Preparing ‘our summer home’ for the season

Summer is almost here, and with it comes another great season at Camp Guggenheim for youth, families, parishes and organizations.

It takes a lot of work to get the Guggenheim Center ready for the camp season. To accomplish that work, the annual Guggenheim Clean-Up Days are scheduled to run from noon on May 19 to 2 p.m. on May 21.

A variety of tasks will be completed. Come for the weekend or come for a few hours.

KNOWING PLACES & GOING PLACES

On April 19, the students of St. Mary’s School in Ticonderoga participated in a school-wide Geography Bee. There were three competing groups, separated by grade levels. Winners included James DeFranco, Nicholas Giordano, Tony Francis, Lauren Taylor, Rowan Pressley, Bradley Phinney, Daniel Jebb and Julio Alfon (not pictured). Students won cash prizes, t-shirts, medals, globe stress balls and certificates. The Geography Bee was sponsored by the Knights of Columbus Council #333.

Pope ahead of Youth Day: ‘See you in Lisbon’

By Hannah Brockhaus
Catholic News Agency

Pope Francis has sent a video message to the teens and young adults preparing to attend World Youth Day in Lisbon, Portugal, in August.

“I’ll see you in Lisbon,” he said, according to an English translation of the message, delivered in Spanish. The message was published on the Vatican’s YouTube page on May 4, just under three months before the Aug. 1-6 international gathering.

“Dear young people, you are getting ready for World Youth Day,” Pope Francis said. “There are three months to go. I can imagine the things you must have on your mind… how you’re going to: make it happen, request your work or study permit, get what you need for your trip, so many concerns, but always looking towards that horizon, that dream.”

“To participate in WYD is something beautiful,” he said. “Prepare yourselves with that enthusiasm. Put hope in that. Have hope… because one grows a lot at an event like WYD.”

World Youth Day was established by Pope John Paul II in 1985. The weeklong gathering usually attracts hundreds of thousands of young people.

Pope Francis said the Portuguese capital would host the global Catholic gathering of young people at the closing Mass of the last international World Youth Day in Panama City in January 2019.

The event is typically held on a different continent every three years, with the presence of the pope. In 2020, the Vatican announced that World Youth Day would be postponed by one year due to the COVID-19 pandemic.

Lisbon, a city of 505,000 people, is about 75 miles from Fatima, one of the most visited Marian pilgrimage sites in the world. A report on “European Young Adults and Religion,” published in 2018, found that Portugal has one of the highest levels of weekly Mass attendance among young people in Europe.

In his video, Pope Francis shared “a secret” to preparing well for World Youth Day.

“To prepare well, it’s good to look towards your roots,” he said, encouraging young people to spend time with the elderly before the gathering.

“Many of you have grandparents. Visit your grandparents and ask them: ‘In your time did World Youth Day exist?’ — Surely not. ‘And what do you think I must do?’ Talk a little with your grandparents. They’ll give you wisdom.”
When worlds collide

“It feels like different worlds are colliding.”

I remember saying that sentence to my husband the day we were married. It had nothing to do with our wedding/merriage, though. It was something that happened after.

Our wedding reception was held at a banquet facility that had a small, attached hotel. All the hotel rooms were booked for the wedding party and out-of-town guests, friends from our high school/college years.

After the reception, the fun didn’t stop. In the hotel, card games started. Music was playing. All our friends - my friends from high school, my friends from college and my husband’s friends - together, laughing and having a good time.

Gratitude for our deacons

Today, I would like to tell you about a friend of mine, one of my favorite people. His name is Elliott Shaw. Elliott was a permanent deacon of the Diocese of Ogdensburg. He served as a deacon at St. Mary’s Parish, Ticonderoga. Elliott was the deacon at St. Mary’s when I was pastor there.

Ticonderoga was home for Deacon Elliott. He and his wife, Peg, made their home there and raised their children there. Elliott worked at the paper plant. He also gave time coaching youth baseball in the village. He was involved in many community activities. Elliott was dedicated to his Catholic faith, and he was deeply involved in the life of his parish. So, when the opportunity arose, he entered the program preparing to become permanent deacons in the Catholic Church. He was ordained a deacon and served many years as the deacon for St. Mary’s Parish.

I know well that Elliott was an excellent deacon. He was a constant help for me as the parish’s pastor. Elliott knew everyone in the parish; Ticonderoga and St. Mary’s were his home base. He knew all about the village and all that had happened there. He knew all our parish families and often helped me determine the needs of the parish.

Many times, as Elliott and I would prepare to celebrate a funeral Mass for a parishioner, he would tell me something about this person. I remember that I often used one of his stories about this person as a part of my funeral message. I depended on Elliott often, especially when I was away from the parish for some reason. He was always ready to stand with a family when they needed support in a crisis.

Elliott is now deceased. I’m thinking about him today because on the Fifth Sunday of Easter, the first reading at the Mass, taken from the Acts of the Apostles, describes the choosing of the first deacons in the early Church. Seven deacons were chosen to assist the apostles in their ministry to the early Christian Community. We are even told the names of those first deacons: Stephen, Philip, Prochorus, Nicanor, Timon, Parmenius and Nicolas.

Acts of the Apostles continues to tell us Stephen’s story. Stephen taught very publicly about Jesus and his message. This disturbed the Jewish leaders. Stephen was arrested and then stoned to death. Stephen is remembered as the first martyr of our Catholic Church. Today, St. Stephen stands as a powerful example for today’s permanent deacons.

I remember well when the Second Vatican Council called for the reinstatement of the permanent diaconate. For many centuries, the Catholic Church eliminated the permanent diaconate from the clergy of our Church. In those days, the diaconate was for transitional deacons - those deacons preparing to become priests. We still have transitional deacons, however, the Council has now called for permanent deacons to serve in the parishes of our Church.

Now I want to take the opportunity to tell you how impressed I am with the many permanent deacons we have serving in the parishes throughout our diocese. These deacons assist at the parish liturgies, but they also are important leaders of parish activities. Our deacons have been trained well as preachers of the Word of God. They are called upon often to present homilies at Mass.

The ordination of permanent deacons has been a most important development in our Catholic Church. These deacons come from many different careers in business, in teaching, in all sorts of areas of work. They come to the diaconate with so many wonderful gifts. And finally, they are prepared by a great program by the Church.

Let me tell you one other important value that many permanent deacons have: they are married. I believe this brings to their ministry as deacons another gift that adds understanding to their ministry. I want to offer my gratitude to our many dedicated deacons who have accepted so much to become part of the life of our parishes.
Called to ministry? Formation starting soon

By Jessica Hargrave
Contributing Writer

We are all called to ministry by our baptism. Whether we are baptized as infants or as adults, we are always in the process of formation. The Church helps us to understand our call to ministry in many ways. The Diocese of Ogdensburg’s Formation for Ministry program offers adults the chance to grow in their faith and use their gifts to help serve ministry in their parishes. The 2023-25 cycle is now taking registrations.

Through a partnership with Boston College, the diocese offers the two-year program online except for in-person workshops and retreats twice a year. The courses explore the core foundations of the Catholic Faith including the Eucharist, the history of the Church, and Catholic social teaching, which opens meaningful discussion amongst program candidates and the instructor.

The current two-year cycle wraps up with 19 candidates being commissioned as lay ministers on Sunday, June 25. Jayme St. Croix is one of those candidates hoping to bring his gifts to youth ministry at Our Lady of the Sacred Heart Church in Watertown. He believes an internal push and influences from his past called him to the program.

“I grew up and was gracefully influenced by the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart and the Sisters of St. Joseph,” he said. “As we all know, their numbers are decreasing, and someone needs to step up and help our Church as they have for so many decades.”

St. Croix remembers his time as a child in youth groups at Sacred Heart, where he and his peers took part in community service projects and youth Masses while also having fun on group trips and at organized dances. Once commissioned, he hopes to establish more activities in the parish for kids to both enjoy and grow in faith. St. Croix, who currently teaches Sunday school, says the program can also give candidates more confidence when talking about their Catholic faith.

“I have really enjoyed this opportunity to not only share my faith but to encourage my students to do the same,” he said. “I would encourage anyone to take advantage of the Formation for Ministry Program as our future needs more leaders and this is a perfect place to start.”

A growing trend in recent years has been more married couples going through Formation for Ministry together. Kitty Samuels of Massena had considered the program for some time, so when she saw the bulletin announcement in the summer of 2021, she knew this was the time. But her husband, James, was still on the fence despite their pastor encouraging them to go through it together. It was a trip to Colorado that had James thinking more about Formation for Ministry. He asked Kitty to check if it was too late for him to sign up.

“I wanted to know more about the faith and the potential roles I could play in the Church,” he said.

Now nearly two years later, James and Kitty agree that going on this journey together has deepened their respect and admiration for one another. They are hoping to bring more joy and prayer to the Outreach Ministry they already are a part of within St. Peter’s Parish.

“Formation for Ministry has confirmed in me that I need to walk by faith in all I do for others and let God’s love shine through me,” said Kitty.

Ideally, a commissioned lay minister has developed the spiritual life and skills necessary to become more involved in parish life by the end of the program. Formation for Ministry Director Cathy Russell explains that with pastors stretched so thin these days, lay ministers have an opportunity to do and be more in their parish.

“For example, a minister might take communion to shut-ins,” she said. “Instead of just a quick visit, a commissioned lay minister has learned how to talk to shut-ins, how to perhaps follow up with a family member, and pray with the person. This is one way the lay minister takes a little of the work off the pastor’s shoulders.”

Before enrolling, Russell suggests talking with your pastor for guidance on possible ministry opportunities. If your pastor agrees your gifts are needed contact Russell at crussell@rcdony.org or call (315) 393-2920.

‘Hope to grow in understanding and effectiveness’

By Jessica Hargrave

Applications are already coming in for the 2023-2025 Formation for Ministry program. Arthur Ward, a parishioner with St. Philip Neri Church in Westport, will be a new lay ministry candidate when the program starts this September.

Ward said he is eager for this chance to walk closer with Jesus on his spiritual journey, while also stepping up to fill a need for more parishioner participation at St. Philip Neri.

“I hope to grow in understanding and effectiveness; understanding for myself to better navigate God’s path as it is being set before me, and the effectiveness to guide others to discern God’s grace and guidance in their own lives,” he said.

Ward added the program will not only expand on his ministry in the parish, but also professionally. He is currently an Alcoholism and Substance Counselor working with the New York State Department of Corrections and Community Supervision. He hopes participating in the Formation for Ministry program will provide the tools he’ll need to one day move into a spiritual advisor role as a chaplain.

“Communicating hope within a prison to incarcerated individuals and fellow employees is how I see my work,” he said. “When anyone anywhere, reaches out for help, I want to be a helping hand.”
Trinity honors volunteers

April is National Volunteer Month, and Trinity Catholic School in Massena celebrated the volunteers on Tuesday, April 18.

During a Morning Prayer Service, the school community recognized those who fill in where extra hands are needed, including as room parents, cafeteria workers, advancement helpers, PE experts, craft makers, PTC committee members and more!

The Volunteers of the Year were also announced and are Joanne Kellogg and Amy LaPointe!

Mrs. Kellogg has been involved with Trinity for more than 35 years! She's a proud grandparent of a first grader and is seen around the school several times a week.

Miss LaPointe is also seen around the school often, whether helping the students in the dining hall, or helping in PreK4.

The theme of the celebration was centered around the ocean, and more specifically a starfish.

This comes from a story by Loren Eiseley about a boy throwing a starfish back into the ocean. The boy is confronted by an adult who tells him he’s wasting his time because he can’t save them all.

The boy’s response is that he can make a difference to the ones he saved.

Trinity’s volunteers make a difference, and the school community thanks them for their service.

Parish cemetery gets $6,000 grant

St. Andrew’s Calvary Cemetery in Norwood has been awarded a grant of $6,000 from the Rock Charitable Fund, a component of the Northern New York Community Foundation.

The grant will pay for a designated support for the stone foundations from the late 1800s and early 1900s in Calvary Cemetery.

Father Shane Lynch, pastor of St. Andrew’s Church, noted that the parish is grateful to the Rock Charitable Fund and the Northern New York Community Foundation for their support for this project.

The Rock Charitable Fund was established through a bequest from St. Lawrence County resident and retired Lieutenant Colonel of the United States Army Marjorie J. Rock, who passed away in February 2017 at the age of 96.

The fund’s charitable purpose has three focus areas: for the maintenance and preservation of churches and cemeteries in St. Lawrence County; for the preservation and maintenance of places of legitimate historical significance in the county; and to benefit and/or assist veterans of the United States military who reside in St. Lawrence County.

Grant funding is awarded annually to qualified nonprofit organizations whose missions and efforts align with the fund’s objectives.

Since 1929, the Northern New York Community Foundation has invested in improving and enriching the quality of life for all in communities across Jefferson, Lewis and St. Lawrence counties.

Through partnerships with businesses and organizations, charitable foundations, and generous families and individual donors, the Community Foundation awards grants and scholarships from an endowment and collection of funds that benefit the region. Its commitment to donors helps individuals achieve their charitable objectives now and for generations to come by preserving and honoring legacies of community philanthropy while inspiring others.

Environmental Stewardship

Can you see it?

One of the antiphons during the Easter Season tells us: “The world is charged with the grandeur of God, alleluia!” Amidst all the pain and suffering we hear and may be experiencing, the Easter Season calls us to see the grandeur of God unfolding around us and among us.

In the book of Judith, we read: “I sing my God a fresh new song… Let all creation bend to you; you spoke and they took shape. You breathed; they came alive.” (Judith 16:13-14) How we begin the day may set the tone for it. How might it be different if before we turn on the news, we begin our day like Judith, looking within us and around us to God’s love breathing life into us and all of creation? If we witness the wonder of the paschal mystery of life, death and new life, the miracle of the paschal mystery will abound. We witness this in our bodies as the cells of our skin renew each day. We witness it in the earth as the flowers and trees burst forth in buds and beautiful blossoms soon to die so seeds and fruit may come forth. We witness the paschal mystery unfolding in the lives of the early disciples. Amidst great suffering and persecution, they focused on the new life of Christ. Some of their beliefs had to die in order for the new ways of Jesus’ teaching to take root.

What about us? Can we see the paschal mystery of life, death and new life present in this moment? When we can discover the grandeur of God in this Easter Season, we may find the energy and grace of the Spirit to change what is causing the pain and suffering today and experience new life. Whether it is in planting a garden or a tree, eating healthier or assisting a ‘neighbor’ near or far, new life will emerge.

Vermont to offer assisted suicide to non-residents

By Joe Bukuras
Catholic News Agency

Republican Gov. Phil Scott of Vermont signed a bill Tuesday allowing non-residents to avail themselves of the state's assisted suicide law.

Vermont legalized assisted suicide in 2013, but with this new law became the first state in the nation to change its legislation to allow the life-ending procedure to those living out of state, according to the Associated Press.

Oregon stopped enforcing its residency requirement for assisted suicide in 2022 but has not enshrined that provision in law.

Earlier this year Vermont reached a settlement with a Connecticut woman who had sued the state over its residency requirement for assisted suicide.

According to the Vermont Department of Health, assisted suicide is available for those "suffering from an incurable and irreversible disease" that will end the patient's life within six months.

After a doctor determines death is imminent, a patient must make an oral and written request for the lethal dosage. There must be two people over the age of 18 who sign the written request as witnesses to affirm that "the patient appeared to understand the nature of the document and to be free from duress or undue influence at the time the request was signed," the law says.

Participation in assisted suicide by any physician, nurse, or pharmacist must be "completely voluntary," according to the state's Department of Health.

Burlington Bishop Christopher Coyne told CNA in a statement Wednesday that palliative care is the best way to help those who are suffering.

"While the Catholic Church believes in the sanctity of all life from conception to natural death, we also understand the necessity to alleviate the pain of those dealing with terminal illness. Palliative care provides relief from a variety of symptoms for people living with serious illnesses while addressing the spiritual and emotional concerns of individuals and their loved ones. This holistic care focuses on the whole person - mind, body, and spirit. Assisted suicide does not," he said.

"In a society in which we are dealing with an epidemic of loneliness, we need to be with those who are often alone in their suffering. It is important to acknowledge the pain of the person who is suffering from a terminal illness. We must support them, care for them, and accompany them along their journey from life in this world into the next," Coyne said.

"In 2013, Bishop Matano, my predecessor, called the passage of this bill 'A tragic moment in the rich history of our state.' I echo his sentiment with this new legislation which removes a residency requirement and expands access to assisted suicide," he said.

Ten states and Washington, D.C., have legalized assisted suicide, and 12 states are considering legislation.

In 2015, the state Legislature signed a bill mandating the Department of Health to make a biennial report of assisted suicide statistics.

Twenty-nine people sought assisted suicide from July 1, 2019, to June 30, 2021, according to the Vermont Department of Health's 2022 report. The report said not all 29 filled the prescription though. The department uses an electronic data system to collect information about prescriptions.

Archbishop condemns rule allowing abortion at VA centers

After the U.S. Senate approved a Department of Defense rule that provides for abortions at the department's medical centers, the archbishop of military services issued a scathing letter condemning the Senate and the Biden administration. The Senate voted 51-48 to affirm the new rule, which ensures VA medical centers provide abortion when the life or health of the mother is deemed to be at risk or in cases of rape or incest, regardless of state restrictions. The VA will also offer abortion counseling at medical centers. The rule does not have any conscience protections for doctors or other health care workers who object to providing abortions. In a pastoral letter, Archbishop Timothy P. Broglio, who also serves as president of the United States Conference of Catholic Bishops, said he was "deeply saddened" by the Senate's action. Broglio also condemned a Department of Defense policy that provides taxpayer funding for employees, spouses, and dependents to cover travel costs associated with procuring an abortion in another state if they are stationed in a state with abortion restrictions.

Archdiocese asks Vatican to investigate possible miracle

The Archdiocese of Hartford is appealing to the Vatican for guidance on how to proceed with its investigation of a possible eucharistic miracle at St. Thomas Catholic Church in Thomaston, Connecticut. The referral is the first public update by the archdiocese since it was first reported in late March that Jesus, truly present in the holy Eucharist, appeared to multiply himself in the ciborium, typically a gold chalice that holds the eucharistic body of Christ. "Reports such as the alleged miracle in Thames­ton require referral to the Diocasy for the Doctrine of the Faith in Rome. The archdiocese has proceeded accordingly and will await a response in due time," David Elliott, a spokesman for the archdiocese, told CNA Thursday. It's unclear how long the dicastery could take to respond to the archdiocese's request, Elliott told CNA.

We worship in Word and Sacrament

Preachers at Catholic Mass are trained to help folks understand the scripture readings. We who preach hope to illuminate the scripture heard at Mass, so those readings and the various scripture-based prayers are relevant. There are various techniques used by the homilist to grab and win the listener's attention. Some tell stories, some tell a joke or two, there might be a glimpse of the preacher's past or an encounter he had once upon a time.

All the aforementioned should tie-in somehow with the readings. They don't always, but maybe the preacher just heard a joke he thought he should share.

The Catechism of the Catholic Church defines homily in its glossary as “Preaching by an ordained minister to explain the Scriptures proclaimed in the liturgy and to exhort the people to accept them as the Word of God.” There is a presumption in that definition that the folks in the pew heard, listened to and absorbed the scripture read by the lector and the Gospel proclaimed by the deacon, or if there is no deacon, a priest.

There's a lot of faith built into that presumption. That's why I think a lot of energy should be expended in preparing readers of scripture.

It is my privilege to teach homiletics to men preparing for the diaconate. I tell permanent deacon aspirants in their first year of public speaking and homiletics training that the lectors in their parish should be their friends and students. Their success as a preacher, I argue, depends on the lector's ability to read the Word of God clearly, distinctly and coherently.

If the lector does not understand the scripture being shared, the hearer will not receive the scripture passage as God intended and the preacher ends up trying to deliver a message that is doomed from the start.

Most lectors in our churches are scheduled to read. Since they know when it ‘their turn,’ lectors should be required to read the scripture will proclaim at least once or twice in the days before the Mass.

If pronunciation of a person or place is a problem, the lector should swallow her or his pride and ask a priest or deacon for the proper pronunciation.

All lectors should be familiar with the readings of the Mass they will attend even if they are not scheduled.

Reading at Mass is a privilege, but it has some responsibilities too. The lector needs to understand that his/her ministry will help the priest or deacon preacher and ultimately help everyone in attendance.

It also cuts down on the mistakes. Like reading the wrong text, or mispronouncing those difficult Old Testament names and some in the New Testament. My favorite is “A reading from Paul's letter to the Colostomies.”

We all snickered but the poor lector didn’t even know she said what she did. Kind of ruined the reading though.

Prayers for peace in Colombia

May 3 in Colombia and other Spanish speaking countries (such as Spain, Chile, Ecuador, El Salvador, Guatemala, Mexico, Paraguay, Peru, Argentina and Venezuela), the Feast of the Holy Cross (La Fiesta de las Cruces or Cruz de Mayo) is celebrated. In Colombia, this liturgical feast has been associated with the National Day of Prayer for reconciliation and peace in the country since 2018. During Pope Francis’ visit to the Latin American country in 2017, which had the theme “Let’s take the first step,” he emphasized the importance of contributing to peace, taking spiritual aspects into account to promote forgiveness and reconciliation despite the wounds of decades of conflict with all its social, cultural, economic and political consequences.

In his video message for the visit, Pope Francis explained: “Taking the first step encourages us to go out to meet the other, to reach out our hand and to exchange a sign of peace. Peace is what Colombia is looking for and has long been working to achieve. A stable, lasting peace, so that we can see and treat each other as brothers and sisters, not as enemies.”

The archbishop of Bogotá and president of the Bishops’ Conference of Colombia, Luis José Rueda Aparicio, proposed three concrete ways of celebrating this day: “First, place the cross in a visible place in your home, as if to say that your home, your family, is a place and school of true reconciliation in Jesus Christ Second: Make gestures of reconciliation to the people in your work and study environment. Third: On May 3rd, let us pray that Colombia will find ways of reconciliation and that all humanity encounters Jesus Christ, who reconciles us to the Father and makes us instruments of reconciliation, peace and new life.”

“[Peace] is necessary,” the bishops emphasize, “because a war-weary society demands it. It is the responsibility of everyone, since it is a collective work which requires acknowledging the mistakes of the past and making concrete commitments in the present. The Church in Colombia resolutely and courageously renews her option for reconciliation and peace, trusting in the power of the Spirit, the values of the Gospel and the goodness of the Colombian people.” – Article from FIDES missionary news service of the Pontifical Mission Societies.

Dear Friends in Christ:

It is so fitting that our annual Catholic Charities Appeal takes place on Mother’s Day weekend. A mother’s boundless love and care for her children is expressed in a lifetime of self-giving. Every year at this time, we depend on such generous hearts as this local Church reaches out to care for the hurting through Catholic Charities.

Led by Deacon Patrick Donahue and his staff, Catholic Charities in the Diocese of Ogdensburg continues to provide many programs and services to individuals and families in our North Country. This outreach of advocacy and direct service brings a ray of hope to the many who feel overwhelmed, neglected and/or abandoned in our troubled world.

For generations, our Catholic Charities ministries have been supported with prayer and financial assistance from this annual Appeal, enabling us, as disciples in mission, to live the Gospel mandate to love our neighbor. This year’s Appeal will take place in all our parishes on the weekend of May 13-14, 2023.

Your generous contributions help us serve the needy through our food pantries, housing for the homeless, migrant outreach, parenting education, counseling and financial assistance, among other supportive efforts.

Thank you for your giving heart and continuing the work of Christ on earth through Catholic Charities. To all our moms—Happy Mother’s Day!

Gratefully yours in Christ,

Most Reverend Terry R. LaValley
Bishop of Ogdensburg

May 2023

Dear Supporters of Catholic Charities,

With Mother’s Day around the corner, we cannot express enough gratitude for the incredible support you have shown us throughout the past year. Your generosity has made it possible for us to continue our efforts to serve our community during these difficult times. This special day is an opportunity to recognize and celebrate the fierce and protective nature of mothers everywhere. Just as mothers protect and care for their children, Catholic Charities, Diocese of Ogdensburg, works tirelessly to protect and care for those in need.

For many years, Catholic Charities has provided a safety net for those who are struggling and ensure that they have the resources they need to thrive. However, our current times of post-pandemic and job loss, have brought about new challenges and hardships for many families in our community. We have seen a significant increase in the number of people who are turning to us for assistance, and our resources are being exhausted rapidly. This is where your support can make a real difference.

Your donation to Catholic Charities, Diocese of Ogdensburg, will enable us to reach more vulnerable families and individuals who are struggling to make ends meet. Our programs provide vital services such as food and shelter for the homeless, assistance with healthcare and education, and support for seniors and individuals with disabilities. By donating, you are helping us continue our work and ensure that those in need, receive the care and support they deserve.

In honor of Mother’s Day and the spirit of fierce determination, consider making a gift to Catholic Charities and allows us to continue making the world a better place. Together, we can make a difference in the lives of members of our community that need it most.

Thank you for your kindness and generosity.

With Gratitude,

Deacon Patrick J. Donahue, LMSW, D. Min
Executive Director

Wishing a very Happy Mother’s Day to all the amazing mothers and mother figures in our community. Your love, guidance, and sacrifice are appreciated more than words can express. Thank you for everything that you do!
