for 10 years,” said Father Lynch.

Father Martin E. Cline was the last pastor to serve in the Hogansburg church. His connections to the St. Patrick’s in Brasher Falls led to the initial development of the idea to move the altar of repose from the closed church to Brasher Falls.

“(Father Cline) is from Brasher, and both churches have St. Patrick as their patrons,” said Father Lynch.

Though the altar of repose was transported 10 years ago, the initial plan was to keep it in storage until the next renovation of the interior of St. Patrick’s in Brasher Falls.

“Our parish council knew it was in the garage,” Father Lynch said. “If there was any interior work in that church, it was going to be included in that work. Interior work is a ways off, though.”

The altar of repose was going to need a new home, though, as the rectory and garage at St. Patrick’s was being sold.

“Talking with our council last fall, we discussed the altar of repose and whether or not we wanted to get it put in,” the pastor said. “The consensus was absolutely. I got the proposals together and the cost, and I brought that to the council, and they approved it.”

One of the major challenges in getting the altar of repose installed in its new home was finding a contractor who could handle the work.

“We had a contractor out of Georgia who had initially removed it and created it and brought it to St. Patrick’s (in Brasher Falls),” Father Lynch said. “We looked for local options, but there weren’t any. We reached out to that company from Georgia, and they did the work installing it.”

Because of the altar of repose’s age and because it had been in storage after transportation, some work was needed to restore it.

“They repaired a few chips and cracks,” Father Lynch said. “And they got it all cleaned and polished and put together. It’s roughly 2,000 pounds of material.”

The larger altar of repose also displaced a mosaic cross with a resurrected Jesus that was previously in the sanctuary.

“It wasn’t in conformity with liturgical norms,” Father Lynch said. “With permission from the bishop, we removed that cross.”

Father Lynch said he was pleased with the finished installation.

“It looks nice in there,” he said. “And it’s nice that it’s not just sitting in a garage.”

‘Hold the ice’ to help the earth

The ice placed in drinks has become invisible. Most of us are fairly unaware of the ice since it’s so “normal” for it to be there. But do we need it?

It takes a huge amount of energy to make ice from water, just as it takes a huge amount of energy to melt the surrounding snow and ice at this time of year so that grass, flowers, and trees can begin to grow again.

How much energy? In order to go from water to ice, energy has to be extracted so that the water molecules can line up (oxygen side to hydrogen side) and bond to form a solid.

For a liter of water with a mass of 1 kg (2.2 lb) at 0°C to become ice at 0°C, (so no change in temperature, just changing from liquid to solid), the hidden or latent energy that must be extracted is 333,500,000, or 0.09 kilowatt-hours. It doesn’t seem like much, but it’s enough energy to lift that liter 21 miles!! Yes, 21 miles! And that is a single liter of water.

Commercial ice makers can convert 500 pounds (225 kg) of water to ice each day. And there’s one of these inside every restaurant, fast-food joint, and convenience store. That’s a lot of our energy going into ice. And any ice left in the cup is that energy wasted.

The drinks we usually put the ice in are mostly already refrigerated, so they don’t need to be cooled, we’re just used to ice. Try going without the ice and see if you notice. The bonus is you’ll get more of the drink!

While you’re ditching the ice, also ditch the straw and lid. They can’t be recycled. And if you have an ice maker in your fridge at home, it adds 12 to 20% to its energy use. Go back to manual ice trays and compare your energy bills to see savings.

Two state legislatures are considering ending any legal protections for a priest who learns about sexual abuse in the confessional. In response, Catholic leaders warned that the laws are unconstitutional, put priests in legal jeopardy, and endanger confidentiality with penitents.

Delaware’s House Bill 74 is among the proposals to end clergy protections in mandatory sexual abuse reporting laws.

“This act abrogates the privilege between priest and penitent in a sacramental confession relating to child abuse and neglect,” says the bill summary on the Delaware General Assembly's website. “It requires priests to report child abuse and neglect or to give or accept evidence in a judicial proceeding relating to child abuse or neglect.”

The legislation prompted criticism from the Catholic Diocese of Wilmington.

“The sacrament of confession and its seal of confession is a fundamental aspect of the Church's sacramental theology and practice. It is nonnegotiable,” the Wilmington Diocese said March 6. “No Catholic priest or bishop would ever break the seal of confession under any circumstances.”

“The Diocese of Wilmington considers the protection of the vulnerable to be one of the most important aims of public policy,” the diocese continued. “However, this legislation would not advance that vital objective.”

The requirement would be “nearly impossible to meet” for Catholic clergy because almost all sacramental confessions are anonymous.

“It would be a clear violation of the First Amendment for the government to interfere in this most sacred and ancient practice of our faith,” said the diocese, which voiced concerns about infringement on the rights of other faith communities.

Canon law characterizes the seal of sacramental confession as “inviolable.” It says it is “absolutely forbidden for a confessor to betray in any way a penitent in words or in any manner and for any reason.”

Breaking this seal incurs an automatic excommunication that only the pope can pardon, the Wilmington Diocese said.

Delaware law already requires priests to be mandatory reporters of suspected abuse, and internal diocese policy requires priests to report suspected child abuse to civil authorities.

In Vermont, Bishop Christopher Coyne of Burlington appeared before the Senate Judiciary Committee on March 3 to oppose Bill S. 16. The bill would fully eliminate clergy protection from the abuse reporting law if reporting abuse would violate a privilege or disclose confidential communication.

According to Coyne, the legislation “crosses a constitutionally protected element of our religious faith: the right to worship as we see fit.”

“There is no question that protecting children is essential and criminals must be held accountable for their crimes. But disregarding fundamental religious rights is unjust,” he said.

The exemption to the current law is “very narrow,” according to Coyne. No office conversations or counseling sessions are privileged. He characterized confession as “a moment of worship in which the penitent seeks God's mercy.”

Coyne said all clergy and lay employees of the Burlington Diocese are mandatory reporters. Anyone who works for the diocese or diocesan parishes must have a criminal background check and training to recognize signs of abuse.

“The priest has a sacred duty to maintain the secrecy of sacramental confession,” he said. “The sacramental seal of confession is the worldwide law of the Catholic Church, not just the diocese. No bishop has the authority to change this.”

“Requiring clergy to report child abuse learned during a penitential conversation would infringe upon our First Amendment rights,” said the bishop. “Not just the rights of myself and the clergy but the rights of all of the Catholics in the state of Vermont and the rights of any other faith community that has that kind of a privileged penitential communication.”

Other states are considering similar legislation.

In Kansas, State Sen. Tom Holland, D-Baldwin City, introduced S.B. 87, which would require ordained ministers in the state to report suspected physical, sexual, or emotional abuse and neglect of children. Failure to report would mean a misdemeanor charge.

Though his 2019 bill on the same topic contained an exemption for the penitential privilege, his 2023 legislation does not, the Topeka-Capital Journal reported in January.

Chris Rock likens abortion to hiring hitman

By Tyler Arnold
Catholic News Agency

Award-winning comedian Chris Rock compared paying for an abortion to hiring a hitman during a new Netflix special, echoing rhetoric used by Pope Francis, who has made that comparison in the past.

During his March 4 special, "Chris Rock: Selective Outrage," the comedian, who is known for courting controversy, turned to an issue that most celebrities won’t touch: abortion.

“There’s a part of me that’s pro-life,” he said, before using humor to remind the audience that abortion “is killing a baby.”

“I believe women should have the right to kill babies,” Rock said. “That’s right, I’m on your side. I believe you should have the right to kill as many babies as you want. Kill them all, I don’t give a [expletive]. But let’s not get it twisted, it is killing a baby.”

Rock further compared the process of obtaining an abortion to the process of obtaining a hitman.

“Whenever I pay for an abortion, I request a dead baby,” Rock said. “Sometimes I call up a doctor like a hitman: ‘Is it done?’”

Rock reassured the audience that “I am absolutely pro-choice” because “I want my daughters to live in a world where they have complete control of their bodies.”

He then showed in no uncertain terms that abortion means taking the life of a human being.

“I think women should have the right to kill a baby until he’s 4 years old,” Rock said. “I think you should be able to kill a baby until you get that first report card.”

The comparison between getting an abortion and hiring a hitman is one that Pope Francis has used on more than one occasion to criticize abortion.

“Is it right to take a human life to solve a problem?” Pope Francis rhetorically asked an audience in St. Peter’s Square on Oct. 10, 2018. “It’s like hiring a hitman. Violence and the rejection of life are born from fear.”

Pope Francis used the analogy again in an interview with Reuters on July 2, 2022.

“I ask: ‘Is it licit, is it right, to eliminate a human life to resolve a problem?’” the pontiff said. “It’s a human life — that’s science. The moral question is whether it is right to take a human life to solve a problem. Indeed, is it right to hire a hitman to solve a problem?”

Abortion became a more contentious issue in American politics after the Supreme Court in June 2022 ruled in Dobbs v. Jackson Women’s Health Organization that states could enact laws that restrict or outlaw abortion. About a dozen states have banned abortion in most cases, four states added more restrictions to abortion, and some states are in ongoing legal battles over abortion policy.
To see clearly, we need Jesus’ healing

We’re at the half-way point in Lent. Two weeks ago, we were told to “Listen up!” This week, the readings tell us to get rid of the darkness and to learn to see as God sees.

As Father Richard Rohr says in one of his books, “Because humans do not see their own truth very well, they do not read reality very well either.” As a result of straining away through the darkness, we make many foolish and destructive choices. We’re like a person who fails to turn the light on when entering a room. As a result, we knock over tables and chairs rather than seeing how to use them.

In the first reading, God sends Samuel to go to the house of Jesse in Jerusalem to anoint that son whom God has chosen to succeed Saul as King. God warns Samuel, “Do not judge from his appearance or from his lofty stature, because I have rejected him. Not as man sees does God see, because man sees the appearance, but the Lord looks into the heart.” Eventually, Samuel finds the least likely son, David, and anoints him King.

If we are to really see clearly, we need to let Jesus heal us of our blindness as He did the man born blind in today’s Gospel. Even though Jesus was right in front of him, the blind man couldn’t see him until Jesus removed the scales from his eyes and restored his sight. Only later, after much harassing from the narrow-minded Pharisees, was he able to really see spiritually and see Jesus as the Son of God. It was all possible when he saw through the lens of the Holy Spirit.

We are invited to celebrate this Sunday with joy, because through our baptism and confirmation, we have been invited to live in the light and to act with the power of that light. In the second reading from St. Paul’s letter to the Ephesians, we read, “You were once in darkness, but now you are light in the Lord. Live as children of light, for light produces every kind of goodness and righteousness and truth.”

Through our Lenten discipline, God will remove the darkness in our lives, and help us to respond in faith and love to the Truth about ourselves and our world. Then we will see as God sees!

‘How God loves us’

Dear North Country Catholic reader,

I invite you to ponder the words: “How God loves us!” My pondering reminded me that in times of worry and fear, trial and suffering, we may feel like crying out, as Jesus did on the Cross: “My God, my God, why have you abandoned me?” Still, during our darkness, we remember the gift of God’s boundless love, and we remember that God did not abandon His beloved Son but raised Him from death to glory. God does not abandon us.

During Lent, you can extend this message of hope to those in great need around our world in Africa, Asia, the Pacific Islands, Latin America and Europe. Our baptism into the Catholic faith teaches us that Lent is a time to sacrifice. It is a time to be a witness to our Lord by giving joyfully and reaching out and loving the poor and needy. This Lent, live out your Baptismal call to be Missionary and “witness” to the Lord; turn your heart and mind to Him through prayer, fasting and sacrifice.

I ask that you prayerfully consider the legacy of thePontifical Mission Societies’ foundress Blessed Pauline Jaricot. Born in Lyon in 1799, as the French Revolution was ending, she had a first-hand knowledge of violence and terror. A woman of deep faith and with a missionary heart, she understood at an early age that with daily prayer and regular contributions, she could bring the Gospel to millions despite being unable to travel to the Pope’s Missions. She organized circles of women to offer prayer and weekly sacrifice for the young and growing Church in a distant land – the United States of America. What has the Church that she helped to grow here in America meant to you?

The money needed to support those serving in the Pope’s missions – and help build the Church where it is young and struggling – comes from loving Catholics like you. Thank you for supporting our missionaries. Please be assured of my prayers for you and your family. May this season of reflection, sacrifice, and preparation settle your mind, still your heart, and deepen your faith.

Sincerely yours in Christ,

Sister Mary Ellen Brett, SSJ
Diocesan Director

Support the Works of the Holy Father through the Peter's Pence Collection

Be a sign of mercy.

When Russia invaded Ukraine in February 2022, a humanitarian crisis began for Ukrainians, whose lives were shattered by the violence of war. Many left their homes in eastern cities in Ukraine for cities in the west, such as Lviv, farther from the most intense fighting. From the beginning of the war, the Holy Father pleaded for an end to the violence and expressed his love and concern for the Ukrainian people who were its victims. In solidarity with the victims of war, the papal almoner, Cardinal Konrad Krajewski, made two visits to Ukraine in March 2022. He first visited the cities of Rivne and Zhorivka and other regions directly affected by the early conflict. He returned to Ukraine to celebrate Mass in the cathedral in Lviv and to deliver an ambulance donated by the Holy Father to the Center for Mother and Child Health to assist children displaced by the war.

The Holy Father's charitable outreach to victims of war, migrants and refugees, and the poor affected by illness and natural disasters is supported by contributions to the Peter's Pence Collection. When you participate in the collection, you join Catholics across the globe in supporting the pope's mission of mercy as well as the activities of the Holy See's dicasteries that assist his ministry.

Support for such papal efforts is rooted in the scriptural message to take care of the poor and expresses unity with the Holy Father in two ways through the ongoing activities of the Holy See and through the charitable works of the Holy Father on behalf of those most in need.

How You Can Help

PRAY
Pray for the Holy Father, for those he reaches out to serve in compassion, and for the ongoing activities of the Holy See, all of which benefit from the Peter’s Pence Collection.

SHARE

GIVE
