Chapter 11 reorganization

On Monday, July 17, the Diocese of Ogdensburg filed for Chapter 11 reorganization. “This difficult and painful yet necessary decision was made in response to the lawsuits filed against the diocese under the Child Victims Act,” Bishop Terry R. LaValley said in a pastoral letter. “I again apologize for the suffering caused by child sexual abuse by priests and other church personnel. I am sorry for the suffering endured by survivors and their families. I remain committed to helping victims find hope, healing and some peace of mind. I remain equally committed to maintaining a safe environment in our Church for all, especially our children and young people.”

Pope asks parents to sow faith in children

At the Angelus on Sunday, July 16, Pope Francis reflected on the parable of the sower and encouraged parents not to give in to “fashions” of the world and to continue to sow goodness and faith in their children.

From the window of the Vatican Apostolic Palace, the Holy Father explained that “if the word is the seed, we are the soil: We can receive it or not. But Jesus, the ‘good sower,’ does not tire of sowing it generously,” he said.

“He knows our terrain, he knows that the stones of our inconstancy and the thorns of our vices can suffocate the word, yet he hopes, he always hopes that we can bear abundant fruit,” the pontiff noted.

In this sense, he remarked, the faithful are also called to “sow tirelessly,” and he gave three examples of how to do this, addressing parents, young people, and “the sowers” of the Gospel, such as priests and religious.

First, he stressed that parents “sow goodness and faith in their children, and they are called to do so without being discouraged even if at times they seem not to understand or to appreciate their teachings, or if the mentality of the world is against them.”

The good seed remains,” he continued. “This is what counts, and it will take root in due time. But if, giving in to mistrust, they give up sowing and leave their children at the mercy of fashions and mobile phones, without dedicating time to them, without educating them, then the fertile soil will be filled with weeds. Parents, never tire to sow in your children!”

He then addressed young people and explained that they “can sow the Gospel in the furrows of everyday life,” as in prayer, “a small seed that you cannot see, but with which you entrust everything you live to Jesus, and so he can make it ripen.”

“But I am also thinking of the time to dedicate to others, to those most in need: It may seem wasted; instead, it is holy time, while the apparent satisfactions of consumerism and hedonism leave one empty-handed,” he said.

He also said that study “is tiring and not immediately satisfying, like sowing, but is essential to build a better future for all.”

Finally, he spoke of the “sowers of the Gospel” – priests, religious, and laypeople who are “engaged in proclamation” – “who live and preach the word of God often without immediate success.”
It’s always changing

The sacrament of penance is also called reconciliation. In faith, we seek reconciliation with God the Father, so we go to confession. This sacrament is an important part of Catholic spirituality. The Gospels tell us that Jesus spoke often of God the Father’s great love for us all—a love that leads to forgiveness of sins. Today, I would like to share with you some of my thoughts about confession.

I believe that the experience of confession should be a joyful experience. I encourage you to recognize that confession must be a very positive experience. This sacrament of penance is about conversion—a change in life, a plan for the future. The ritual of confession demands a good preparation for a penitent. Let us talk about this.

Do you remember how Jesus welcomed Peter back into friendship when they met after the Lord’s resurrection? Remember, Peter had denied even knowing Jesus during the Lord’s arrest and crucifixion. Now Jesus wants to welcome Peter back into a close relationship. He takes Peter aside and asks him three times, “Peter, do you love me?” Jesus wanted Peter to realize how important it was that despite his denials, Jesus realized that Peter truly loved the Lord and wanted to have a good relationship with him. He could accept Peter’s failings.

I believe that each person preparing for confession is asked this same question by Jesus. “Do you love me?” “Are you still a good person despite your failings?” Jesus still loves us. We must renew our relationship with the Lord. So, do you still love God? Do you want to be in a good relationship with God? Each time we come to confession seeking forgiveness, we must begin by declaring our love for the Lord. We want to make our friendship with the Lord alive and strong. If our Lord for the Lord is not all it should be, then our confession may be meaningless.

Next, we must take time for a prayer of gratitude. Gratitude for God’s blessings throughout our lives and gratitude for God’s forgiveness. This time for gratitude opens our hearts so we realize how loved we are by our God. So, we must begin to examine our conscience to realize our failings, our sins and all that keeps us from the love our God and Savior has for each one of us. We must realize that must be changed.

So, now is the time for a plan. Confession is all about a plan and about the changes that must be made in the future. As a confessor, I hear confessions of sin. Each time, I want to say to the person, “So, what are you going to do about all this.” Forgiveness must be the beginning of some changes, of a new life. Here is the Lord challenging a penitent to become a new person. All the prayers, as well as the absolution of forgiveness, seek God’s love and support that a person finds God’s help for the future.

After the ritual of confession comes a most important time for the forgiven penitent to open his or her heart to seek the presence of God, seeking the support and loving presence of the Holy Spirit into our hearts. I encourage a time of silence before the Lord to allow our Lord and Savior to lead and guide us.

This sacrament of penance is important for all Catholics. It is a transformative moment. Many tell me they do not know just what to say to the priest confessor in confession. I suggest honesty.

I do want you to remember that the seal of the confessional is the most important of the many promises that a priest makes. As a confessor, I know offering the gift of forgiveness is a huge privilege. I am always ready to talk about any situation that is brought up in confession. Finally, I pray that you all find peace and joy in this important sacrament of penance.
Dear Sisters and Brothers in Christ,

Peace and grace be with you! Today, I write to share some important news and to seek your prayers and support. After extensive consultation with diocesan staff, the Council of Priests, College of Consultants, Diocesan Finance Council, Diocesan Pastoral Council, the priests, deacons, pastoral leaders of the diocese, and outside legal and financial advisors, I have authorized the filing of a Chapter 11 reorganization for the Roman Catholic Diocese of Ogdensburg. This difficult and painful yet necessary decision was made in response to the lawsuits filed against the diocese under the Child Victims Act.

I again apologize for the suffering caused by child sexual abuse by priests and other church personnel. I am sorry for the suffering endured by survivors and their families. I remain committed to helping victims find hope, healing and some peace of mind. I remain equally committed to maintaining a safe environment in our Church for all, especially our children and young people.

Between August 2019 and August 2021, when the Child Victims Act window was open, 138 lawsuits, previously barred by the statute of limitations, were filed against the diocese, parishes and other related Catholic entities. These lawsuits relate to incidents that allegedly happened decades ago, prior to the institution of our current safe environment policies and procedures. We are surprised at the number of claims that have been filed, but even one incident of abuse is too many. While we have been in litigation for almost three years, the merit of the claims and amount needed to resolve them has not yet been determined. In the past three years we have been able to resolve 14 claims by settlement or dismissal, and we have come to realize that reorganization is the best context for resolving the remaining claims while continuing our mission as a diocese.

Without filing for reorganization, the Diocese would face these civil actions in a slow, unpredictable, and costly process that would require years of court involvement. Such lengthy lawsuits would delay justice for survivors and prolong their suffering. Reorganization ensures that each survivor receives just compensation. It eliminates a race to the courthouse in which the earliest cases settled or brought to judgement could exhaust the resources available to pay claims, leaving nothing for victims whose cases are resolved later. Filing for reorganization does not hinder claims filed by victims of sexual abuse. Rather, it establishes a process for all claims to be treated fairly. Reorganization enables the diocese to resolve the claims in one court in an efficient and timely manner.

Filing for reorganization allows the diocese to continue its programs, services, and ministries. It allows us to continue to pay our employees and retirees. We must continue to focus on our relationships with Christ while resolving the claims that have been filed. With the help of our advisors, we will evaluate diocesan assets to determine how we can maintain our mission while seeking to compensate victims fairly. We will continue our mission.

As a diocese, we have worked in a serious and determined manner to reach out to survivors of child sexual abuse, and we have developed safe environment policies and procedures that keep our young people safe. We have instituted policies and procedures to prevent abuse from happening. We have addressed allegations responsibly and promptly when they have been raised. I continue to be available to meet with victims, and we continue to offer support and assistance to those who have been so terribly hurt by this tragedy.

In New York, parishes and other entities are separate corporations. Only the diocese will file for reorganization. However, it is our hope that this reorganization will resolve all claims against the parishes and other related Catholic entities along with those against the diocese. It is likely that parishes will be asked to contribute funds to settle these claims so they can be free of litigation in state courts and released from all liability for existing claims.

As I stated above, a goal of the reorganization is to help us continue our mission. We will continue to serve God’s people and spread the Gospel in the North Country. In order to do so we need your prayers and continued support. Funds from our recent capital campaign were designated for specific parish and diocesan projects, and it is our intention to use those gifts for their intended purpose. The Bishop’s Fund Appeal supports essential ministries in our diocese, including the education of seminarians, Camp Guggenheim, the Good Samaritan Fund, and the training of lay ministers, priests, and deacons. It is our intent to use the donations to the Bishops’ Fund Appeal to continue these essential ministries.

For additional information on reorganization, please visit our diocesan website: www.rcdny.org/reorganization.

As we embark on this journey towards reorganization, I ask you to join me in prayer for all victims of child sexual abuse. May this process give them a sense of peace and bring them healing that comes from God alone. I also ask you to pray for our diocese. Please pray for me, my brother priests, deacons, consecrated religious, and all who work to spread the Good News in the North Country. May we be united in our resolve to reach out to victims of sexual abuse with compassion, and to renew our commitment to serve God and neighbor.

Faithfully yours in Christ,
Most Reverend Terry R. LaValley

Bishop of Ogdensburg

A PRAYER FOR HEALING

Gentle Jesus, Shepherd of Peace, Join to your own suffering The pain of all who have been hurt In body, mind, and spirit By those who betrayed the trust placed in them.

Hear the cries of our sisters and brothers who have been gravely harmed, and the cries of those who love them. Soothe their restless hearts with hope and steady their shaken spirits with faith.

Grant them justice enlightened by your truth. Holy Spirit, heal your people’s wounds. Grant us the courage and wisdom to act with justice. Breathe wisdom into our prayers and labors.

Grant that all harmed by abuse may find peace. Look kindly on the Church of Ogdensburg. Touch our hearts with humble trust in Your constant care and loving Providence. We ask this through Christ our Risen Lord.

AMEN.
Reorganization: Frequently asked questions

What is a Chapter 11 reorganization?
Chapter 11 reorganization is an action undertaken voluntarily by an entity to allow it to reorganize financially. The goal of reorganization is to respond to the claims of creditors and to emerge with its operations intact so the diocese can continue its mission. Reorganization immediately stops all efforts to collect debts and all legal actions against the entity. Chapter 11 does not mean the Diocese is going out of business or is insolvent.

Why is the diocese seeking reorganization under Chapter 11 now?
As a result of the New York State Child Victim Act, the Diocese is currently facing 124 claims of sexual abuse of a minor, all dating back decades. Litigation costs and settlements would likely exceed many millions of dollars. The Diocese simply does not have the resources to settle or litigate these claims.

What if the Diocese didn't file for reorganization?
The Diocese would face 124 civil actions, which would require years of court involvement. Claimants who resolve their claims first would receive all funds available to pay survivors. As a result, later claimants would receive little or nothing. Most importantly, these lengthy proceedings would delay justice for victims, prolonging their pain and suffering.

How will a reorganization affect victims' rights to their day in court?
Without reorganization, the Diocese would continue to face multiple civil actions; a slow, unpredictable, time-consuming and costly process that would require years of court involvement. Most significantly, such lengthy lawsuits would delay justice for the survivors and only prolong their pain and suffering. In reorganization, all claims are resolved in one court where all survivors’ claims can be heard and be given due consideration while allowing the Diocese to continue to fulfill its day-to-day ministries to the people of Northern New York.

How is filing for reorganization fair to abuse victims?
As part of our ministry, the Diocese desires to respond to the claims of survivors in a way that acknowledges their suffering and helps them find some sense of peace. Reorganization ensures survivors are treated fairly. Without such a filing, large awards or settlements for cases that move through the legal system early could exhaust available resources and leave little or nothing for survivors whose cases move through the legal system later. Reorganization is fairer to all.

What does the Chapter 11 filing mean for parishes?
It is our sincere hope and prayer that the process to resolve claims will have minimal effect on the celebration of sacraments and regular parish life. Some parishes have been directly sued under the CVA, and that does create the potential for some parish liability. While we hope to keep parish involvement to a minimum, it is likely all parishes will be asked to contribute to funds which will be available to address survivors’ claims.

What does this mean for Catholic schools?
Some schools also have been sued under the CVA. Therefore, there is a potential for liability for such schools. However, we hope to resolve claims against the schools and parishes through the framework of the diocese’s reorganization plan. It is our sincere hope that this process will have minimal impact on the operation of Catholic schools in the diocese.

Does reorganization mean the Diocese of Ogdensburg is going out of business?
Chapter 11 does not mean that the Diocese of Ogdensburg has run out of money or will cease operations. We remain committed to ensuring we can continue to provide the sacraments and essential ministries. We expect that we can continue our ministries and operations while the reorganization case is pending and successfully emerge from reorganization as a stronger, even more vibrant organization.

Does reorganization mean the diocese can avoid having to release the files of clergy abusers?
Hiding information about abuse cases is not the purpose of reorganization. In a reorganization case, victims, their attorneys, and the court will be able to review documents and information relating to their claims, just like they could outside of reorganization. Documents and information related to claims will be available to victims and their legal teams.

How many claims does the diocese face?
138 CVA lawsuits were filed against the diocese following the August 2019 implementation of the Child Victims Act (CVA) in New York State. Over the last three years, 14 of the claims have been resolved by settlement or dismissal. The CVA allowed individuals who claim they are survivors of sexual abuse to file lawsuits against their abusers and their abusers’ employers regardless of when the alleged abuse took place.

How much will it cost to settle the lawsuits?
Specific dollar figures are not cited in the claims. In the reorganization case, each case is evaluated independently, and a determination is made of how much will be awarded to each survivor. We remain committed to ensuring all survivors are treated justly.

Are my weekly donations to my parish going to pay for settlements?
Your weekly parish donations go first and foremost to support your parish, as well as to provide funding for important ministries of the Diocese that support your parish and serve the faithful of the North Country. While the Diocese reorganizes, these needs continue and can only be met with your financial support.

What about my Bishop’s Fund, Planned Giving and capital campaign contributions? Will they be used for settlements?
The Bishop’s Fund Appeal supports essential ministries in our diocese, including education of seminarians, Camp Guggenheim, the Good Samaritan Fund, the training of lay ministers and deacons and other ministries. These vital ministries rely on the support of the Church in the North Country. It is our intent to use Bishop’s Fund, Planned Giving and capital campaign donations for the essential ministries of the diocese for which they were donated. Funds donated to the capital campaign were designated for specific parish and diocesan projects meant to renovate our Church facilities and programs, and it is our intention to use those funds for their intended purpose.

Will you be laying off employees?
The diocese is determined to fulfill its mission to teach, serve and sanctify. We do not know if it will be necessary to lay off employees as we reorganize. It is not our desire to reduce our workforce. We will try to maintain a satisfactory level of service to our parishes and entities while evaluating the financial realities we face. At the present time, the diocese does not plan to lay off employees as a result of reorganization.

Questions

How will this impact Catholic Charities?

Catholic Charities is a legally incorporated entity separate from the Diocese of Ogdensburg. Catholic Charities provides vital services to individuals and families in need, following Christ’s call to feed the hungry, clothe the naked and heal the sick. As a separate incorporated entity, the ministries and operations of Catholic Charities should not be directly affected by the diocese’s reorganization.

Will you be cutting programs?

We will be working with the courts to evaluate all operations and ensure the diocese continues to conduct its mission of proclaiming Christ and the Gospels to the North Country and serving those in need in the most efficient way possible, while ensuring all debts can be settled and justice can be given to survivors.

Are diocesan retirees in jeopardy of losing their pensions? Will employee salaries or benefits be affected?

In reorganization, it is generally the case that retirement plan assets cannot be used to satisfy debts to creditors or claimants. The diocese plans to take the position in the chapter 11 case that retirement plan assets are not available to satisfy the claims of general creditors. During the chapter 11 case, the Diocese will continue to provide employees and retirees with salaries and benefits.

How does reorganization work?

Chapter 11 is a voluntary action taken by an organization to reorganize financially. It has two principal goals: (a) to respond to the financial claims of those to whom it owes money, and (b) to emerge with its operations intact. A Chapter 11 filing immediately stops all efforts at collection of debts and legal actions against the organization. Chapter 11 does not mean that the organization is going out of business. Under Chapter 11, the organization generally maintains its normal operations and continues to provide employees with salaries and benefits, and retiree benefits. An organization in Chapter 11 continues to carry on its mission.

Up to the challenge?

During the month of July, millions around the world are responding the challenge of Plastic Free July. This is a global social movement that originated in Australia and has inspired over a 100 million people in 190 countries to refuse single-use plastics. It provides resources and ideas to help you to reduce single-use plastic at school, in your home and even at your local café.

As plastic production and waste increases, it is clear we can’t recycle our way out of the problem. We need to “turn off” the plastics tap. Waste avoidance needs to be a critical part of the solution. Some of the benefits include avoiding landfill waste and protecting the oceans; reducing consumption and production; reducing human health impacts by limiting potentially hazardous chemical exposure; connecting communities; and driving systemic change. Using reusable containers instead of single-use is likely to encourage others to do so, as well. Research has demonstrated a strong impact of social norms.

There are a lot of popular changes people are making to reduce plastic waste. Some people are choosing reusable coffee cups, while others are refusing plastic packaging used only once or twice before being thrown in the trash, like zip-lock bags and bubble wrap.

While this challenge began in July, it is an invitation for us to find more ways as Christians to simplify our lifestyle and have lasting effects on our communities. Making a small change in our single-use-plastic habit will collectively make a massive difference to our communities. You can choose to refuse the single-use plastics in July (and beyond!). Plastic Free July can help you find great alternatives that can create new habits forever as you become a better steward of God’s magnificent creation!
A convocation of consecrated virgins

By Mary Beth Bracy, consecrated virgin
Contributing writer

From June 23 to 27, I was blessed to attend the annual gathering of consecrated virgins living in the world. This year the convocation took place in Flagstaff, Arizona at Northern Arizona University. It was like a honeymoon experience for me, as it provided me with some time to go to a “deserted place and rest awhile” (Mark 6:31) following my consecration on April 16. The theme of the convocation was “The Voice of the Bridegroom” (Jeremiah 33:11), reminiscent of the dialogue between the bridegroom and bride in the Song of Songs.

It was wonderful to chant Lauds (Morning Prayer) and Vespers (Evening Prayer) with other consecrated virgins, and attend daily Mass and Eucharistic Adoration together. There was a deep sense of joy and communion as we shared our vocations stories, ministries and much laughter over meals. We delighted in venturing to the Chapel of the Holy Cross built into the red rocks of Sedona, and the historic Nativitas of the Blessed Virgin Mary Chapel in Flagstaff. Many of us also gazed in awe as we hiked around the Grand Canyon, and a smaller group of us visited the Lowell Observatory one night, breaking into “Salve Regina” before we left. One evening we also had a talent show highlighting gifts from music and art to poetry, a humorous skit, and dancing.

Our episcopal moderator, Bishop Earl A. Boyea, offered the opening Mass and later presented talks on “The Eucharist: Mystical Body, Mystical Voice,” which he developed on the meaning of the parts of the Mass for his diocese in Lansing, Michigan, to help celebrate the National Eucharistic Revival.

I was inspired by his reminders that we need to train our hearts and minds to truly listen and mean what we say. Whether it is in the Creed or Amen, we are called to remember what the gift of our Lord’s Presence in the Holy Eucharist cost. At Holy Communion, Bishop Boyea shared, we recall the marriage aspect – we become one with Jesus and receive “with joy this gift of Christ’s entire self.” Such love requires reciprocity. This is why we worship Jesus at Mass and spend time before His Eucharistic Presence outside of Mass. I was also fortunate to sit at Bishop Boyea’s table at lunch, and he shared beautifully about the consecrated virgin’s call to show our love for Jesus; Jenna Chang spoke about the call to be a spiritual mother; Karen Bussey on how our prayer of the Liturgy of the Hours is “truly the voice of the Bridegroom”;

Our bishop Emeritus of Phoenix, Thomas J. Olmsted’s talk “Listen First to the Voice of the Bridegroom” also fortified my faith. He reflected on the examples of Our Lady and the saints and our call to be witnesses: “signs of God’s tender love.”

Mary showed us the image of the bride from the beginning to the end of Scripture: “The wedding feast of the lamb has come and the bride is prepared to welcome him.” (Revelation 19:7) Speaking of the examples of Saints Damien of Molokai and Thomas More, he stressed the importance of beginning each day in the presence of our Eucharistic Lord. When Saint Damien arrived at the leper colony, he first restored the chapel and placed the Blessed Sacrament in the tabernacle.

“They heard the voice of the bridegroom through the fatherly love of St. Damien,” shared Bishop Olmsted. Our faith must be “something for which I am willing to die.” Like Saint Thomas More, our lives will be a “paradox for the sake of our divine spouse... We point to the Kingdom as the consecrated virgins when we live with hope and joy.”

Although most attendants were from the U.S., a consecrated virgin from Germany also presented on “The Spousal Dimension of the Voice of the Bridegroom in Sacred Scripture and in the Rite of the Consecration of Virgins.”

Maria Luisa Ófele, who was celebrating 20 years as a consecrated virgin, worked with Pope Benedict XVI when he was in the Diocese of Regensburg. She highlighted God’s personal relationship with His people from the Old Testament covenants to the Voice of the Beloved in St. John’s Gospel, stressing our need to spend time in silence to hear God’s voice.

Her talk also included a meditation on the spousal dimension of the Voice of the Bridegroom in the Rite of the Consecration of Virgins, from the Calling of the Candidates and the Homily to the Resolutions, Prayer of Consecration and Presentation of the Ring. Additionally, she explained that when the candidate prostrates herself, it shows her total dependence on God, and when she places her hands in the hands of the Bishop, it testifies that the virgin is to be a sign of the covenant and mystical union with Christ now and in heaven.

Judith Stegman, JCD, President of the United States Association of Consecrated Virgins, who was celebrating 30 years as a consecrated virgin, spoke of the importance of true obedience in the Church in light of canon law, Scripture and tradition.

Clair Halbur, consecrated virgin, choir director, and organizer of the convocation, also gave an interactive talk about chanting.

Several other consecrated virgins spoke on various themes. Magalis Aguiler related consecrated virgins’ call to show our exclusive love for Jesus; Jenna Chang spoke about the call to be a spiritual mother; Karen Bussey on how our prayer of the Liturgy of the Hours is “truly the voice of the Bride herself addressing the Bridegroom”; Marianne Cano on our call to intercessory prayer with the saints; Madeleine Troppe on how we are loved and worthy by God’s grace and choosing; and Francesca Riddick on how the consecrated virgin is mystically espoused to Christ.

At the Grand Canyon, I noticed a group of big horned sheep down below, climbing the rocks, then more about 20 feet away from me. I thought of the passage from the Song of Songs 2:8, “The voice of my beloved! Look, he comes, leaping upon the mountains, bounding over the hills.”

The Voice of the Bridegroom blessed me with many graces and renewed energy to proclaim His merciful love.
Bill to end federal death penalty introduced

By Daniel Payne
Catholic News Agency

Congressional Democrats introduced a bill to abolish the federal death penalty, calling the policy "state-sanctioned murder" and "deeply flawed."

"Specifically, the bill would prohibit the imposition of the death penalty as punishment for any violation of federal law and would require the re-sentencing of those previously sentenced to death row," the release said.

The measure was first introduced by the pair in 2019 after the Trump administration announced the resumption of the federal death penalty. Trump's administration carried out a total of 13 executions.

The legislation is co-sponsored by several dozen representatives and senators and has attracted the support of over 400 organizations, including the Catholic Mobilizing Network.

Virginia transgender policies emphasize parental rights

By Daniel Payne
Catholic News Agency

New education policies issued by the administration of Virginia Gov. Glenn Youngkin this week affirm that parents in the state will enjoy broad oversight of their children while they are enrolled in public schools, with the state settling several key questions related to school policies regarding transgender-identifying students.

The model policies released by the government say education rules "shall be drafted to safeguard parents' rights with respect to their child and to facilitate the exercise of those rights."

Schools “shall respect parents’ values and beliefs,” the policy says, with parents permitted to “make the best decisions with respect to their children,” while schools will be required to “keep parents informed about their children’s well-being.”

The guidance, an update from a version released in September 2022, comes after several years of contentious debate in Virginia and other states over the extent to which education officials can implement transgender ideology within schools.

Transgenderism contends that males and females, including children, should be treated as a member of the opposite sex if they declare themselves to “identify” as such. Many districts and individual schools around the country in recent years have pushed aggressively to make this ideology a normalized part of both curricula and school policies, up to and including hiding a student’s self-declared transgender identity from his or her parents.

Argentine priest is Pope Francis' new personal secretary

(CNA) — Archbishop Jorge Garcia Cuerva of Buenos Aires, Argentina, on July 17 announced that Pope Francis has appointed a priest from the Buenos Aires Archdiocese, Father Daniel Pellizzon, 40, to act as his personal secretary. Pellizzon will replace Father Gonzalo Aemilius in the position. Garcia said Pellizzon will travel to Rome at the beginning of August to begin his new role. The archbishop offered his prayer for the priest as he begins “this new mission entrusted to the service of the Church.” Pellizzon was born Jan. 24, 1983, in Buenos Aires. In 2011 and 2012 he collaborated with Cardinal Jorge Bergoglio — the archbishop at that time — in organizing his personal archives.

Cardinal meets with Biden to discuss work in Ukraine

(CNA) — Italian Cardinal Matteo Zuppi met with President Joe Biden Tuesday evening to discuss the Vatican's humanitarian efforts in war-torn Ukraine. A statement from the White House following the two-and-a-half-hour meeting read: "They … discussed the Holy See's efforts providing humanitarian aid to address the widespread suffering caused by Russia's continuing aggression in Ukraine, as well as the Vatican's advocacy for the return of forcibly deported Ukrainian children."

The Ukrainian government says Russia forcibly deported thousands of Ukrainian children to Russia after the invasion last year. In April, Pope Francis said the Holy See intends to help facilitate the return of Ukrainian children. "It is a question of humanity before it is a question of the spoils of war or a displacement caused by war," the pope said.

Bishops warn against change to definition of brain death

(CNA) — The United States Conference of Catholic Bishops (USCCB) and a key Catholic bioethics group are both warning of a potential rewriting of U.S. law to broaden the definition of brain death, a revision they claim relies on "deficient medical criteria." The USCCB and the National Catholic Bioethics Center said in a joint letter this month that the Uniform Law Commission was moving to revise the definition of whole-brain death without relying on "compelling scientific evidence" to do so. The Uniform Law Commission (ULC) is a nonprofit group based in Chicago that drafts model legislation for U.S. lawmakers. The group says on its website that it "provides states with nonpartisan, well-received, and well-drafted legislation that brings clarity and stability to critical areas of state statutory law." The ULC met last week for its annual meeting. Among the items of debate at the gathering was a slate of revisions to the Uniform Determination of Death Act, a law proposed by the ULC in 1981 and adopted by most states. Among potential revisions is a proposal to replace the brain-death standard of "irreversible cessation of key brain or respiratory functions with one in which permanent "coma" and "loss of brainstem reflexes" could be counted as death. In their letter, the Catholic bishops and the bioethics center argue that the rewrite "would replace the standard of whole brain death with one of partial brain death."

‘The Chosen’ gets waiver to film during strike

By Joe Bukuras
Catholic News Agency

Filming of the fourth season of “The Chosen,” the popular Christian television series about Jesus and his disciples, will continue after a union granted the production an exemption from its strike against major Hollywood studios.

The strike was announced July 13 by the SAG-AFTRA, the union of the Screen Actors Guild and the American Federation of Television and Radio Artists that represents more than 160,000 members such as actors, journalists, and singers.

“The Chosen” initially said on Twitter that it was affected by the strike because it employs actors who are members of the SAG, which, according to Deadline, includes Jonathan Roumie, the actor who plays the role of Christ.

Responding to questions online, the show said that it requested an exemption because it is privately funded. The show said on Twitter Sunday that it had been granted a “waiver” and filming would continue on Monday.

Deadline confirmed that filming continued on Monday and “is due to wrap in two weeks.”

“To be clear: 1. We’ve agreed to all of SAG’s requests and their interim agreement. 2. Season 4 is entirely independent and 100% funded by donations,” the show said in a tweet on Sunday.

“The Chosen” is the first reported series to be granted an exemption from the strike, according to Deadline.

In its original announcement about the pause in filming due to the strike, director Dallas Jenkins said on the show’s Twitter account: “Unfortunately, despite the requested work we did on our end, an exemption for us will not be granted in time to avoid a shutdown. We will do a little filming tomorrow of everything that doesn’t require our cast, and then we’ll wait and hope that either the strike ends (unlikely soon), or that we’re granted an exemption and can resume filming.”

“Yes, it’s upsetting and will cost time and money ... but we bring our 5 loaves & 2 fish. God handles the rest,” Jenkins added.

SAG-AFTRA’s strike is in response to failed negotiations with the Alliance of Motion Picture & Television Producers (AMPTP), which represents major studios such as NBCUniversal, Disney, Netflix, and others.

According to the SAG-AFTRA, inflation and a major shift to streaming media have struck the industry, negatively affecting workers’ compensation.

The AMPTP has “refused to offer a fair agreement that addresses these existential threats,” the SAG-AFTRA said.

On July 16, “The Chosen” began airing on the CW Network, a major broadcasting television station.

Its first three seasons will air there, with the Season Three finale available on Christmas Eve.

Support And Pray For Vocations

QUEST FOR PRIESTS

WOULD YOU PRAY FOR A PRIEST EACH DAY?

PRAYER SUGGESTION

O Jesus, Eternal High Priest, live in (name a priest), act in him, speak in and through him. Think your thoughts in his mind, love through his heart. Give him your own dispositions and feelings. Teach, lead and guide him always. Correct, enlighten and expand his thoughts and behavior. Possess his soul; take over his entire personality and life.

To some priests, like Deacon Kevin Mastellon, the weather can be an obstacle. On one occasion, he recalls, the group of four left the western part of the North Country at around 6:30 a.m. for an anticipated tee time, but the Adult Faith Formation program will be organized for the next year, how the leak in the roof will get fixed and what to do about the problem of requested Mass intentions outpacing the number of Masses. It was a day to relax. It accomplished the goal. Refreshed and renewed, these men of the cloth can get back to the tasks of explaining how reorganization of debt is good in the long run, how the adult faith formation program will be organized for the next year, how the leak in the roof will get fixed and what to do about the problem of requested Mass intentions outpacing the number of Masses.

Thank you for a terrific day. I will learn before next year to keep my head down and slow my swing. All that other stuff will get fixed. Somehow.

Deacon Kevin Mastellon ministers in Watertown. He is the Director of Permanent Deacons for the Diocese of Ogdensburg.
Serving those most in need

The streets are deserted and inaccessible, there is no public transportation or electricity, and water is becoming scarce. War that began on April 15 in Khartoum, the capital of Sudan, between the Sudanese Armed Forces (SAF) and the Rapid Support Forces (RSF) and has spread to many other cities in Sudan. However, little is known about the conflict because of the limited movement of people. The little information available comes from the missionaries who have remained close to the population. Among these are the Daughters of Mary Help of Christians (FMA) who, together with the Salesians, despite the difficulties, continue to serve the poorest and most needy population, giving food and shelter to several hundred people and also caring for the injured.

According to reports, the sisters have “transformed” their primary school in Shajara, 7 km from Khartoum, into a space where children can play during the day and give them shelter at night together with their respective mothers. The sisters opened their classrooms and their residence for the poor. Every day about 80 poor children of different ages, together with their mothers, live in the sisters' complex.

The sisters provide food during the day to all those who are hosted by them and offer breakfast daily to about 300 poor children and people who live around their residence. In addition to the activities with the children, the FMA have also begun an apostolate with the sick and injured. “Every day, between 15 and 20 injured patients come to the sisters' residence for medical help,” they say from the home.

FMA's living in Shajara opened their presence in 1989. There are five sisters and are currently the only representatives of the Catholic Church in the vicinity of the Sudanese capital.

The Salesians in Sudan have two presences in the city of Khartoum - the vocational school and the parish of St. Joseph - and another in the city of El Obeid, 500 kilometres from Khartoum. “All three have been closed due to insecurity and the dangers that lie ahead,” explained a missionary. The Salesians from these communities have left the country, with the exception of the director of the vocational school, who has moved to the FMA residence in Shajara, where he collaborates in the initiatives that are carried out to help the needy.

“Stellar VBS 2023,” the vacation Bible school hosted by the Catholic Community of Burke and Chateaugay, was out of this world! The parish. Adult helpers were Father Medenel Angrand, seminarian Kevin McCullouch, Deacon Brian Dwyer, Monique Dwyer, Dale and Anne Selkirk, Jamie O’Dell, Kristin Carter, Kristin Parmeter, Nichole Gokey, Barbara LaBare, and Hannah Monette. Youth helpers included Angela Dwyer, Ainsley Crawford, Anna Dalton, Luke Dalton, Zoey Carter, Reegan Morin, Paul Dwyer, and Payton Parmeter. The program was also supported by parish prayers and donations.

The Diocese of Ogdensburg Vocation Society (DOVS) recently held a raffle to raise funds to support its mission of promoting vocations to the ordained ministry and consecrated life. Pictured are Phil and Mary Shatraw, both DOVS members, drawing the lucky winners. The winners of the raffle are:

- Eyland Restaurant $100 Certificate - Elizabeth Tarbox from Colton
- Donovan’s Steak and Ale $100 Certificate - M. Coons from Syracuse
- 6 gallon shop-vac - James Regan from Colton
- Basket of wine - Carl and Mary Garrand from Brushton

The Guggenheim staff built a brand new GaGa ball pit this past weekend with the help of alumni staff members Andrew Lauria and Drew Benware. It is an exciting game that have become popular at schools and camps around the country. Week 2 and 3 campers have enjoyed using the pit.
