Pope Francis highlights life of service
By Matthew Santucci
Catholic News Agency

During his Sept. 13 general audience, Pope Francis presented the life of Blessed José Gregorio Hernández Cisneros as an example of the Gospel in action and service to the greater good.

The general audience was the latest installment of the pope’s ongoing series on apostolic zeal, which is an opportunity for the faithful to “meet passionate witnesses to the proclamation of the Gospel,” individuals who embodied “the will and also the inner passion to carry the Gospel forward,” according to the pope.

Wednesday’s catechism focused on the Venezuelan Hernández, the “people’s doctor,” and was the 20th installment in the series, which opened Jan. 11 with the life of the Apostle Matthew.

Hernández was born Oct. 26, 1864, in Trujillo state, Venezuela. Though he wanted to pursue the priesthood, he was unable to due to ill health. Nevertheless, his faith was at the center of his life; he was a daily communicant, had a rich prayer life, and was a Third Order Franciscan layman.

After completing his studies in Caracas, he went to Paris, where he took advanced coursework in bacteriology. Hernández was, the Holy Father said, “a doctor close to the weak.” He was someone who often gave medical assistance to the poor and needy, often without asking for any compensation. Instead of the “wealth of money he preferred that of the Gospel,” the pope remarked. This life of service was predicated upon charity and mercy and underscored by his willingness to listen to the will of God.

The Holy Father said this zeal derived from “a certainty and a strength. The certainty was the grace of God.” Hernández died in 1919 at the age of 54 after being struck by a car on his way to deliver medicine to a sick patient. He died “while carrying out a work of mercy,” Pope Francis noted. Following his death, Hernández went on to gain a massive following in Venezuela and throughout Latin America.

Hernández was the first Venezuelan layperson to be beatified. On the eve of his beatification in 2021, Pope Francis in a video released by the Vatican said: “He is a model of holiness committed to the defense of life, in the challenges of history and, in particular, as a paradigm of service to his neighbor, like a good Samaritan, without excluding anyone. He is a man of universal service.”
We have the best news

When I described it to a friend, I said, “it was like Jesus had a press conference.” It happened at least a couple years ago during Lent. While it was common for me to sign up for a time spot at adoration at St. Peter’s Parish in Massena, I don’t think I was originally scheduled to be there. I was either filling in for someone else or just stopped in to spend time with Jesus.

I noticed it almost immediately after genuflecting and finding a seat. While there were only a handful of us there, three of us were credentialed members of the media. I was there spending time with Jesus along with Bob Beckstead, a longtime reporter for the Courier-Observer in Massena/Watertown Daily Times/NNY360, and Keith Beeman, then a reporter for WWNY TV in Watertown and now a contributor to this newspaper.

I immediately thought of Jesus having a press conference, and it took effort not to laugh out loud during adoration.

While it was a great reminder that God has an awesome sense of humor, it was also one of the most memorable adoration experiences I’ve ever had.

I experienced a profound feeling of oneness. While we have plenty of differences, Bob, Keith and I shared a lot in common. We shared a love of telling stories. We shared a love of the news industry (even though we can point to many flaws within it). We shared our love of the written word. I shared experiences, now fond memories, with both of them at various times in my career.

And there we were, people who love the written word, sharing time with the Word made Flesh, sharing our love of Jesus.

The time “Jesus had a press conference” oddly came up twice in conversations in the last few weeks, so it’s been on my mind and on my heart.

It dawned on me recently that we’re all called to be the media at Jesus’ press conference. If you reduce it to the basics, the media is responsible for telling the who, what, where, when, why and how of an event or happening.

Isn’t that what we’re called to do as Christians?

We’re called to share the what, where, when, why and how of an event or happening. We’re called to share the story of Jesus and the story of our relationships with him. And why wouldn’t we want to share those stories? We have the best news!

Welcome to the press conference.

A good, even extraordinary, disciple

A saint is an ordinary person who does little things extraordinarily well.

Jesus began his ministry by choosing ordinary people as disciples. They were not accomplished scripture scholars, or such. The very first to be called were the three fishermen: Peter, James, John. They were friends of Jesus they had probably knew his teachings and plans. Now Jesus calls them to reach out to others they could easily said that they were not prepared. They were just ordinary people. However, we know now that the influence of Jesus transformed them. They became extraordinary an apostles - a foundation for our church.

We also read in the gospels that one night during his early ministry Jesus spent the night in prayer. The next day, the Lord gathered his disciples and chose 12 to be his apostles. They were to work closely with Jesus to spread the Gospel. In every case they were ordinary followers of the Lord Jesus. With the power of the Lord and the Holy Spirit, they became the extra ordinary foundation of our Catholic Church.

God still calls many to follow Jesus as Christians today. We, Christians, are called to bring faith to others - all of us ordinary Christians. Through baptism, we are called to dedicate our lives, to live well as disciples of the Lord. Through the Holy Eucharist, we receive the support to become extraordinary disciples of Jesus. Our vocation as Catholics is to transfer my world to Jesus, to make what is ordinary extraordinary for Jesus.

Let’s talk about priests. I can tell you my seminary friends and classmates were very ordinary people. Many of us, including myself, had many concerns about our worthiness to be Catholic priests. We were too ordinary. I can tell you I found wisdom and understanding as I meditated on the original apostles, read the lives of the saints and talked to priests, friends and teachers, who showed me that the Lord transformed so many into the kind of extraordinary priest that he needed. Every priest must find the help and power of the Holy Spirit to become transformed by the love of our God and become good, even extraordinary, disciples of the Lord.

The Lord continues to make our Catholic Church truly the people of God, leading all of us to the love, and the following of the Lord Jesus. However, our Catholic Church needs us all to be followers of the Lord Jesus.

Many think of themselves as just being ordinary Catholics.

With the help of the Holy Spirit, we will all find the wisdom and understanding to be good, even extraordinary, disciples of the Lord.

New to Trinity, experienced in Catholic schools

By Keith Benman
Contributing Writer

Trinity Catholic School in Massena has a new principal, but she's not new to the school or Catholic education in the diocese.

Hired in June, new principal Marianne Jadlos has been a teacher at Trinity Catholic for the past four years. Before coming to the Massena elementary school, she was principal for four years at Holy Family, in Malone, and for five years at St. Mary's, in Canton.

"I'm a passionate Catholic school advocate," she said on a recent afternoon at Trinity Catholic. "Children need to learn about God. And parents need schools that will help their children learn about God and the Catholic Church."

Jadlos is taking on the principal's job at Trinity Catholic following the retirement of Joyce Giroux, who was principal for five years.

Trinity Catholic School enrolls 106 students in pre-kindergarten through 6th grade. It is one of seven diocesan Catholic elementary schools in the diocese and one of only two in St. Lawrence County.

Strengthening academics and getting the word out about the school's mission and offerings are Jadlos' top goals.

"I would like to highlight the school so people realize what a treasure it is here in Massena," she said. "I would like people to get excited about the Catholic faith and that starts with the kids."

This year, Trinity Catholic will be celebrating its 40th anniversary as Trinity Catholic. The school was formed in 1983 out of the consolidation of other Catholic schools. There will be a birthday bash October 15th, which will include a Mass at Sacred Heart Church celebrated by Bishop Terry LaValley and a barbecue afterwards. Former faculty and students are being invited. That will include sisters and priests who taught there.

Other events like the annual "Day of Giving" in November and the annual Gala in the spring will also continue. Those two events are key fundraisers for the school.

The biggest challenge for the school remains enrollment, Jadlos said.

"Enrollment is a necessity," she said. "We need children in the school, and we need Catholic parents to put their children in the school."

Having said that, she notes some non-Catholic parents enroll their children in the school and they are always welcome.

Tuition often seems like a barrier for many parents, but Jadlos points out the diocese and other groups administer scholarships which can defray the cost.

Basically, Jadlos says she just wants more people to experience the religious education she and her family have enjoyed.

Jadlos went to first through 12th grades in Catholic schools in the Rochester area. Her husband, Greg, went to St. Mary's school in Potsdam. Two of her children graduated from St. Mary's Potsdam and the other two from St. Mary's Canton.

Her firm belief in Catholic education stems from her own days as a student, particularly in high school.

"I loved those high school years," she said. "I liked the small classes. I liked the teachers. I liked the going to Mass. I told my parents I was very grateful they sent me to Catholic schools."
An ‘Out of this World’ vacation Bible School

By Mary Beth Bracy, consecrated virgin
Contributing Writer

Holy Cross Parish in Plattsburgh hosted a truly heavenly Vacation Bible School from August 7 to the 11 from 9 a.m. to noon. Desiree M. Kirk, director of Religious Education, received a Catholic VBS program book and chose the STELLAR option from Concordia.

“The space theme caught my eye with how many inventions and wonderful stories they included,” she said.

Several teachers helped make VBS a success, including Sister Jackie Selkappan, A Sister of the Cross of Chavanod, Melita Mercier, and Brenda Smith. The program also had six team leaders from area high schools volunteer.

“We had a wonderful crew of helpers and leaders from all over the area, including Seton students from Peru, Chazy, and Morrisonville areas,” she said. “Students and parents were so excited to come daily that they begged for a second week and asked if we could even run the same VBS for adults.”

The daily program was filled with activities and adventures, Kirk recounted.

“We had Bible Adventures, Galaxy Snacks, Sing and Blast Off, and morning skits with our own Mickey Wey, who was a lost astronaut on the moon with a passion for Twinkies. He helped us ‘Shine Jesus’ Light,’ which was our daily theme. The music, movies, and crafts really inspired the kids into a galactic adventure that led to an out of this world journey. Our Kid Vid Cinema allowed the six groups of students to learn how real life kids ‘shined Jesus’ light’ in their lives when things were tough. They even learned about the Ukraine. The outdoor games brought laughter, and the highlights from our Imagination Station were not to be topped. Kids learned about the moon, launched rockets, made comets, and more.”

Students were not only able to learn about the relationship between faith and science but experience it firsthand.

“Our favorite moment was when we were blessed with real astronaut outfits from one of our parishioners who shared them with us and allowed the children to get dressed up in them,” Kirk said. “It was amazing; even the teen leaders had a blast.”

The priests serving in and around the parish joined in the fun, too.

“Our priests came and hung out to enjoy snack time. It was an amazing blessing this year. I am so grateful for all the hard work and dedication we had from the Station Leaders,” she added.

Kirk explained how VBS was setup.

“Each station connected the two elements of faith and space,” she said. “There was a theme each day and it was repeated throughout the areas. The children actually got to participate in making a video with action pictures to help re-tell the story in their own way. It was the highlight of the program. Each group was asked to do actions – for example of the first day how the star shined Jesus’ light over Bethlehem at the birth of Jesus so all could see. So, the kids were stars and parts of the nativity story to show how we shine Jesus’ light.”

“Children ... benefited from several faith and life lessons during the week as well. ‘Day one we learned about when life feels dark... ‘Shine Jesus’ light,’” Kirk said. “So was the star on the blessed birth of Jesus,” Kirk elaborated. “In the Imagination Station, we know that the star of Bethlehem shined and sparked in the night sky for all to see. We did experiments with water and light and make sparkling stars shine in the night like that. In the Bible Adventures they learned the story from the point of view of the animals and how to find the light in their lives.”

“In KidVid we saw real stories by kids their age who encountered dark and bad things (in this case a child who caught Covid and the isolation, what it made him feel like) and how he was able to shine Jesus’ light,” she described. “Games were able to reinforce the story of the nativity. The kids learned songs about the light of God. And we did crafts about the star being bright still in our church and what a Paschal Candle is and means. The snack was about the Galaxy and fun things like star bars. This is how we did each day.”

The vacation program also included lots of hands-on activities.

“The other themes were... When people don’t get along: Shine Jesus’ light. Our astronaut Mickey Wey learned how to get along with people who are mean, Kirk explained. “The students learned about the story of Zacchaeus. We did cosmic races – more science and more games and videos.”

Additional highlights reflected the mysteries of our faith and the universe as well.

“When good things happen: Shine Jesus’ light. We learned about how to be thankful for the good in our lives – how God shines his light in us, (like in) the story of Jesus in Jerusalem for Palm Sunday,” Kirk said. “(Participants) built live rockets that shine light to the sky.”

Children explored answers to important questions, Kirk noted. “When people are sad: Shine Jesus’ light. We learned about how the resurrection of Jesus impacted Mary and all of us. Where was the light that day how do we find it?”

On the last day the children learned how to reach out to others. “When people need help: Shine Jesus’ light. We learned how Philip taught the Ethiopians how to understand Jesus’ word – how to carry into the world all we have learned and how to keep shining Jesus’ light in our everyday lives.”

The program was very warmly received. “For the first time we had a lot of requests from the parents to do a grown up version of the same VBS for them,” Kirk said. “They were loving so much all the different things the kids came home with and all the fun they had with space suits from NASA and all the joy they saw in their kids. Even the group leaders were having such a great time. The hours passed quickly, and this seems to be a very impactful program. I am so proud of all who participated and made this VBS magical. We are a blessed parish. We hope to keep the fire going as we enter our Faith formation program.”
Reminder: All must register for Eucharistic Congress

Thousands of Catholics from across the state will gather at the Shrine of Our Lady of Martyrs in Auriesville, NY on the weekend of October 20-22 for the New York State Eucharistic Congress. This congress, organized by the eight dioceses in New York, is part of the three-year Eucharistic Revival sponsored by the bishops of the United States.

The Congress will feature Mass, talks in both English and Spanish by nationally known Catholic speakers, music, Eucharistic Adoration, and opportunities for fellowship and socializing. It will begin at 6 p.m. on Oct. 20 and conclude at noon on Oct. 22. Attendance at the Congress is free, but registration is required at www.nyseucharisticcongress.org.

Bishop Edward Scharfenberger, Bishop of the Diocese of Albany where the Shrine of Our Lady of Martyrs is located, said, “Think of the Eucharistic Congress as a personal invitation from the Holy Spirit to a mini-retreat, a springboard for your own reflection on the Eucharistic presence of Jesus in your life and in His mystical body, the Church, of which you are a beloved member.”

Cardinal Timothy Dolan, Archbishop of New York, said “Our Lord loves us so much that He chooses to remain with us in the Holy Eucharist. I pray that through this Eucharistic Congress, many will come to better know, love, and serve Him, by strengthening our love and faith in this wonderful gift of His real presence.”

Among the featured speakers at the Congress will be Bishop Joseph Espaillat, auxiliary bishop of the Archdiocese of New York, Patrick Kelly, Supreme Knight of the Knights of Columbus, famed youth minister Mari Pablo, and Sirius XM radio host Katie Prejean McGrady. A full list of speakers and topics can be found at www.nyseucharisticcongress.org/speakers.

The two highpoints of the Congress promise to be the celebration of Mass on Saturday, October 21 at 11 a.m. by Bishop Terry LaValley of the Diocese of Ogdensburg, and on Sunday, October 22, at 11:00 a.m. by Bishop Scharfenberger of Albany, which will mark the end of the Congress.

Environmental Stewardship

The time is now. Celebrate!

As the North Country transitions from summer into autumn, venture outside and observe and embrace many of the daily miracles of nature that are present all around us. This includes listening to the sound of crickets, the squawking of the blue jay, savoring the subtle fragrances unique to this time of year, especially when the air is calm and damp, can lift the soul. Also, taking delight in the variety of colors of our deciduous trees and in the flowers that blossom around the first frost is a part of this season of creation celebration.

St. Francis loved to spend time in nature. He occasionally preached about the Creator’s love for all forms of life. It was said by some of his companions that he exhibited a radiant aura when immersed in nature, and the plants and animals nearby could sense his love for them. Many mystics familiar with St. Francis have noted that he became a conduit for Divine light and love, as can anyone that turns himself completely over to the will of the Creator and basks in the beauty of the natural world.

Society’s actions over the past century and a half have injured the land, impacted the existence of countless forms of life and damaged the naturally established patterns of weather worldwide. Just as if a close friend or relative were sick or injured, we would try to visit them, spend time with them. In a similar way, we must try to visit nature and, like St. Francis, attempt to radiate as deep a feeling of compassion, peace and love toward everything there. It is said that animals and plants can sense when there is nothing to fear. You might be surprised at how some creatures respond to a person in such a tranquil, open-hearted state of prayerful bliss. What you need to know about Synod on Synodality

By Courtney Mares
Catholic News Agency

The first Vatican assembly for the global Synod on Synodality will kick off in October, bringing together clerics and laity alike for nearly one month of discussions. Here is what you need to know:

What is the Synod on Synodality?

The Synod on Synodality, initiated by Pope Francis in October 2021, is a multiyear, worldwide undertaking during which Catholics were asked to submit feedback to their local dioceses on the question “What steps does the Spirit invite us to take in order to grow in our ‘journeying together’?”

The Catholic Church’s massive synodal process has already undergone diocesan, national, and continental stages. It will culminate in two global assemblies at the Vatican. The first will take place Oct. 4–28 and the second in October 2024 to advise the pope on the topic “For a Synodal Church: Communion, Participation, Mission.”

What does synodality mean?

Synodality was defined by the Congregation for the Doctrine of the Faith’s International Theological Commission in 2018 as “the action of the Spirit in the communion of the Body of Christ and in the missionary journey of the people of God.”

The 2021 synod preparatory document described synodality as “the form, the style, and the structure of the Church.”

The latest document published by the Vatican adds that synodality can also be understood as something that “does not derive from the enunciation of a principle, a theory, or a formula but develops from a readiness to enter into a dynamic of constructive, respectful, and prayerful speaking, listening, and dialogue.”

“At the root of this process is the acceptance, both personal and communal, of something that is both a gift and a challenge: to be a Church of sisters and brothers in Christ who listen to one another and who, in so doing, are gradually transformed by the Spirit,” it says.

Pope Francis has said that he envisions the Synod on Synodality as “a journey in accordance with the Spirit, not a parliament for demanding rights and claiming needs in accordance with the agenda of the world, nor an occasion for following wherever the wind is blowing, but the opportunity to be docile to the breath of the Holy Spirit.”

What are the questions that the Synod on Synodality will try to answer?

There are three overarching questions for the upcoming synod assembly as defined by the 2023 synod assembly’s guiding document called the Instrumentum Laboris:

How can we be more fully a sign and instrument of union with God and of the unity of all humanity?

How can we better share gifts and tasks in the service of the Gospel?

What processes, structures, and institutions are needed in a missionary synodal Church?

The main objective of the first session in October will be to design a plan of study in a “synodal style” and to indicate who will be involved in those discussions, according to the Instrumentum Laboris. Discernment will be “completed” in the 2024 session of the synod.

What are some of the topics that could be addressed in the synod assembly?

The Instrumentum Laboris document guiding the discussions at the October synod assembly suggests discernment on questions regarding some hot-button topics, including women deacons, priestly celibacy, and LGBTQ outreach.

The document also highlights a desire for new institutional bodies to allow for greater participation in decision-making by the “people of God.” One of the proposed questions for discernment for the synod of bishops asks: “What can we learn about the exercise of authority and responsibility from other Churches and ecclesial communities?”

How does the Synod on Synodality differ from past synods of bishops?

A synod is a meeting of bishops gathered to discuss a topic of theological or pastoral significance in order to prepare a document of advice or counsel to the pope.

For the first time, the Synod of Bishops in 2023 will include voting dele

Mother Teresa is well known for her love for all people - the poor, the destitute, and the downtrodden. She was lauded for her home for the sick and dying as well as her care for orphans. The order she founded, “The Missionaries of Charity,” was created with the mission to love and care for those persons nobody was prepared or willing to look after.

Mother Teresa’s life was a testament to her belief that life – all life from conception to death – is worth preserving and treating with dignity.

A new film, “Mother Teresa & Me,” addresses Mother Teresa’s heart for others through the eyes of Kavita, a young Englishwoman with Indian roots who, when faced with an unplanned and unwanted pregnancy, flees to Cuttack and is inspired by Mother Teresa’s legacy of love for all.

In theaters nationwide for one night only, October 5, the film has already been acclaimed internationally, received the “Best Film Award” at the Mirabile Dictu International Film Festival in Rome, and promises to inspire audiences across the country.

Locally, the film is scheduled to show at Regal Salmon Run Mall in Watertown at 7 p.m. on October 5. “Mother Teresa’s compassion for the less fortunate made a lasting impact on the world,” said Jacqueline Fritschi-Cornaz, who plays Mother Teresa in the film. “Her heart for the ‘unwanted’ drove her to care for those whom society had discarded and abandoned. Mother Teresa taught the world that there is no such thing as an unwanted person – no matter the circumstance, people deserve dignity, care and respect. ‘Mother Teresa & Me’ is a look into her struggles and sacrifices for those less fortunate and how her legacy still impacts humanity today.”

Directed by Kamal Musale – known for films such as “Curry Western” and “Millions Can Walk” – the film features actresses Banita Sandhu (Kavita), Jacqueline Fritschi-Cornaz (Mother Teresa) and Deepti Naval (Deepali), and was inspired by Fritschi-Cornaz’s trip to India and her experience interacting with the poor.

Soon after, visionaries Richard Fritschi and Thierry Cagianut founded The Zariya Foundation to finance the making of this feature film based on the vision and messages of Mother Teresa.

The foundation aims to inspire audiences worldwide with positive values such as compassion, kindness, respect and love.

“Mother Teresa & Me” is unique as it is entirely financed with donations, and the film’s profits will be donated to charitable institutions and foundations that work for the destitute, the sick, the disabled and the abandoned children, supporting them in their education and health care.

How difficult it is to understand today’s Gospel! Any self-respecting union would be up in arms at the arbitrary treatment the landowner gave to his workers. “Unfair,” we cry at the first hearing. Then, as we simmer down and think, we have to admit that the landowner has a point in his defense. It’s his money, and he can do what he wants with it. Actually, the grumbling of those who had worked a full day was their problem. They were envious, and envy is a very human vice. Since it’s a parable told by Jesus, the landowner is obviously God, and God always wins. “My thoughts are not your thoughts, nor are your ways my ways” says the Lord. It’s all right there in today’s first reading from Isaiah.

Now we really have to face the lesson of the day: if my ways of thinking and judging are truly far from the Lord’s way, then I must have some adjusting to do! Perhaps I need to work harder in the areas of forgiveness, mercy and generosity, to mention a few.

St. Paul urges the Philippians today to conduct themselves in a way that is “worthy of the gospel of Christ.” If I’m honest, I have to admit that I look for apologies more than I give them out myself. And I use the excuse that I’m the injured party, so why should I go first? That leads me to harbor grudges, to make mountains out of molehills, and so extend the hurt into months and years, when I could end the whole thing quickly by reconciling immediately. How sad to see a son or a daughter keep their distance from a dying parent, even refusing to attend the funeral! Now, maybe that’s an extreme example, but... how many times have I waited to reconcile until it was too late? The pain and stress on both parties is so unnecessary. Both are the losers. To forgive is to be free, and to free the other person as well. Once we have reconciled with a friend who has offended us or who we have offended, we open the way to form a new and closer relationship. And that could give us joy for years... instead of prolonged stress and unhappiness.

To think as God thinks requires openness and a broad vision, free of self-pity and selfish brooding. It takes a habit of gratitude. It means sitting down and reflecting, “What would God think and do in this situation?” and then, to think and do likewise.

There is a misconception about deacons in the Catholic Church I would like to illuminate and debunk.

Regular readers of this column are probably reacting to that opening with, “Uhh oh, somebody riled Kevin up. Well, honestly, ‘yes.’ But I am calm now and can give this misunderstanding a proper explanation.

The statement, made innocently, was “Our priests are so busy, and I thought deacons do not have as much to do so they could help us out.” I have no quarrel with the first part of the comment. Our priests are busy. It is a 24-7 job. Every man knew that going in, but the job has become busier as their numbers diminish and the responsibility for multiple churches increases. Let’s pray for them and pray more men respond to God’s call to the ministerial priesthood.

It was the second part of the comment, the assertion that deacons “do not have much to do” that kind of blew my lid. Let me add, it is a comment, perhaps not said quite as directly, that has been uttered before. I get more than a little red in the face each time I hear the fallacy.

Since most folks only see the deacon assisting at a weekend Mass, the assumption is that’s what a deacon does. Period. The assumption is wrong.

Deacons are members of the clergy along with priests and bishops. The deacon’s ministry has three dimensions: liturgy, word, and service. At the Liturgy, he assists the bishop and priests. At the Mass, the deacon proclaims the Gospel, may be invited to preach the homily, and assists at the altar. That is the liturgy and word dimension.

It is the service dimension that is “behind the scenes.” Deacons often minister in hospitals, nursing homes and to the homebound. They often preside at baptisms, commitment services and an occasional wedding. They may serve on parish committees at the request of the pastor.

The deacon serves the Church without compensation. He is often employed full time outside the church, but some have paid jobs for the diocese or a parish. In those cases, they are an employee of the diocese or parish, but their work as a deacon is not compensated.

Ninety-five percent of the deacons in this diocese are married and have children, and in many cases, grandchil dren. Their family responsibilities can, and do, sometimes conflict with deacon responsibilities.

They have homes to take care of too in addition to their volunteer work.

Deacons are not looking for things to do but they willingly and happily serve the church and parishes they love.

Deacon Kevin Mastellon ministers in Watertown.

He is the Director of Permanent Deacons for the Diocese of Ogdensburg.

New seminarians in Beijing

The formation of new and “passionate workers” for the proclamation of the Gospel, at the service of the future of the Church, which in China continues to walk in the faith of the Apostles, is the mission of the seminaries in mainland China, who are currently celebrating the beginning of the new academic year 2023-24 in various ways.

This year, the seminary, located in the Marian Shrine of Our Lady of Sheshan, welcomed 16 new seminarians and will also offer courses for lay people. In his address, Bishop Joseph Shen Bin of Shanghai encouraged the students and teachers of the seminary, which he called the “window of the diocese,” to “work together to improve teaching and formation activities” so that “all students can share the beautiful tradition of love for the homeland and for the Catholic Church in Shanghai in their studies and in their future life, deepening the excellent traditional Chinese culture and put down firm roots in the fertile soil of faith, so that they will experience three important changes: from aspiring students to scholars, from companionship, encouragement, setting with a role models, and friends to shepherds.”

Bishop Joseph Li Shan of Beijing gave the opening address and called for “making the National Seminary the best and highest school of Catholicism in China.” The new rector of the Seminary, Bishop Joseph Guo Jincai of Chengde, emphasized that prayer, care for spiritual life and renewal of administration are the most important points to promote vocations and make the seminary a welcoming home. As a concrete gesture of welcome, the National Seminary offered three days of hospitality to the parents of the new seminarians so they could witness this important new beginning for their sons.

Bishop Anthony Dang Mingyan of Xi’an, capital of Shaanxi Province, and rector of the Shaanxi Philosophical Theological Seminary, presided over the opening of the new academic year on September 7th. In the words of St. Paul, the bishop encouraged the seminarians: “For you should live a life worthy of the Lord and pleasing to him in everything. You shall bear fruit in every kind of good work and grow in the knowledge of God. May he give you much strength in the power of his glory... (cf. Col 1:9-14).”

The bishop personally welcomed the new students by calling them individually by name and naming them as role models to follow the patron saint of the Seminary, Saint Therese of Lisieux, and the great Lazarist missionary Father Frédéric Vincent Lebbe.

What is a Foster Grandparent?

Foster Grandparents are role models, mentors, and friends to children with exceptional needs. The program provides a way for volunteers age 55 and over to stay active by serving children in need of basic support, development of basic learning skills, friendship, companionship, encouragement, individual attention, and unhurried help. The program currently has 40 volunteers and serves more than 100 kids per year.

The Foster Grandparent Program is hosted by the Catholic Charities of the Diocese of Ogdensburg and supported by AmeriCorps Seniors, a federally funded agency responsible for building volunteer based programs for over 50 years and counting.

Am I Qualified to be a Foster Grandparent?

All you need to join is the ability to give the kind of comfort and love that sets a child on the path toward a successful future. If you’re 55 or older and want to share your experience and compassion, you have what it takes to be a Foster Grandparent.

You’ll also receive a small bi-weekly, non-taxable stipend that cannot be held against any current benefits you may already have as well as paid mileage for your travel. Additionally, you receive paid holidays, vacations, sick and personal leave.

Synod on Synodality

gates who are not bishops. Nearly a third of the 364 voting delegates were chosen directly by the pope, including laypeople, priests, consecrated women, and deacons. Fifty-four voting members are women.

The October assembly will be held in the Paul VI Hall, instead of the Vatican's New Synod Hall, with delegates sitting at round tables of about 10 people each. The latter part of the October gathering will focus on deciding the Church's next steps and "the necessary in-depth theological and canonical studies in preparation" for a second assembly in October 2024.

What other events are happening leading up to the October Vatican assembly?

The 2023 Synod on Synodality assembly at the Vatican will begin with a three-day retreat for the Catholic bishops and participants Oct. 1-3 led by Dominican Father Timothy Radcliffe, who has drawn criticism from some for his statements on homosexuality.

Pope Francis has also announced an ecumenical prayer vigil will take place in St. Peter's Square as part of the Synod on Synodality on Sept. 30. The prayer vigil, organized by the Taizé Community, will entrust to God the work of the October synod assembly.

Who has participated in the Synod on Synodality?

The General Secretariat of the Synod of Bishops has reported that the initial diocesan listening phase concluded with the participation of 112 out of 114 of the world’s Catholic bishops’ conferences.

According to a report from the U.S. bishops’ conference, about 700,000 people participated in the diocesan phase of the synod in the U.S. out of 66.8 million Catholics in the country, or about 1%.

Who are the key organizers of the Synod on Synodality?

Cardinal Jean-Claude Hollerich, the 64-year-old archbishop of Luxembourg, is one of the leading organizers of the ongoing Synod on Synodality as the relator general. The Jesuit was recently added to Pope Francis' council of cardinal advisers. Hollerich said in an interview in March that he believes that a future pope could allow women priests and that he finds "the part of the teaching regarding homosexuality ‘intrinsically disordered’ a bit dubious."

Cardinal Mario Grech, the secretary general for the Synod of Bishops, is the former bishop of Gozo, Malta. He was one of two authors of the Maltese bishops’ controversial pastoral guidelines on Amoris Laetitia, which stated that divorced and remarried Catholics, in certain cases and after “honest discernment,” could receive Communion. Last year, Grech decried the public criticism of the German “Synodal Way” as “denunciation.”

Is there a prayer for the Synod on Synodality?

The vade mecum for the synod published the following “Prayer for the Synod on Synodality”:

"We stand before you, Holy Spirit, as we gather together in your name. With you alone to guide us, make yourself at home in our hearts; teach us the way we must go and how we are to pursue it. We are weak and sinful; do not let us promote disorder. Do not let ignorance lead us down the wrong path nor partiality influence our actions. Let us find in you our unity so that we may journey together to eternal life and not stray from the way of truth and what is right. All this we ask of you, who are at work in every place and time, in the communion of the Father and the Son, forever and ever. Amen."
